FOREWORD

Any student who makes an exhaustive study of a subject, whether physical, spiritual or historical, and fails to share with his fellow man the conclusions arrived at as a result of the special knowledge thus acquired, has wasted his time and effort. Here then, in this volume, are the facts I have found after 25 years research into the history of my family, and my interpretations of those facts. The facts will support themselves; for my interpretations, I ask the reader's charity.

Some may want to know my reasons for using the spelling 'DeArmond' in the title of this work. I have employed it, not because it is any more correct than other spellings in use, but because it is by far the most prevalent spelling. One variation is as correct as another since they are all corruptions of a distinguished name. It is not important how we spell our name, but it is of concern to all of us how we carry it.

Some families and many individuals are sketchily treated herein, not from choice or indifference but for the reason that sufficient knowledge of them to properly present their history was not available to me. Although there are many pages of this account, there is more history of the family omitted than included. This history is not complete—no history ever is.

I have derived many years enjoyment from this work. I hope those who use it will also receive pleasure from it, and add to the record I have started.

INTRODUCTION

The d'Armand family, whose history appears in these pages under many spellings, arose in Dauphiné during the Dark Ages and the era of feudalism. Their remote ancestry, as far as we know, was the same as that of the early inhabitants of Southern France. They did not make their appearance in history until about 1400 but undoubtedly the family had been established there for generations before. The earliest records are scanty, and indicate at first an insecure nobility which was soon lost but ultimately regained, and afterwards enjoyed without interruption until the days of the French Revolution when all legal claims to nobility were abolished. However, the family still exists in various parts of France and in its colonial possessions, zealously cherishing its honored name and designation. In the sixteenth century, the family divided on religious beliefs, and the Protestant members eventually established themselves in Switzerland, The British Isles, Canada, and the United States.

Protestantism came into France about 1520, and was quickly embraced by large numbers of the nobility and learned classes. As the religion increased in popularity and strength among the nobility and portions of the ruling class of France, it assumed a political aspect. The followers at first enjoyed the protection of the crown, but as their strength threatened the stability of the Catholic ruling party, intrigues developed and the succeeding monarchs of France found themselves first on one side of the conflict and again on the other, and frequently playing one hand against the other. Persecution sprang up which, through religious fanaticism, knew no restraint, and the atrocities committed because of religious bigotry ran the gamut of imagination and cruelty. So fantastic were some of the excessive forms of this persecution that simple death represented a mild penalty for Protestant adherence.

The country experienced eight civil wars in less than one hundred years, and at one period the Huguenots achieved a measure of relief through the passage of the Edict of Nantes, granting freedom of religious worship. However, the Peace of Alais, June 27, 1629, put an end to the civil wars in France and destroyed the Huguenots as a political party. Repression of the sect gradually increased in severity and persecution, and after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes was signed by Louis XIV on October 18, 1685, its adherents found a choice of accepting the Catholic faith or extermination. Licentious soldiery was turned loose in their communities who destroyed their churches, homes, and in some cases, killed their ministers. Indeed, history records an appalling number of deaths from flogging, burning, beheading and hanging.

The Reformed Religion being centered in southeastern France, it was early embraced by members of the d'Armand family, Claude (KG V, France), being the first recorded as an adherent. Stapleton in his MEMORIALS TO THE HUGUENOTS mentions the death of Marie deArmand, who was flayed alive; David, who was compelled to lay his head on a block when a soldier crushed it with a hammer; his brother, Paul, was also killed. How many members of the family fled from France during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, we will never know. Actual records of the family show that after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, all the Huguenot members of the family fled to Geneva.

From this point on, the record is obscured, both by the confusion of the times and by intent of the refugees. History tells us that the Huguenot refugees found their way from Switzerland through Germany and Holland into England and Scotland. The Protestant nations were inflamed by stories of the atrocities visited upon these unfortunate people and welcomed them with open arms and facilitated their passage beyond their borders when their own resources became overtaxed by the great numbers which continued to arrive. This hegira of the nobility and intelligentsia of France lost to the nation upwards of a million of the finest brains and artisans of the country.

In 1689, William of Orange found his war against the King of France being opposed by the Irish Catholics and sent a considerable body of troops to Ireland under the command of the Duke de Schomberg, who landed at Bangor with about 15,000 men. The following year, William came himself to Ireland to conduct the campaign and landed at Carrickfergus on June 14, 1690, where he immediately joined de Schomberg. On July 1st, William's army advanced against the Irish. The battle waged hotly and William's troops were driven back temporarily but rallied at the cry of Schomberg, "Voilà vos persecuteurs!" and drove the Irish back and the Battle was secured. de Schomberg was killed as was the leader of the Huguenot troops. There were about 2200 Huguenot men contained in three regiments and about 700 officers scattered among the other battalions of William's army. In gratitude for the zealous and effective support of these men and officers and conscious of their great persecution, he invited them to make their homes in his new dominions. At his command, many of these Huguenots were awarded land in North Ireland for their services.

The identity or dates of arrival of the first members of the d'Armand family to reach British shores is not known but François, at least, was in England in 1700, according to the Baptism Records of the French Church, Threadneedle Street, London, and his brothers soon after, according to the same records. Apparently, they were in England for awhile but ultimately Louis and François availed themselves of William IV's offer of 'denication' in North Ireland, and subscribed to the Oath Rolls for such denication, and secured land and homes there. Philippe was living in England as late as 1714, and his son, Henry, was born in England in 1726, indicating that he may have remained there.

At first, they seem to have abandoned all claim to the distinction and nobility of their family since they rejected use of the noble prefix when being married or having their children baptized, but later records indicate that they reverted to the use of the prefix which remains a part of the name today. The family designation they seem to have abandoned completely.

Those who settled in North Ireland soon ran into phonetic difficulties, as did their hosts. Several corruptions of the name occurred and the spelling soon resembled more closely older Irish names than the original French form. We find 'Diermond', 'Deyermont', 'Dermond', and even 'DeyArmon'. Those of the family who remained in England seem to have preserved more closely the French spelling, for James (Line A, America) spelled his name 'd'Armond' when he signed his will in 1748, and his brother's name appeared in early Pennsylvania records as 'Henry D'Armond'.

None of the original refugee members of the family ever reached America. It is doubtful if such immigration occurred to or appealed to them. The American colonies in those early days were primitive settlements and offered little inducement to people from the higher walk of life who had been accustomed to the comforts and advantages of European civilization. They apparently lived out their lives in England, Scotland and Ireland. The next generation, however, not accustomed to the high standard of living enjoyed by their parents during their earlier years, heard of the new colonization plan for Pennsylvania, and a very few of the second generation immigrated there. James (Line A, America) was the first to come to Pennsylvania, about 1735, and his brother, Henry (Line B, America), before 1748. During the 1750's and 1760's, the immigration from Scotland and Ireland increased, the immigrants being, apparently, of the third refugee generation. By 1800, there were perhaps twenty families established in America, two being in Nova Scotia, and the remainder in the United States.

American phonetics began to exert its influence on the name almost immediately, and after several variants were tried in an effort to approximate the sound of the queer French name, a compromise seems to have been reached by most of the families in the United States, even though they were widely separated and had little or no intercommunication. By 1800, the name was being spelled 'Dearmond', and later, 'De-Armond'. There is full evidence, however, that all these families were thoroughly conscious of their noble French origin, and a confused awareness that their name was not being spelled correctly. On special occasions, members of succeeding generations would revert to an approximation of the French spelling, and 'D'Armond' appears frequently, even up to the present day.

From Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania, these early families sent out their sons as pioneers into the new regions being wrested from the Indians and wilderness, as will be seen from the following individual biographical sketches. The families now inhabit every state in the union. These records of them are far from complete but offer a basic pattern wherein every living member of the family can find his forebears, either through use of the general index, or by additional research

d'ARMAND de CHATEAUVIEUX

This noble family, of great antiquity, had its origins very early in Dauphiné, long before that duchy became a part of France. The family is first recorded simply as 'd'Armand', but as the descendants increased in wealth, honor and distinction, the various branches acquired a definitive designation. From the original stem come the families, d'Armand de Châteauevieux, Armand de Forest de Blaçons, Armand de la Garcinière, and Armand de Mison. The Châteauevieux branch appears to be the only one which employed the noble prefix before the family name.

The first name found is that of Pierre d'Armand, as a nobleman in 1400, whose recorded sons were Raimond and Antoine. While the direct line appears to have maintained its nobility, some of the descendants appear to have lost it, and we find a later Pierre recovering his nobility in October, 1591, being verified at Grenoble in 1592, with a new arms: d'or au chevron de gueules au chef d'azur chargé d'une couronne fermée d'or.

From Raimond, son of the first Pierre, the line descends through Arnolphe to Guillaume, whose son Claude added to his name, Châteauevieux, a seigniary near Tallard. Claude became an adherent of the Reformed Religion. His children appear to have followed their father's faith, but only the children of his son, André, appear to have persisted in the Huguenot religion. Guillaume's descendants reverted to the Catholic faith. There were, undoubtedly, other defections from the state religion which have not been recorded, and we must accept the fact that even those existing records of the Protestant families are far from complete since they were willingly neglected by the historians.

At first, the Protestant members of the family appear to have enjoyed religious freedom but after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, they eventually came under the reign of terror and were forced to flee. So far as we know, they all refuged in the Republic of Geneva, some of them living out their lives there, and others moving on to other countries. Georges (KG VII), France, died the year following his flight to Geneva, and the only son recorded, André, remained in Switzerland, we must presume, in the absence of any information to the contrary. How many children Georges actually sired is not recorded.

CLAUDE d'ARMAND de CHATEAUVIEUX (1542-1602)

Claude d'Armand, lord of Châteauevieux, was born in 1542, and joined to his name that of Châteauevieux, a seigniary near Tallard (Hautes-Alpes, district of Gap). His descendants have always borne the name.²

The marriage contract of Noble Claude Armand, lord of Châteauevieux, son of noble Guillaume Armand of Mison, in the diocese of Gap, seigniary of Sisteron, assisted by noble Michel Armand, his brother, lord of Laval, was granted April 2, 1582, with Demoiselle Jeanne Eyssautier, daughter of the deceased Sir Sauvaire Eyssautier, in his life burgess of Sisteron, and of Demoiselle Caterine Laidet, his widow; assisted by Demoiselle Jeanne Garrette, her maternal grandmother, Master Michel Eyssautier, her paternal uncle, Doctor of Law, Royal Judge of Sisteron; and nobleman Baltazar Laidet, her maternal uncle, consul of the said town of Sisteron. The dower was 240 écus . . . The contract was passed at Sisteron, by Simon Robert, notary.³

On November 27, 1600, was executed the will of noble Claude Armand, lord of Châteauevieux, lieutenant-judge of Mison; at Mison, by which he wished his body to be buried at the place where he would be living, in the cemetery of those of the Reformed Religion. He gave to André and Guillaume, the sons of himself and of Demoiselle Jeanne Eyssautier, his wife, the sum of 500 écus, payable when they reached the age of 20 or 25 years, and with the agreement of Michel Armand, his brother, lord of Laval, and of Master Sébastien Castani, his brother-in-law, notary at Sisteron. He gave and bequeathed to Olimpe and Madelène Armand, the daughters of himself and of his said wife, the sum of 300 écus . . . He instituted his wife, Jeanne Eyssautier, as his residuary legatee, to whom he successively substituted his children, male and female, and the said sire of Laval, his brother. The will was passed in the house of noble Gaspard Perrinet, lord of Bersac. He died in 1602 at Mison en Provence.³

BRITISH ISLES

THE FAMILY IN EXILE

The records of the members of the d'Armand family who left France and Geneva for the British Isles are so scanty as to be almost non-existent, and in fact, none have been found prior to 1700. This lack of information does not preclude the possibility that some members of the family arrived, perhaps, in Scotland and England before the eighteenth century. This being a history, we cannot assume events, and so must content ourselves with admitting the possibility of settlers in Scotland and perhaps England before 1700.

We do have a record of Louis, Philippe, and François, in England subsequent to 1700. Their later movements are not recorded, and the Irish records consulted are silent between 1700 and 1740 as to this family. By that date, the name had become corrupted, at least in the official records preserved for our examination, and several variations were being used. By 1735, emigration to the American colonies had set in, which steadily increased until 1800. A comparison of Irish records for the period 1740-1800 and those for the same period in America, have produced a skeleton family outline in North Ireland which can be used as a basis for further research.

As for those members of the family who remained in Scotland or England, no records have been found save those of the French Church, London, which cease in 1714.

RG I ESPERIT ARMAND of Ventecol, Dauphine, France

Espérit Armand, perhaps a younger son of Georges d'Armand de Châteauevieux (KG VII, France) and Marie Chevalier, was born about 1655, at Ventecol, Dauphiné, France. After the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, by which further freedom for religious worship was denied to those of the Reformed Religion in France, his father took refuge at Geneva, where he died in 1686. No doubt, Espérit followed his parents into exile, taking his own family with him.

Whether he remained at Geneva or accompanied his sons on their further flight to Scotland and England is not known. His name and that of his wife were recorded at the marriage of his son, Philippe, at the French Church, London, on August 29, 1708.¹

His wife was Lucrece Méfrède.¹

Louis Armand, son of Espérit Armand and Lucrece Méfrède, was born about 1680, probably in Dauphiné, France, and carried by his parents to Geneva after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. He and his brothers found their way to Scotland or England, apparently after they reached manhood.

He served as a captain in the Huguenot forces under William of Orange during the subjugation of Ireland. For this service he was pensioned.² He also subscribed to the Oath Rolls under the Act of William IV and Mary, for encouraging Protestant strangers to settle in Ireland.³ He also appeared as a witness at the baptism of Lasdie de Joncour, April 13, 1707, French Church, London.¹

His wife was, apparently, Elizabeth Armand, who was a witness at the baptism of Jean de Joncourt, May 30, 1708, French Church, London.¹

RG II PHILIPPE ARMAND, of England (c1680-?)

Philippe Armand, son of Espérit Armand and Lucrece Méfrède, was born about 1680, probably in Dauphiné, France, and taken by his parents to Geneva after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. He made his way to England, apparently as a young man, where he was married, on August 29, 1708, at the French Church, Threadneedle Street, London, to Marie Borin of Molliens, Picardy, France, daughter of Jacques Borin and Elizabeth Gromat.¹

On January 17, 1714, he was a witness at the baptism of Jean Armand, son of his brother, François.¹ There is no later record of his movements and certainly no evidence that he followed his brothers to North Ireland. We assume that he made his home in England but one wonders why the births of his children were not recorded at the French Church, as were two children of his brother. This omission indicates that he may have become domiciled somewhere too distant from the French Church to have continued his devotions there.

RG II FRANCOIS ARMAND, of North Ireland

François Armand, son of Espérit Armand and Lucrece Méfrède, was born about 1685, probably in Dauphiné, France, and taken by his parents to Geneva after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. He later made his way to England and first appeared there at the baptism of François Pourceau, on October 6, 1700, at the French Church, London.¹ He was again a witness at the baptism of Marie-Ann Bernard,⁴ August 31, 1701, French Church.¹ His name and that of his wife, Catherine, are recorded at the baptisms of their children, Marie and Jean, at the French Church.¹

In 1709, he subscribed to the Oath Roll under the Act of William IV and Mary, for encouraging Protestant strangers to settle in Ireland.³ He was perhaps the sire of the family which settled at Cargy-gray, Annahilt Parish, County Down, North Ireland.

Edw. Dyermod of Macosquin Parish, Coleraine Barony, County Derry, was listed with Protestant householders in 1740.⁵

RG IV HUGH DEYARMONT, of County Down, Ireland (c1740-?)

Hugh Deyarmont, presumably born about 1740, was recorded at the baptism of his son, Henry, on July 9, 1767, at Drumbo Presbyterian Church. No other record of him has been found.

We assume he lived out his life in Ireland although, apparently, several of his children emigrated to America.

RG V THOMAS DeyARMON, of County Down, Ireland (1752-1842)

Thomas DeyArmon was born in 1752 at Cargy-gray, Annahilt Parish, County Down, North Ireland, 3 miles from Bellanyhinch, the nearest town. He was a ruling elder of the Loughaghery Church, Hillsborough, County Down, in 1812, and was first mentioned in the church records in 1806. He died December 12, 1842, and was interred in a vault in Loughaghery churchyard.⁶

RG V WILLIAM DEYERMAND (1754-1784), County Down, Ireland

William Deyermant, possibly a brother of Thomas DeyArmond (RG V), was born in 1754, in County Down, and died August 1, 1784. His wife, Agnes, was born in 1745, and died March 24, 1815. Both were buried in Drumbo Churchyard, County Down. William's tomb bore this inscription: "In Memory of William Deyermant who departed this life August 1st 1784, aged 30 years. AMERICAN FAMILIES

When the immigrant ancestors of the DeArmond families of America first appeared on this continent, they were, for the most part, already established as separate families. Some of these families have become so extensive that it would have been confusing and extremely impractical to treat them as a single family. Therefore, to simplify identification and research, they have been arranged as separate families, and are identified in this work as "lines", as outlined below.

Lancaster County, Pennsylvania

This first American immigrant of the family reached Pennsylvania about 1735, and lived only 13 years after becoming a settler, leaving three sons and two daughters.

The two older sons, Thomas and John, half-brothers, married sisters, and migrated to North Carolina about 1760, where, apparently, Thomas died, leaving several children. John settled in East Tennessee after 1784, taking his family with him. Three of Thomas' sons, David, Samuel and Richard, followed their uncle to East Tennessee, James, the eldest son, remaining in North Carolina, where his descendants are found today, in Mecklenburg County. Shortly after 1800, John's son, David, in company with Thomas' son, Samuel, and Joseph F. Flenniken, a first cousin, migrated to the Mississippi territory, and eventually settled in Feliciana Parish, Louisiana. Other sons of John moved into other East Tennessee counties as they were cleared of the Indians. From these three basic settlements, Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, East Tennessee, and East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, descendants of the family have moved out over the south, southwest, west and northwest. John served in the Revolutionary War while living in North Carolina; Thomas' son, Samuel, and his sons, served with distinction in the War of 1812, at the Battle of New Orleans. Later descendants of both brothers rendered high service during the Civil War. The descendants of these two brothers who participated in the two World Wars are too numerous to mention.

The youngest son, Richard, remained in Pennsylvania, and rendered loyal and constant service to his country during the Revolutionary War. His descendants have made distinguished and accomplished citizens of their native Pennsylvania, and with few exceptions, the present descendants are still residing there, in and around Philadelphia.

AG 1 JAMES d'ARMOND (c1710-1748), Lancaster County, Penna.

James d'Armond, whose parentage has not been established, was born in either England or Ireland, about 1710. He grew to manhood in the British Isles and courted and married his first wife there. He came to America about 1735, and there are indications that he may have come in a group organized by the Reverend Richard Sankey (q.v.), a noted Presbyterian minister and missionary, since James appointed him as guardian for his children in his will, indicating a very close attachment.¹ It is also possible that his second wife's father, James Johnston, and family, may have come in the same group.

Whether he landed at Philadelphia or Newcastle is also unknown, but apparently he moved inland up the Susquehanna River and finally settled at a spot west of Manada Creek, astride the line of East and West Hanover townships, Lancaster (now Dauphin) County, Pennsylvania.² No doubt he spent sometime scouting the country before selecting the site for his home, as warrant was not issued until January 18, 1737, to James Darn (sic) for 250 acres of land "situate in Hanover Township adjoining to Manada Creek and the lines of John Reynolds and John McCurry, in the county of Lancaster" by the Proprietaries of Pennsylvania.³

He died May 1748, of some ailment which took him in the prime of life. Even during his brief span of life as a settler, he seems to have accumulated considerable property. His will¹ dated May 4, 1748, bequeathed one-half of his movable goods and a life tenancy in the home place to his wife, Mary; the farm he purchased from Mary McNeely to his son, John, and the home place to his son, Richard. The remainder of his estate was bequeathed equally to all his children, excepting that Thomas was given five pounds and his blue coat and best hat. It appears that even though he loved Thomas better than his other children, he failed to provide for him equally with his younger sons, Thomas receiving only his share of the estate after all other bequests had been disposed of. Whether this was due to the influence of his wife in an effort to protect her own sons or the fact that James may have previously given Thomas land, cannot be determined.

The name of his first wife is unknown, but we must assume she was born in Europe and died shortly before or after 1735. She may have accompanied her husband to America, and succumbed to the rigors of the voyage or the primitive life of the new country.

James married, second, about 1737, Mary Johnston, daughter of James Johnston (q.v.) and Ann Wilson. She was born perhaps after 1715, in County Tyrone, Ireland, and came to America with her parents not earlier than 1735. After the death of her husband, Mary continued the operation and development of the family holdings in West Hanover township, assisted by her stepson, Thomas, who was then approaching young manhood. After General Braddock's expedition against Fort Duquesne in 1755, the Indians waged war on the settlers of Eastern Pennsylvania without mercy, and raids and massacres were frequent. Whole sections of the new settlements were wiped out and many other settlers abandoned their homes temporarily. Mary's father was killed by the Indians in 1756, and about 100 families were forced to flee, and Mary and her children were among those driven from their homes by the danger.⁵ Where they went has not been recorded but after the Indians were driven back, they returned and remained thereafter in secure possession. By this time, Thomas was already married and undoubtedly living apart. By 1760, John was also married and ultimately the daughters married and left home, leaving the younger son, Richard, with his mother. Richard continued to live with his mother until her death and did not marry until afterward.

Mary died between September 1779 and March 1780, and is supposedly buried, along with her husband, in unmarked graves in the old English 'Cemetary' near present Grantville, East Hanover township, where Richard and his wife were later buried. Her will,^o dated September 21, 1779, bequeathed her land to her son, Richard, and money and clothing to her two daughters. She instructed Richard to pay to her son, John, one hundred pounds in Pennsylvania currency. No mention was made of Thomas, since, being not of her blood, he had no claim on her estate.

TO MY COUSIN

in affectionate appreciation of her devotion and untiring zeal, without which the history of the Louisiana members of this family could not have been written.

AG II THOMAS DERMOND (1730-c1785), Mecklenburg County, N. C.

Thomas Dermond, only child of James d'Armond of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, by his first marriage, was born about 1730.¹ Since his father came to America about 1735, Thomas was little more than an infant at the time of the voyage, and it is difficult to believe that James would have attempted the trip without the child's mother, so whether Thomas was orphaned before or after his arrival in America is speculative. His father soon re-married and Thomas grew to manhood on his father's farm in West Hanover township. His father died in 1748 but Thomas apparently continued to live at home until his marriage.² His stepmother, Mary Johnston Dermond, died in 1779, and did not mention Thomas in her will which is substantiation of the fact that he was not of her blood.

He continued to live in Pennsylvania until about 1761⁴ when he migrated with his half-brother, John, and the entire Flenniken family, to Mecklenburg County, North Carolina. There he settled on McAlpins Creek, and lived neighbor to his wife's brother, William Flenniken.⁵ The date of his death is not known but it must have been before 1790 since he was not recorded in the 1790 census, his home was broken up and his children scattered. The last actual record of him was in January 1769.⁵

He married prior to 1753, and in Pennsylvania, Mary Flenniken (b. May 15, 1731), daughter of James Flenniken (q.v.) and Jane Gillespie.³ She was a sister of Esther Flenniken who married Thomas' brother, John.

1. James d'Armond, in his will (q.v.) written in 1748, appointed Reverend Richard Sankey as guardian for all his children, indicating that Thomas had not reached his majority. Eighteen being considered manhood in those pioneering days, Thomas' birth cannot have been prior to 1730. This will also bequeaths to "my son Thomas . . . five pounds—I loved him more than the other children . . . N.B.—that before signing I leave my blue coat and best hat to my son Thomas".
2. Thomas Dyermond (sic) was mentioned in the will of Robert Montgomery, Paxton township, Lancaster County, Penna., dated October 6, 1748: "I give and bequeath to Thomas Dyermond one blue coat . . .".

3. Jane Flenniken's will (Appendix) makes bequeaths to her daughters, Mary [Dermond] and Esther Dermond.
4. Thomas Dearmond bought a place from Joseph Scott about 1758, and later sold it to Alexander Miller. Location is not shown as this was a caveat proceeding, so we only know that it was in Pennsylvania. Penna. Archives, Series 3, Vol. 1, p. 233.
5. George A. Selwyn, as governor of North Carolina, sold to Thomas Dearmond, planter, 107 acres on McAlpins Creek, Mecklenburg County, deed dated January 13, 1767, being a state deed. Mecklenburg County, N. C. Deeds, Harris Ledgers, Book 9, p. 61.
Another deed, dated January 10, 1767, was for 182 acres on McAlpins Creek, adjoining Wm Flenniken's survey. Mecklenburg County, N. C. Deeds, Harris Ledgers, Book 9, p. 66.
On January 7, 1769, Thomas Dearmond mortgaged to Peter Johnston, land on McAlpins Creek, adjoining Wm Flenniken, from deed of January 10, 1767. Mecklenburg County, N. C. Deeds, Book 22, p. 82.

Survey of land grant issued to Thomas Dermond covering land in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, made probably in 1764. Original in North Carolina Archives, Raleigh.

AG III JAMES DEARMOND (1753-1830), Mecklenburg County, N. C.

James Dearmond, son of Thomas Dermond and Mary Flenniken, was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, in 1753, prior to his father's migration to North Carolina about 1761. He continued to live on his father's farm which he acquired either by inheritance or purchase. He was listed in the U. S. census, first in 1790, and again in 1800 and 1810.¹ On September 27, 1790, he purchased land in Mecklenburg County from John Hutchison² and on November 21, 1797, he sold to James Glass, land lying on the east side of McAlpins Creek,³ which was the location of his home. Again on October 7, 1797, he sold to Allen Reid, 108 acres of land on McMichaels Creek, deed being acknowledged by his mark, and also signed by his wife, Elizabeth.⁴ On August 20, 1795, he also sold to Hugh Kirkpatrick, land on McMichaels Creek,⁵ deed being witnessed by John and James Boyes. On November 16, 1815, he sold land to his son, James junior.⁶ He died on February 11, 1830.

He married about 1775, Elizabeth —, born 1760 or earlier.⁷

AG III SAMUEL DEARMOND (c1760-1819), Feliciana Parish, La.

Samuel Dearmond, son of Thomas Dermond and Mary Flenniken, was born probably in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, prior to his father's removal to Mecklenburg County, N. C., although the exact year is unknown, and apparently was named for his mother's brother, Samuel Flenniken (q.v.). He grew to manhood on his father's farm on McAlpins Creek, and evidently married in North Carolina, although there is no known record of the marriage. After 1784, in company with his brothers, David Flenniken Dearmond and Richard Dearmond, he either accompanied or followed his uncle, John Dermond (q.v.) to what later became Knox County, Tennessee, and lived there until sometime after 1801, although one authority has him in Mississippi as early as 1795.¹ This is contradicted by the tax reports for Blount County, Tennessee, for the years 1800 and 1801, which record him as possessed of 200 acres of land in 1800 and 150 acres of land in 1801, and taxable with one white poll. His farm may have been first in Knox County and later included in Blount County when that county was formed in 1795. Soon after 1801, Samuel, his first cousin, David Flenniken Dearmond, and perhaps another first cousin, Joseph F. Flenniken, son of Samuel Flenniken (q.v.), left East Tennessee and went down the Tennessee River on log rafts, successfully negotiated the Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee River in Alabama, leaving the river where it swings north again, and followed the Natchez Trace to Mississippi.¹⁰ Apparently, they reached the Mississippi territory about 1803 and remained there only a brief time.²

Although Samuel moved into West Florida, a Spanish possession, in 1803, he did not at first enter claim for any land. On September 8, 1806, he settled on Bayou Pierre, and on November 15, 1806, entered claim for 150 acres.³ This tract had been originally settled by Robert Thompson, and Samuel made his claim as assignee of David Lum. At the same time, he entered claim for 640 additional acres, Bayou Pierre, as original settler, on October 30, 1806.⁴ Another record indicates that he secured additional land in June 1808.⁵ All these claims were entered while Feliciana was still a part of West Florida and under the Spanish crown. Spanish rule was overthrown by the settlers in 1810 and the Republic of Feliciana set up which endured for

74 days, after which the United States Congress claimed it as part of the Louisiana Purchase. Undoubtedly our subject played a conspicuous role in this revolt. The map of original land grants in East Feliciana Parish shows Samuel's land as lying along the east side of Comite River, near and slightly northwest of Clinton, and consisting of 615.82 acres.⁶

Peace was not yet to come to this rugged descendant of pioneers, and when the United States became embroiled with Great Britain in the War of 1812, he answered the call of General Andrew Jackson in 1814, and joined his army at New Orleans. He served in Captain L. C. Griffeth's Horse Company, commanded by Colonel Hinds. He was accompanied by his four sons, and served until the end of the war in 1815.⁷

He died in 1819, after a rich and eventful life, so typical of our pioneer ancestors whose task it was to open up and domesticate this wild and rich continent.⁸

He married early in life, Elizabeth —, whose maiden name may have been Elizabeth Greene.¹¹ She is recorded, along with her husband, as a charter member of Old Hephzibah Baptist Church in 1813.¹² On September 1, 1819, after her husband's death, Elizabeth purchased his assets (presumably the family personal effects), and the purchase was secured by her son, William.⁸ There is no record of her birth or death.

11. This assumption is supported by the fact that one of her sons was named 'Samuel Greene'. Again, her grandson, John Dearmond (1800-?), named his eldest child 'Ira Green'. The appearance of the name 'Greene' twice in the family strongly indicates a family origin and since there is no other source save through Elizabeth's family, the author is fairly certain of the correctness of this assumption.

AG III DAVID FLENNIKEN DEARMOND (c1775-1838), Blount County, Tenn.

David Flenniken Dearmond, son of Thomas Dearmond and Mary Flenniken, was born 1770-1780, in Mecklenburg County, N. C.³ He and his brothers, Richard and Samuel, came to Knox County, Tennessee, sometime after 1784, in company with their uncle, John Dearmond. He settled in what became Blount County, and became a farmer and slave owner.¹ He was reported in the 1800 and 1801 tax and taxable property reports for Blount County, as owner of 100 acres of land and taxable for one white poll. The location of his holdings in Blount County has not been determined. He died in 1838, leaving no will, and his son, Thomas Gillespie DeArmond, was appointed administrator.²

AG III RICHARD DEARMOND (c1770-c1819), Lawrence County, Ala.

Richard Dearmond, son of Thomas Dermond and Mary Flenniken, was born probably in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, although the year is unknown. He came to East Tennessee with his brothers, Samuel and David Flenniken, and settled in Knox County, Tennessee. His farm was later included in Blount County when that county was formed. He is recorded as owning 200 acres of land in 1800, and 150 acres in 1801, in the tax lists for those years.¹

His name is recorded as bondsman on the marriage bond of William Stephenson and Jean Hamilton, dated April 17, 1793,² indicating he had already reached his majority.

He is shown on December 22, 1792, as a corporal with six men, holding a frontier garrison at Wells Station, Knox County (later Blount County), against the Indians.³ On June 8, 1797, he was shown as an ensign in Captain Rhea's Company, vice John Kelly, Tennessee Militia; and on May 25, 1799, as lieutenant, and again on October 23, 1799, as captain.⁴ The 1800 and 1801 tax lists for Blount County, Tennessee, include Captain Dearmond's company, indicating he still held that rank.⁵

In 1810, he secured a Tennessee land grant for 346 acres of land in Blount County, lying along the Little River, being in the vicinity of present-day Chandler's Station. This grant may have been secured to clear title to his lands which he had settled before the creation of the State of Tennessee under North Carolina land grant, all such land grants having been declared void by the Tennessee legislature.⁶

Sometime after 1801, he left Blount County and settled in Lawrence County, Alabama, where he died about 1819. His will left one half of his estate to Peggy A. Dearmond, daughter of his brother, David Flenniken Dearmond, of Blount County, Tennessee.⁶

No evidence has been found indicating that he married or had a family.

AG IV WILLIAM DEARMOND (c1775-1857), Bradley County, Tennessee

William Dearmond, son of James Dearmond, senior, and Elizabeth ?Reid, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, 1770-1780. He must have migrated from North Carolina to Tennessee rather early in life as the U. S. census for 1850 records his son, William M., as having been born in Tennessee in 1800. Where he first settled after reaching Tennessee is not known, but he may have tarried for a while in the vicinity of Knoxville, as the lower East Tennessee counties were not open for settlement until shortly after the turn of the century. He was a farmer, and his search for more and better land undoubtedly prompted his move to the fertile and well watered lands of lower East Tennessee. He may also have influenced his uncle, Allen Dearmond, to move to East Tennessee, although Allen did not leave the state of his birth until after 1827. There is some evidence that William may have also operated a grist mill in connection with his farming. He ultimately settled in Bradley County, and made his home at Flint Springs.¹ He died between February and August, 1857.²

AG IV ALLEN DEARMOND (1785-1842), Monroe County, Tenn.

Allen Dearmond, son of James Dearmond, senior, and Elizabeth ?Reid, was born December 16, 1785, in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, where he grew to manhood and married.¹³ He became a successful farmer and owned land. He was also a county magistrate, as evinced by documents executed before him.¹ On March 1, 1827, he sold his farm in Mecklenburg County,² and soon afterward removed to Tennessee, settling in Monroe County. On February 5, 1828, he purchased land from George Davis,³ and about 1829 or 1830, he purchased land from F. S. Clarke.⁴ The 1830 census shows him as a man of means, with a large family, and owning 5 slaves.⁵ He is again recorded in the 1840 census with one additional son.⁶

He died in 1842. His will, probated the same year, gave his age and date of birth, and mentioned all his living children and the son of a deceased daughter.⁷

He married in North Carolina, Mary Caldwell (b. 1790), daughter of Agnes Caldwell, widow.⁸ On December 30, 1845, Mary sold all her personal effects to her daughters, Elizabeth and Sarah, her son-in-law, Peter Twoomy, and her other children, in exchange for a bond for her lifetime maintenance.⁷ The 1850 census for Monroe County, Tennessee, records Mary Dearmon, age 50, birthplace Kentucky, as living with her daughter, Elizabeth, age 30, birthplace Tennessee. If this refers to our subject's wife, there are glaring discrepancies, as circumstances require her birthplace and that of her daughter, Elizabeth, to have been North Carolina, and her age not less than 60 in 1850. No further record of Mary has been found, and the date of her death is not known.

AG IV THOMAS FLENNIKEN D'ARMOND (1795-1865), East Feliciana Parish, La.

Thomas Flenniken D'Armond, son of Samuel Dearmond and Elizabeth ?Greene, was born March 1, 1795, in Blount County, Tennessee,¹ although one authority has him born in Mississippi.² About 1802, his father left Blount County, Tennessee, and moved down the Tennessee River and the Natchez Trace to Mississippi Territory, where he remained until about 1803, when he moved on into the Feliciana section of West Florida. There Thomas grew to manhood. He married at the age of 18, and moved into a home of his own. Within a year after his marriage, he joined his father and brothers in the War of 1812, and served with General Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans.³ He returned home to his young wife and baby with the rank of "Captain", which his friends continued to use in addressing him throughout his life. He later engaged in the mercantile business at Clinton, the firm name being Guay & DeArmond.⁴ This business was in active operation in the 1830's, but was apparently dissolved later by court action. After the death of his first wife in 1833, he visited his son, Samuel Jackson, who was living in Roane County, Tennessee.² There he met and married a sister of his son's wife. He remained in Roane County about a year, afterwards returning to his home in Louisiana.

He became a planter and one of the prominent men of his community, not only because of his wealth and business ability but for his intellect and culture as well. He was a tall, erect man, kind and generous and jolly,³ and possessed of unusual gifts of energy and industry, since he amassed quite a fortune in lands and slaves during his active years.⁴

His plantation, located on the hills east of Clinton about four miles, consisted of 484.74 acres,⁵ and became known as 'D'Armond Hill', which designation is still in use today. It lay on gently rolling hills, and represented some of the choicest holdings in the parish. He lived out his later years in peace, comfort and affluence until the advent of the Civil War. In common with all Southern planters, he owned many slaves, over a hundred in fact, and when they were freed at the end of the war, his land holdings were of little value to him without the slaves to cultivate them. Being then 70 years of age, the destruction of the civilization he had contributed so much of his life to build was a great shock to him. That, combined with the death of his son, Lafayette, during the course of the war, undoubtedly hastened his death. He died June 13, 1865, and was buried in the family plot, not far from his mansion house. This plot, located on 'D'Armond Hill', is in a good state of preservation today, and the headstones are all erect and completely legible (1951).

He married first, on May 13, 1813, Julia Ann White (b. Jan. 1, 1795; d. Feb. 25, 1833; g. D'Armond Hill cemetery, East Feliciana Parish, La.)⁷ It is possible she was a daughter of Gideon White, as he is recorded as a close relative in a family council held at Clinton, Louisiana, after her death, to discuss her children's property interests.⁸ The name 'Gideon' also appears in the name of one of her sons, and is repeated again and again in later generations.

He married second, on November 3, 1836, in Roane County, Tennessee,¹¹ Elizabeth Thompson DeArmond (b. Aug. 19, 1806, Roane County, Tennessee; d. May 2, 1850, East Feliciana Parish, La.; g. D'Armond Hill c.), his second cousin, and a daughter of James DeArmond (q.v.) and Susan Shadden. After a year in Roane County as a bride, she accompanied her husband to his plantation home in Louisiana. She was a sister of Grizza B. DeArmond who married her husband's son, Samuel Jackson D'Armond, senior. Her grave is marked with a handsome headstone which contains statistics of her birth, marriage and death, and is in perfect condition today (1951).

He married third, on April 9, 1865, Roxana E. Musselman, who, it is believed, was a widow at the time of the marriage.¹⁴ No issue.

AG IV WILLIAM DeARMOND (c1797-c1825), Feliciana Parish, La.

William DeArmond, son of Samuel Dearmond and Elizabeth ?Greene, was born about 1797, in Blount County, Tennessee, and was taken as a small child by his parents to Mississippi Territory and later into West Florida.¹ He spent his boyhood in Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, and while still a 'teen age lad, volunteered for service in the War of 1812, enlisting in the 1st Regiment of Volunteers, Mississippi Territory, this regiment being composed of Amite County, Mississippi, men. The fact that William lived across the line in only recently liberated Feliciana would have mattered not to Mississippi authorities, since none of these early settlers were concerned with political boundaries, their whole attention being directed toward the land.²

On February 8, 1816, William married Falley (or Falby) Cobb, in Amite County, Mississippi.³ In the absence of any information to the contrary, we must assume that he was a farmer, and probably lived on and helped cultivate his father's large holdings. After his father's death in 1819, William's mother, Elizabeth, purchased his father's assets, the purchase being secured by William.⁴

He died as a young man, between 1820 and 1825, since his widow was married to William Gore on September 16, 1827.⁵ The family apparently left East Feliciana Parish before 1830, since William Gore⁷ is not listed in the 1830 census there.

5. East Feliciana Parish Marriage Records, Book X, p. 90, records the marriage of Falley DeArmond to William Gore, on September 16, 1827.
6. This is an assumption. The marriage of Oliver DeArmond to Mary Tycer is recorded in 1852, Ascension Parish Marriage Records. Samuel Jackson DeArmond was then living in Ascension Parish, and had a son named Oliver Jackson, born in 1855. If William had a son born after 1820 named Oliver, it would explain the origin of Oliver, and the source of the name for Samuel Jackson's son. There is no further record of this man.

AG IV SAMUEL GREENE DeARMOND, Sr. (c1800-1834), East Feliciana Parish, La.

Samuel Greene DeArmond, Sr., son of Samuel Dearmond and Elizabeth ?Greene, was born either in Blount County, Tennessee, or Mississippi Territory, about 1800. While still a lad, he accompanied his father and three brothers when they volunteered in 1814 for service with General Andrew Jackson during the War of 1812, and participated in the Battle of New Orleans with L. C. Griffeth's Horse Company.¹¹ He probably became a farmer on at least a part of his father's plantation, as he reached his majority shortly after his father's death in 1819. On November 3, 1829, he made a cash sale of some commodity to Letha Gordon,¹ and on February 19, 1833, he and his brother, Thomas F., gave power of attorney to Samuel Cobb et al.² His life span was quite short, and subsequent to his death, Samuel Jackson DeArmond and David F. Dearmond swore to the authenticity of his signature to articles of agreement between Samuel G. Dearmond and his brother, Thomas F., executed under date of June 7, 1834.³ Therefore, we may assume that he died in 1834, between June and October. He probably fell victim to one of the fevers so prevalent in the early days of that country before science had conquered yellow fever and other miasmatic ailments.

He married at an early age, Elizabeth Story, daughter of Edward Story, Senior.⁴ After her husband's death, she continued to live in East Feliciana Parish for awhile⁵ but the 1840 census for Feliciana Parish reveals the family gone from the parish and no further record of her has been found.

AG IV JOHN DeARMOND (1800-?), East Feliciana Parish, La.

John DeArmond, son of Samuel Dearmond and Elizabeth ?Greene, was born in Blount County, Tennessee, in 1800, and taken as a child to Mississippi Territory. In 1803, his father moved into Feliciana which was then a part of West Florida, a Spanish possession.¹ Very early in his life, he must have filed for a tract of land adjacent to David Flenniken Dearmond, senior, since he is listed as an original settler of the parish with 630.25 acres.² He was a planter and wheelwright, and apparently engaged in trading as well.³ He is listed in every census for East Feliciana Parish through 1850.⁴ Although the 1860 census has not been examined, transfers made by his wife after 1850 indicate the possibility of his death before 1855.⁵

He married in Feliciana Parish, on Mar. 1, 1824, Sarah Yarbrough⁶ (b. 1804, in La.), perhaps a daughter or sister of Lewis Yarbrough.⁷

AG IV THOMAS GILLESPIE DeARMOND (1795-?), Blount County, Tennessee

Thomas Gillespie DeArmond, son of David Flenniken Dearmond and Margaret Harvey, was born in Blount County, Tennessee, in 1795.¹

Through his interest in the firm of Samuel Sherrill & Company and that company's purchase in 1855 of tracts of land in the Great Smoky Mountains, DeArmond Bald and DeArmond Ridge (see cut) were named for our subject.² At the death of his father in 1838, he was appointed administrator for his father's estate. He served in the War of 1812 as a second lieutenant in Captain David McKann's company, East Tennessee Drafted Militia, from September 20, 1814 until May 3, 1815, the term of his enlistment.⁵ Although the date of his death has not been ascertained it has been established that he was buried in Clarkes cemetery, Blount County.

He married on November 6, 1817, Elizabeth Caldwell (b. 1800, Rockford, Tennessee; g. Clarkes cemetery, Blount County), I. Anderson, officiating.³

firm. In 1901, St. Clair DeArmond issued power of attorney to Thomas P. Cowan of Blount County, and in 1905 a deed was made to F. L. Winchester, signed by Sam DeArmond et al. 42 names in all were signed to this deed by Thomas P. Cowan, as attorney. These grants and deeds mentioned above cover what is now called DeArmond Bald and DeArmond Ridge. Title ultimately passed by conveyance from F. L. Winchester to the State of North Carolina, and finally to the National Parks Commission, and is now a part of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park."

AG V JOHN ALLEN DeARMOND (1806-1876), Flint Springs, Tenn.

John Allen DeArmond, son of William Dearmond, was born in Tennessee, December 22, 1806. Since his father's first home in Tennessee is not known, we do not know where John Allen spent his boyhood. Eventually, his father settled in Bradley County after the Indians were evacuated, and John Allen secured a grant for land which had been cleared by the Indians, in Flint Springs Valley. He made his home there for a number of years, and there he met and married his wife. At some later date, he moved across the state line and lived at Red Clay, Georgia, and operated a farm and grist mill while his eldest son, John Thompson, was a boy. He later returned to Bradley County, Tennessee, and lived out the remainder of his life at Flint Springs. Bradley County court records show him as serving on the grand jury, Circuit Court, in 1841.

He married, Dec. 15, 1836, Patience E. Lusk (b. July 3, 1815, Bledsoe County, Tenn.; d. Dec. 1, 1876, Bradley County), daughter of Joseph Lusk, II (q.v.) and Rebekah Igou.

He died at his home on November 21, 1876, followed in a few days by his wife and daughter, Lethia E. Legend says that they were poisoned by some milk they drank which had been standing for a time in a cupboard near some paint or other poisonous substance. He is buried at Flint Springs.

AG V JOHN E. (or JOHN W. W.) DeARMOND (1826-?), Muhlenberg County, Ky.

John E. DeArmond, son of Allen Dearmond and Mary Caldwell, was born in Mecklenburg County, N. C., in 1826, shortly before his father removed to Monroe County, Tennessee. He grew to manhood in Monroe County, and married there.¹ There seems to be disagreement about his actual name. His father mentioned him in his will as "J. E.", and he is listed in the 1850 census as "John", but O. K. Lyle² lists his name as "John W. W." Sometime after 1850, he followed his two older brothers to Kentucky, and settled in or near Muhlenberg County, and continued the pursuit of farming.

He married first, about 1846, in Tennessee, Lorrinda Caroline Girdner (b. 1827, Tenn.; d. circa 1863).²

AG V SAMUEL JACKSON D'ARMOND, SR. (1816-1897), Kingston, Tenn.

Samuel Jackson D'Armond, senior, son of Thomas Flenniken D'Armond and Julia Ann White, was born in Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, March 21, 1816.¹ He grew to manhood on his father's plantation, and was educated in Louisiana, attending Silliman Institute, an excellent and popular academy at Clinton.²

In 1835, he was ordered by his doctor to get out of Louisiana because of his health, and he came to East Tennessee, seeking his father's people. He visited the family of his grandfather's first cousin, James DeArmond, who lived at DeArmond (Little Emory) Gap, in Roane County.³ James had a large family, mostly daughters. Samuel Jackson fell in love with and married one of these daughters, who was four years his senior, he being 19 years old at the time of his marriage. By marrying so young, he was following his father's example who married at the age of 18, as well as that of his grandfather who also married at an early age. After his marriage, he took his bride to Louisiana, where they remained through 1836.² In 1837, he returned to Roane County, Tennessee, and settled first on a farm a few miles east of Kingston, where he engaged in farming. In December 1853, he moved to Kingston, and entered the mercantile business. Located at the confluence of the Tennessee and Clinch rivers, Kingston was an important way station on the old post road from Nashville to Knoxville, and Washington. The Clinch river was negotiated by means of a ferry and Kingston was an overnight stop. Thus, our subject had an ideal location for his mercantile business, which thrived not only on the travelers but the citizens of Roane County, who thronged to the county seat for Court Day and also glimpses of the world outside their restricted lives. He remained in active operation of this business for more than 40 years, and amassed considerable wealth in lands, investments, and money, and became one of the most prominent citizens of Roane County. He was greatly respected for his business acumen, Christian charity, and had many friends. In early life, he joined the Methodist church, but later affiliated with the Presbyterian church, which he supported generously and unfailingly by funds, word and deed.

Always of a frail physique, advancing years brought failing health, and he eventually relinquished the operation of his mercantile business to his sons. By husbanding his strength and guarding his health, in spite of his delicate constitution, he lived well into his eightieth year. He died suddenly of pneumonia, on January 4, 1897,³ and is buried at Kingston.

He married first, on November 19, 1835, Grizza Blackburn DeArmond (b. May 13, 1812, Roane County, Tennessee; d. Dec. 4, 1852, Kingston), daughter of James DeArmond (q.v.) and Susan Shadden.⁴ His father married her sister, Elizabeth, and his brother, James Gideon, married her sisters, Matilda and Susan Ann.

He married second, on January 31, 1858,⁷ Margaret Ann Yost (b. July 4, 1830, Claiborne County, Tenn.; d. Jan. 18, 1897, Kingston), daughter of Rev. George W. Yost (b. Maryland, 1787; d. 1865) and his wife, Margaret (b. Va.). She came to Kingston with her parents at the age of 2 years and was of German-Irish extraction.⁸

Author's Note: Samuel Jackson's name apparently derived from his grandfather, Samuel Dearmond, and General Andrew Jackson, who was a hero beyond compare to the citizens of Louisiana, and under whom both Samuel Jackson's father and grandfather served in the War of 1812.

1. Goodspeed, History of Tennessee, East Tennessee Edition, pp. 1073, 1074:

"S. J. D'Armond, a prominent merchant, one of Kingston's oldest citizens, was born in 1816 in Louisiana and came to Roane County in 1837. He began farming the next year and was so engaged until 1853, when in December he came to Kingston and embarked in the mercantile trade which he has since continued. In November, 1835, he married G. B. D'Armond by whom he had one son and three daughters, Thomas H. of Louisiana, and Matilda J. (now Mrs. Christian) living in Johnson City, Tennessee, and two daughters deceased. His wife died in 1852, and he afterwards married Margaret A. Yost, a native of Virginia but reared in Kingston. They have two sons and a daughter, James G., M. E., and S. J., all of Kingston. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. The D'Armond family is of French origin, and the grandfather and one or two cousins were pioneers of Knox County which they left about 1790 or 1795, and after a few years in Mississippi, moved to Louisiana, where they died. Thomas F., the father, who was born in Mississippi in 1795, went to Louisiana with his parents and there his death occurred. He lived in Roane County a year, about twelve months after our subject located here. Julia A. White, the mother, was living in Louisiana at the time of their marriage. Of two sons and two daughters reared in the family, our subject and his brother in Louisiana are the only survivors."

2. Guay & DeArmond, merchants, Clinton, La., ledger, p. 212 (Department of Archives, Louisiana State University). Sam J. De'Armond (sic) made purchases from January 25, 1836, through Dec. 9, 1836, consisting mostly of women's apparel. To this was added a charge of $100 cash, apparently a gift from his father. To the total amount of this account was added an item of $18.98, marked "Amt of Thos. Sillimans Boarding acct", evidently the final balance due for his schooling and board before his marriage. To this account was added another item of $27.75, January 3, 1837, "To amt of F. Hardesty's acct". The entire account was transferred to his father's account.

Ibid., p. 377. An account originally entered as S. J. and G. DeArmond on which later another

- initial was inserted, causing it to read: S. J. and J. G. DeArmond. The author is convinced that the original caption is the correct one, and represented an account for "Samuel Jackson and Grizza DeArmond." The purchases consisted of such items as would be given to a bride and groom, and may have been an account of convenience to record purchases made by his father and other relatives and friends. Charges consisted of "a small falling leaf table; set of plates; set of cups and saucers; damask table cloth; tumblers; set of knives and forks; 1 stake dish; 1 pr. glass lamps; 1 pr. brass fire dogs", the last purchase on October 27 being for a leather trunk. Wm Kelly paid $10.00 on the account; F. W. Dunn applied a credit of $18.00 for 10 pounds brown sugar, and a payment of cash, $40.00, was made on December 5, 1836. This account was active from January 20, 1836, through December 5, 1836. Final unpaid balance was transferred to "Thos. F. D'Armonds acct."
3. East Tennessean, Kingston, Tennessee, Thursday, January 7, 1897, Obituary:
 "S. J. D'Armond, after a few hours painless sickness, died Monday evening at 8:30, full of years and honor. Thus passes from the stage of life another of our oldest, most worthy and respected citizens. Mr. D'Armond was born in Louisiana in 1816, and had he lived until March next he would have been four score and one. When 19 years of age he came to Tennessee and settled on a farm a few miles east of Kingston, and subsequently removed to town, where he engaged in the mercantile business. That was in about 1850, nearly half a century ago, since which time he had been actively engaged in this business, until a few years ago, when increasing years and impaired health admonished him, retired, turning the business over to his sons. Always delicate and subject to sudden attacks, he, as well as his family, strove to guard and protect him, by the tenderest care and solicitude, and his fatal sickness, pneumonia, came Sunday morning without premonition, and not from exposure or imprudence, as far as known. The day previous and when he retired the night before, he was in his usual health. Thus passes to the great beyond a devoted husband, kind father, exemplary citizen, neighbor and friend. Mr. D'Armond was from early life connected with the Methodist and later the Presbyterian church, of which he was a member at the time of his death, always active and zealous in the work, giving liberally of his means and efforts to the cause of Christianity. He leaves a widow and several sons and daughters and grandchildren to revere his memory, to whom the sympathies and consolation of the community are tendered. The funeral services will take place this (Wednesday) afternoon from the Presbyterian church.

 5. Roane County, Tennessee, Registers Office, Book P, p. 571, Jan. 2, 1868. Susan E. Langley gave a deed to her uncle, John DeArmond, of Harriman, Tennessee, under date of April 25, 1866, in which she mentions herself as being one of four children of her mother, Grizza.
 6. Ibid., book and page not shown. F. M. Wylie executed a contract of action to John D'Armond of Webster, Tennessee, in which he promised to pay John D'Armond $500 in case Wylie's wife, G. J. Wylie, failed to execute a deed for her share of her grandfather's (James DeArmond) estate by May 29, 1866. He signed himself as a citizen of Roane County, Tennessee. This document was registered on March 10, 1866 and attested before William B. Nichols and John L. (or F.) White. This was a part of a long drawn out action by John DeArmond to purchase his father's home, since his father had died intestate.

 8. East Tennessean, Kingston, Tennessee, Thursday, March 4, 1897: Obituary.
 "Mrs. Margaret Ann D'Armond, wife of S. J. D'Armond, Sr., was born in Claiborn County, Tennessee, July 4, 1830, and died at her home in Kingston, at 20 minutes to 6 o'clock, Monday morning, January 18, 1897, of pneumonia, aged 66 years, 6 months and 14 days; following her beloved husband in two weeks. She was the daughter of Rev. George and Margaret Yost and came to Kingston with her parents, at the age of two years. She was of German-Irish extraction. Her father was reared in Maryland and her mother in Virginia. In 1832 her parents moved to Kingston, where they lived and died. Her father was a minister of the Protestant Methodist Church; her mother a staunch Presbyterian, in which faith she taught her children. Mrs. D'Armond's brothers, George W., Eldridge A., James C., and Allen Yost, were well known merchants here. She professed religion at Asbury's Camp Ground when 16 years of age, and remained steadfast, until the glass we see through darkly was removed. Sunday afternoon, January 31, 1858, she was married to S. J. D'Armond, Sr., in Kingston, at the Brick Church, M. E. South. There was born to them two sons and two daughters: James G., Mary Kate, Margaret E., now Mrs. S. M. French; and Samuel J. D'Armond, Jr., all survive her, and are residents of this place, except Mary Kate, who died in her fourth year. Mrs. D'Armond's funeral was a duplicate of her husband's. She was buried at the same hour, on the same day of the week, the same pall bearers, the same hymns, the same loving hands with flowers, the same people, the same drapery, and the same preacher, Rev. M. C. Bruner, of the M. E. Church. Everything was as near like the obsequies of two weeks before as possible. It was touching and sad. . . . She was buried beside her husband in the Presbyterian burial ground, multitude of friends following her remains. She led a pure life, and was a devoted daughter, mother and grandmother, never angry, always agreeable, full of life, and a superior housekeeper. Never was there a more faithful wife; always at home, tender, thoughtful, untiring; she kept the flickering flame of life in her beloved husband, when more than once, the lamp would have gone out many years ago, and her husband often gave her the credit. Truly she was an angel of that household."
 9. East Tennessean, Kingston, Tennessee, Thursday, March 4, 1897, Obituary:
 "Died of pneumonia, Monday, January 4, 1897, at 8:30 p.m. in Kingston, Tenn., Samuel Jackson

D'Armond, Sr. He was born March 21, 1816, in East Feliciana Parish, La., and was aged 80 years, 9 months and 13 days. His family was of French extraction—staunch Huguenots, they were compelled to flee from the land of their nativity, coming to America about 1752. His grandfather and one or two cousins were pioneers of Knox County. In 1790 or 1795, they left Knox County and moved to Miss., where Thos. F. D'Armond, his father, was born, in 1795, and from there moved to Louisiana.

The subject of this sketch was the last survivor of his entire family. In December 1830, he commenced the life of a merchant. Owing to ill health, his physicians advised travel. On his route to Kentucky, he came through Rhea, Knox and Roane Counties, where he found many relatives. Settling in Roane in 1835, he began farming the next year, and continued up to December 1853, (and for many years kept the stage tavern on the Kingston and Knoxville road) when he moved to Kingston and embarked in the mercantile business.

In 1887, he retired from business on a competency, but spent the remainder of his life in caring for his estate, and contributing to the comfort and happiness of his wife, children, and grandchildren, and it can be said of him, he was a model husband and father.

His first marriage was to Miss Grizzie B. D'Armond, Nov. 19, 1835, who died in 1852. Of this union, there were five children—only two survive—Henry H. D'Armond of Johnson City, and Mrs. Rev. W. M. Christian, of Morristown, Tenn. On Sunday evening, January 31, 1858, he was united in marriage to Miss Margaret A. Yost, of Kingston, to whom were born two sons and two daughters, of which number, J. G. D'Armond, S. J. D'Armond, Jr., and Mrs. S. M. French, of Kingston, only survive. He professed religion, October 17, 1866, at a revival, held by Revs. Samuel W. Hyden and James T. Fowler, and joined the M. E. Church that night. He was a Sunday School worker, and for a number of years was a superintendent of the Sunday School. Subsequently, he joined Bethel Presbyterian Church, in Kingston, of which he was a member at his death. After prayer and song at the house, at 2 o'clock p.m., on Wednesday, January 6th, the body was conveyed to the church, where Rev. M. C. Bruner preached to a crowded house, from Job 5:26. "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season". Loving hands covered the remains of the deceased with flowers. The pulpit was appropriately draped in black. His body was consigned to the earth in the Presbyterian cemetery of Kingston. Thus were the last rites paid to one of the oldest citizens of Kingston and this county. It is not necessary to repeat the eulogy pronounced upon him by the preacher, for his family knew him as a husband and father, the community as a citizen, and the church as a member."

AG V JAMES GIDEON D'ARMOND, SR. (1818-1892), Clinton, Louisiana

James Gideon D'Armond, senior, son of Thomas Flenniken D'Armond and Julia Ann White, was born November 4, 1818, in Feliciana Parish, Louisiana. He grew to manhood on his father's plantation, and received an excellent education from the institutions then available to the youth of that section, including Silliman's Institute at Clinton.¹

In 1842, then 23 years old, he visited his brother, Samuel Jackson, who was living in Roane County, Tennessee. He met and married a sister of Samuel Jackson's wife. Apparently, he did not immediately return to Louisiana but settled at Camden, Arkansas, where he was engaged in the mercantile business.² After the death of his first wife, he left his children at his father's home in East Feliciana Parish until his second marriage. In 1849, he returned to Roane County, Tennessee, and married a younger sister of his first wife. His two wives, his brother's first wife, and his father's second wife were sisters. He continued to live at Camden, Arkansas, until after the birth of his daughter, Elizabeth. His wife, at least, returned to Clinton before 1854, but it is uncertain just when our subject terminated his business interests at Camden and elsewhere, and returned to Clinton. During these years, he operated several stores at various locations, apparently in the manner of the present-day chain stores. Eventually he did return to Clinton, and operated a general merchandising business there, located on the corner where the Clinton Bank is now located.²

His business grew through the years until it was the largest and most successful of its sort in the parish. In addition to his mercantile enterprise, he dealt in cotton exporting, with a partner in New Orleans. He accumulated much wealth, and contributed heavily to the building of the stone Baptist church, which in early years had beautiful stained glass windows.² He was a very thrifty man and purchased light brown sugar in hogsheads weighing perhaps a ton, which was unloaded on the walk in front of his store. It required several Negroes using spades and shovels to transfer the sugar into smaller barrels. The empty hogsheads were then moved to his pasture lands where his bees converted the remaining sugar into honey.³

During the Civil War, his well-stocked and prosperous establishment was irresistible to the occupying Union troops. He maintained a glass cabinet in the dry goods section containing cardboard rolls of fine silk ribbons. On occasion, Union soldiers would drive their horses into the store, snatch these ribbons, tie the ends to their horses' bridles, and go racing out, the whole bolt of ribbon streaming behind them.²

He was a man of culture, maintained an excellent library, was a deep reader and a Shakespearean scholar. He was a fine mathematician and a great chess player. He was quite a distinguished figure, with his handsome clothing and fine hats, but withal was a charitable and well beloved person. He lived in a spacious handsome home with large premises, on Bank Street opposite the "Marston House", home of the wealthy, aristocratic Marston family. Later in life, his wealth was greatly reduced due to the changing cotton economy which prevented the collection of his extensive credits to his farmer customers, and the unconscious extravagances of his family, long geared to a life of wealth and indulgence.²

He died May 27, 1892, at the age of 73. Funeral services were conducted by the Masonic Lodge from the Baptist church and interment was in Clinton cemetery.

He married first, September 29, 1842, in Roane County, Tennessee, Matilda DeArmond⁷ (b. June 20, 1814, Roane County, Tenn.; d. May 20, 1845, East Feliciana Parish, La.; g. D'Armond Hill c.), daughter of James DeArmond (q.v.) and Susan Shadden. She was four years senior to her husband. She died at the birth of her daughter, Susan, at Thomas F. D'Armond's home in East Feliciana Parish, where she was living while her husband's business enterprises kept him away from his family. Her headstone is in excellent condition and clearly legible today (1951).

He married second, September 4, 1849, in Roane County, Tennessee,⁷ Susan Ann DeArmond (b. Jan. 1, 1829, Roane County, Tenn.; d. May 14, 1908; g. Fort Worth, Texas), daughter of James DeArmond and Susan Shadden, and a sister of his first wife. According to her descendants, Susan Ann eloped to marry the man of her choice, although the ceremony was performed and recorded in Roane County. She was a woman of great beauty, courage and culture, and graced the spacious home of her husband with her charm and taste. After her husband's death in 1892, she and four of her daughters moved to Fort Worth, Texas, where her stepdaughter (and niece), Susan Julia Matilda, was living. There she lived out the remaining years of her life.

Samuel Jackson Dearmond, son of William Dearmond and Fally Cobb, was born in Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, in 1820. He was named, probably, for his grandfather, Samuel Dearmond, and General Andrew Jackson, under whom both his father and grandfather served in the War of 1812.¹ His father died between 1820 and 1825, and his mother married William Gore in 1827. The family left East Feliciana Parish before 1830. Samuel Jackson eventually settled in Ascension Parish, and is listed there in the 1850 census, with a family, his occupation being that of a farmer.²

He married very young, being about 20 years of age. His first wife was Susan — (b. 1820, La.), who died, apparently, shortly after the 1850 census was taken.

Ira Green D'Armond, son of John DeArmond and Sarah Yarbrough, was born in East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, in 1825. He continued to make his home in East Feliciana Parish until after his marriage.¹ Apparently, his permanent home was near Indian Mound, East Baton Rouge Parish, near the St. Helena Parish line. He is listed, variously, in the East Feliciana, St. Helena,² and East Baton Rouge Parishes, no doubt due to the nearness of his home to all three parishes. AG V ELIAS C. DeARMOND (1835-1914), Grants Pass, Oregon

Elias C. DeArmond, son of Richard DeArmond and Cynthia Hitch, was born in Blount County, Tennessee, in 1835. His father died when Elias was 28 years old and still single; he was appointed administrator for his father's estate in March 1864.

Legend has it that Elias' cousin, John, was busy operating a sawmill and sent Elias to see his girl. Instead of pleading John's cause, Elias talked for himself, and later married the girl.¹ At any rate, Elias married at the age of 39, on February 24, 1874, Caroline Love (b. 1850, Blount County, Tenn.; d. July 2, 1926; g. Grants Pass, Oregon), daughter of Simpson Love. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Thomas E. Turner.²

Elias and his brother, John Hamilton, later left Blount County, and settled in Oregon, Elias making his home at Grants Pass. He died there, November 20, 1914, and is buried there.

AG VI JOHN THOMPSON DeARMOND (1841-1915), Bradley County, Tenn.

John Thompson DeArmond, son of John Allen DeArmond and Patience E. Lusk, was born August 15, 1841, at Flint Springs, Bradley County, Tennessee. The Civil War began when he was 20 years old, and on November 13, 1861, he enrolled and was mustered into service at Charleston, Tennessee, giving his age as 21. He was a private in Captain Wm. H. McKamy's Company, Gillespie's Regiment of Volunteers, Confederate States of America, which organization subsequently became Company I, 43rd Regiment, Tennessee Infantry, C.S.A. He deserted on May 11, 1862, at Lick Creek, while still a private. Two years later, on September 12, 1864, he enlisted in the United States Army, at Cleveland, Tennessee, as a private in Company E, 5th Regiment, Tennessee Volunteers Infantry. He was promoted to hospital steward, same regiment, on March 24, 1865, and honorably discharged from service on June 2, 1865, at Chattanooga, by reason of his promotion to captain. Again mustered into service on June 3, 1865, at Chattanooga, as captain, same company and regiment, and was mustered out and honorably discharged from service at Nashville, as a captain, on July 12, 1865, by reason of muster out of the company.¹ He returned to Bradley County, where he lived the rest of his life. He died February 11, 1915, and is buried at Fort Hill cemetery, Cleveland.

He married at Dalton, Georgia, February 25, 1874, Alice Sanford Bard (b. Feb. 25, 1855, Dalton; d. Feb. 19, 1910, Cleveland, Tenn.), daughter of James H. Bard (b. ?1810) of Dalton, Georgia, and Elizabeth Dunn (b. 1818). Her father was a banker at Dalton,² and Alice enjoyed a cultured home life and the advantages of a good education. AG VI THOMAS HENRY D'ARMOND (1837-1920), Johnson City, Tenn.

Thomas Henry D'Armond, son and eldest child of Samuel Jackson D'Armond, senior, and Grizza Blackburn DeArmond, was born in Roane County, Tennessee, March 19, 1837. He grew to manhood on his father's farm, and was educated in Roane County. In 1858, his father re-married, and legend has it that Thomas Henry did not approve, and went to Clinton, Louisiana, where he made his home with his uncle, James Gideon D'Armond, senior, and worked in his uncle's mercantile establishment.

He was 24 years old at the outbreak of the Civil War, and immediately joined the Hunter Rifles, a volunteer company, it being the first company to enlist in the Confederate cause, date of his enlistment being April 30, 1861. He was later transferred to 4th Regiment, Louisiana Infantry. He rose rapidly from the rank of private to sergeant and lieutenant.¹ He participated in the Battle of Shiloh, the First and Second Campaigns in Mississippi, and the Battle of Atlanta. He was captured at the Battle of Nashville, December 15, 1864, by the Union forces, and imprisoned at Johnson Island, Ohio, until the end of the war.²

He returned to Louisiana, and married in the latter part of 1865. He entered the mercantile business at Clinton, in competition with his uncle, James Gideon D'Armond, and his cousin, Thomas S. Franklin D'Armond.³

After the death of his son, Frank Dixon, in 1890, he moved to Johnson City, Tennessee, accompanied by his wife and daughters, Sallie Lucille, Mary Lillian, and Juanita. After his wife's death in 1893, Mary Lillian returned to Louisiana, and made her home with her sister, Janie Blackburn (Adler), until her marriage.

He was an inspector for the State of Tennessee, from 1915 to 1920.⁴ He died January 3, 1920, and is buried in Oak Hill cemetery, Johnson City.⁴

He married on November 30, 1865, in Amite County, Mississippi,⁵ Sarah (Sallie) Jane Dixon (b. Oct. 15, 1845; d. Dec. 25, 1893, Johnson City, Tenn., of peritonitis), daughter of Benjamin F. Dixon (q.v.) and Jane E. S. Norwood.⁶

AG VI JAMES GIDEON D'ARMOND (1858-1945), Harriman, Tennessee

James Gideon D'Armond, son of Samuel Jackson D'Armond and Margaret Ann Yost, was born at Kingston, Tennessee, December 18, 1858. He was educated in Roane County, being enrolled at Rittenhouse Academy in his early 'teens.¹ He grew to manhood, meanwhile learning the general merchandising business under the tutelage of his father. He entered his father's business where he remained several years, afterwards operating his own business.² He eventually became a mortician, and operated a funeral home at Kingston for several years before removing to Harriman which was a rapidly growing town. In 1906, he began operating the D'Armond Funeral Home, which he conducted actively for 37 years before being forced into retirement because of his advanced age. During this period he was the leading mortician at Harriman.

In addition to the successful operation of his business, our subject was very civic minded, and served his city throughout his life in a public capacity. He served on the city school board for two terms, and was three times elected mayor over a period of 14 years.³ He was instrumental in the building of two school buildings and a hospital during his periods of office.

He was a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason, a past master of the Blue Lodge, a past high priest of the chapter, a past commander of the commandery, and was active in the council during its existence. In 1945, he was awarded a fifty-year certificate at a special meeting of the Blue Lodge. At one time, he was also active in the Odd Fellows, Junior Order, and Knights of Pythias. He was a lifelong Presbyterian, and highly revered for his Christian character, his leadership, and was known affectionately to his many friends as "Uncle Jimmy".⁴

He died at his daughter's home in Harriman, October 30, 1945, after an illness of three months. Interment was in Harriman cemetery.

He married, January 1, 1902, Cleveland, Tennessee, Sarah Lucky Gaut⁵ (b. Feb. 1, 1868; d. Dec. 28, 1938), daughter of Judge Jesse Hamilton Gaut (1824-1905) and Ella Lucky (1836-1918). Both her parents were descended from distinguished families.

"J. G. D'Armond, former Harriman mayor for three terms and retired funeral director, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harold Williams, on Cumberland Street, Tuesday afternoon at 3:45, after an illness of three months. He was 86. Funeral services will be held this (Thursday) afternoon from the D'Armond home on Clinton Street at 2 p.m., Rev. W. F. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian Church will officiate, assisted by Rev. H. E. Weaver, pastor of the Christian Church. Burial will follow in the Harriman cemetery with Schubert Funeral Home of Wartburg in charge. "Uncle Jimmy", as he was affectionately known to his wide circle of friends, was a native of Kingston. For several years he was in the mercantile business with his father, Sam D'Armond, and later operated a funeral home there a few years before coming to Harriman in 1906 and opening the D'Armond Funeral Home. In 1943, advanced age forced his retirement after 37 years successful operation of the concern.

Though actively engaged in business, Mr. D'Armond found time to contribute much to the civic advancement of his town. He served two terms on the city school board, 1913-1919 and 1919-1925 and three terms as mayor, being elected for the regular two-year term in 1925, 1933, and 1939. During his periods of service, two school buildings and the hospital were erected.

He was a veteran member of all Masonic bodies in Harriman, and was awarded a 50-year Certificate at a special meeting on January 5, this year. Mr. D'Armond was a past master of the "Blue" Lodge, a past high priest of the chapter, a past commander of the commandery, was active in the council during its existence and was a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason. At one time he was also active in the Odd Fellows, the Junior Order and the Knights of Pythias.

His religious affiliation was with the Presbyterian church, having been an active member while in Kingston and later moving his membership here. Mr. D'Armond was married to Sarah Lucky Gaut in Cleveland (Tenn.) in 1902. She preceded him in death in 1938. A son, Cornelius D'Armond, passed away in 1940. Besides his daughter are two grandchildren, Sarah Barbara, and James Clark Williams, and two nephews, D.E. D'Armond, Sr. (b. 1897; d. April 29, 1974) and O.D. French."

"Cornelius H. D'Armond, son of former Mayor J. G. D'Armond and in active charge of D'Armond Funeral Home, passed away at Harriman City hospital Friday afternoon at 2:25, the result of injuries he received a few days previously. He received a fractured skull when he fell while talking to his father at the funeral home Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock. He was kept under observation at the hospital and underwent an operation Monday night but was unable to recover. Cornelius was born in Kingston, December 23, 1904, and came to Harriman with his family about two years later. He attended the Harriman city schools until ill health forced him to discontinue his studies in his sophomore year. He later attended Gupton & Jones School of Embalming in Nashville and since that time has been connected with his father in the undertaking business. For the past four years, he has been in active charge. Surviving are his father; one sister, Mrs. Margaret Eleanor Williams; and three aunts, Mrs. Hugh Knox and Miss Jessie Gaut of Cleveland, and Mrs. Oscar Marshall, of Miami, Fla. His mother, Mrs. Sarah Lucky D'Armond, passed away December 28, 1938. Funeral services were held from the home Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Rev. Chas. T. Gray, pastor of the Central Methodist church, officiating. Music was furnished by a quartet composed of Mrs. Raymond Weithers, Mrs. Frank Faris, Joe Goddard and Rev. Gray, with Mrs. F. A. AG VI SAMUEL JACKSON D'ARMOND, Jr. (1867-1904), Kingston, Tenn.

Samuel Jackson D'Armond, Jr., son of Samuel Jackson D'Armond, Sr., and Margaret Ann Yost, was born, March 17, 1867, at Kingston, Tennessee. He grew up and obtained his education there. He entered his father's mercantile business but after his father's death in 1897, the business was continued by our subject's brother, James Gideon; Samuel Jackson, Jr. went into business for himself at another location. He owned considerable property including a river farm, either inherited from his father or accumulated through his own efforts.

His life was brought to a sudden and tragic end at the age of 37. He was shot to death in front of the court house in Kingston on the evening of September 26, 1904, by William A. Forrester. According to newspaper accounts, his violent death was the result of a brief and sudden quarrel between him and Forrester. They were supposedly friends although this is difficult to believe since our subject was one of the most prominent and successful men in Kingston and Roane County, and Forrester was an ex-saloon keeper and a pool hall operator.¹

He married Anna Rose (d. July 13, 1904), daughter of Washington B. Rose and Emma Taliaferro (b. 1847).

night about 8:30 o'clock by W. A. Forrester, formerly of Knoxville. Forrester surrendered to the sheriff this morning and claims he killed DeArmond in self defense. The shooting occurred in front of the court house, and Forrester used a shotgun . . . he probably died instantly. According to Forrester's statement, the men met yesterday morning and had some bitter words. He says each threatened the other. DeArmond secured a pistol and Forrester a shotgun. When they met again last night, Forrester claims it was a case of which could shoot first, and thus he asserts he killed DeArmond in self-defense. Forrester is under guard, and will be given a preliminary hearing late this afternoon or tomorrow. Until liquor was voted out of Kingston, Forrester operated a saloon here. He is now conducting a pool room and soft drink establishment. He came here from Knoxville, where he had a saloon. Samuel DeArmond was one of the most prominent men of this town and county. He was a man of wealth, being rated at about $25,000. It was thought that he and Forrester were good friends. The dead man was buried this afternoon."

Chattanooga, Tennessee, News, Sept. 27, 1904. "Kingston, Sept. 27: Sam DeArmond, a prominent citizen of this place, and who belongs to one of the best families in the entire county, was shot and killed last night about nine o'clock near the courthouse . . . He was about 35 years of age and was a widower, his wife having died less than three months ago. He was worth perhaps between $15,000 and $20,000 and had an income from a Tennessee river farm in this county."

AG VI THOMAS S. FRANKLIN ("Frank") D'ARMOND (1843-1899), Clinton, La.

Thomas S. Franklin D'Armond, son of James Gideon D'Armond, senior, and Matilda DeArmond, was born at Camden, Arkansas, July 23, 1843, while his father was operating a mercantile business there. He was known throughout his life as "Frank" and rarely used his full name. After the death of his mother in 1845, Frank and his sister lived at their grandfather's (Thomas Flenniken D'Armond) home in East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana. His father re-married in 1849 but it is doubtful that Frank or his sister ever returned to Arkansas, but quite likely remained at their grandfather's home until their father returned permanently to Clinton, and went into the mercantile business. He attended school at Clinon, and college at Bowling Green, Kentucky.¹

He was only 18 years old at the outbreak of the Civil War but enlisted at Camp Moore, Louisiana, October 1, 1861, in the Hunter Rifles. He participated in the Battles of Peachtree Creek, Shiloh and Baton Rouge. He was one of the few who assisted Captain George H. Packwood to pull the heavy guns up Kennesaw Mountain as the Confederate forces slowly and bitterly yielded before Atlanta.² He was wounded July 28, 1864, in the Battle of Atlanta, and apparently was returned home to convalesce. He was captured at Clinton, Louisiana, November 16, 1864, and confined in military prison at New Orleans, November 23, 1864. He was later transferred to Ship Island on December 10, 1864,³ and released after the end of the war.

Afterwards, he entered business with his father for a time, and later went into business alone at another location in town.⁴ He later formed a partnership with R. L. Shelton, and was the senior partner in the business until his death.

He was an honorable and industrious citizen, a devoted husband and parent, and a faithful and dependable friend. He died July 10, 1899, and is buried in Clinton cemetery.

He married first, December 16, 1869, at Clinton, Louisiana, Mary H. Gurney,⁵ who died December 16, 1874.

He married second, December 15, 1884, at Clinton, Louisiana, Florence Rhea (b. Mar. 14, 1865, East Feliciana Parish, La.; d. Feb. 27, 1949, Clinton, La.), daughter of David Rhea and — Woodward.

"In Clinton, La., Monday, July 10, 1899, Frank D'Armond, aged 55 years, 11 months and 14 days. Interment in Clinton cemetery Tuesday, July 11, 1899, at 4:30 p.m. The deceased was a native of Arkansas, having been born in that State in 1844. When quite small his parents moved to this place, where his father, Mr. J. G. D'Armond, became engaged in mercantile pursuits. Mr. Frank D'Armond was in business with his father for a time, and afterwards in his own name. In 1898 he formed a partnership with Mr. R. L. Shelton, and up to the time of his untimely death, was the senior partner of the firm. He was honorable, upright and liberal in his business relations, and enjoyed the esteem and respect of everyone. In 1860, at the breaking out of the Civil War, he enlisted in the Hunter Rifles, and from that time until the close of the terrible struggle he fought for our noble cause. He was in many battles, notably those of Peachtree Creek, Shiloh and Baton Rouge. At Kennesaw Mountain he was one of the brave few who assisted our heroic Capt. George H. Packwood to pull the heavy guns up the mountain. He was wounded before Atlanta, being shot through the side. His war record is unapproachable—he was earnest and zealous, and was never known to shirk a duty or desert a friend. He was an honored member of S. E. Hunter Camp No. 1185, U.C.V., among whose members are many of his old comrades who mourn his death as that of a dear brother, and a true friend. In December 1884, he was married to Miss Florence Rhea. During their union five children were born, all of whom survive him. Their home life was an ideal one. He loved his home and family, and was ever indulgent, kind and affectionate. Now that he is gone the anguish of the bereaved wife and fatherless children must be terrible indeed, and we pray that God who "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" will spread over them the mantle of His everlasting love, and will heal their broken hearts. The funeral service took place at 4:30 o'clock at the family residence on Bank Street, and were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Gresham of Baton Rouge. The interment was under the auspices of Olive Lodge No. 52, F. and A.M., of which body he was an honored member. The remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of people who gathered from far and near to pay this last sad tribute to his memory. To the bereaved family the WATCHMAN extends heartfelt sympathy."

AG VI ELIZABETH D'ARMOND (1851-1929), Lake Charles, La.

Elizabeth D'Armond, daughter of James Gideon D'Armond, senior, and Susan Ann DeArmond, was born at Camden, Arkansas, October 5, 1851. Her father continued in business there for several years after her birth but established a home at Clinton, Louisiana, for his family before 1854. The home was on Bank Street near the Presbyterian church.

When a very little girl, Elizabeth's mother and aunt, Eliza Jane DeArmond (Fluker), paid a visit to their mother's home in Roane County, Tennessee, taking Elizabeth and her half-sister, Susan Julia Mathilda, with them. Elizabeth found her grandmother, Susan Shadden DeArmond, to be a small but very dignified lady who dressed beautifully, wore lace caps and played the harpsichord. She ruled her large family with a firm and capable hand, but found time to entertain her guests so royally that the little girl never forgot her trip by train to Chattanooga and Lookout Mountain, where all too soon such violent and bloody battles were to be fought. She returned to her Louisiana home with cherished memories of a gracious home, wooded mountains and valleys, and coal mines, so different from her own home land.

She grew to womanhood surrounded with luxury and comfort. She graduated with honors from Silliman Collegiate Institute of Clinton, a noted Presbyterian school for young girls, which attracted for many years many students from surrounding states. Elizabeth was an excellent musician, a person of unusual gifts and charm, and greatly beloved by those who knew her. She was a faithful Baptist from girlhood and active throughout her life in the work of her church and community affairs.

She was married in the Presbyterian church at Clinton by a Baptist minister, November 17, 1870,¹ to Dr. William Alfred Knapp (b. June 24, 1846, New Orleans, La.; d. Nov. 24, 1910, Lake Charles, La.; g. Lake Charles), son of Daniel Knapp and Frances Rose Piroth. Her husband's parents were married in Paris, France, and came direct from there to New Orleans. Dr. Knapp served in the Civil War from 1861 through 1864, first with Ogden's Battalion, Cavalry of Baton Rouge, being later transferred to the Hospital Corps, Clinton, La., where he served under Drs. Thos. Buffington and J. Williams Jones. He was a dentist, druggist and chemist, and practiced his profession first at Clinton, but early in married life removed to Lake Charles where he continued his profession until his death.

Elizabeth survived her husband by 18 years, but continued to make her home at Lake Charles. She died, January 31, 1929, and is buried at Lake Charles.

AG VI EMMA JANE BLANCHE D'ARMOND (1862-1943), Fort Worth, Texas

Emma Jane Blanche D'Armond, daughter of James Gideon D'Armond, Sr., and Susan Ann DeArmond, was born at Clinton, Louisiana, September 30, 1862. She was reared in southern luxury since her father was the leading merchant of the parish, and obtained her education at Silliman Collegiate Institute, a noted school attended by young women from surrounding states. She became a good pianist and had a nice singing voice. After the death of her father in 1892, Blanche's mother went to Fort Worth, Texas, to live, accompanied by her four younger daughters, including Blanche. A few years after reaching Fort Worth, Blanche married and lived in her mother's home at 1407 Williams Street, Fort Worth, which her mother later gave to her for her home. Her mother afterwards made her home with Blanche until her death. Blanche's husband lived only a few years, and the task of rearing her two daughters fell on her shoulders. She was a lover of growing flowers and was possessed of a 'green thumb'. She was an active member of First Baptist Church, Fort Worth, throughout her life there. She died at Fort Worth on Feb. 12, 1943, and is buried in Oakwood cemetery.

She married at Fort Worth, May 24, 1899, John William Carnes¹ (b. July 30, 1860; d. Dec. 19, 1905, in a train wreck near Waurika, Oklahoma; g. Oakwood c., Fort Worth). She was married in a double ceremony with her sister, Helen Estelle and Theodore A. Armstrong, in her mother's home.

Completed his training as a dive bomber pilot at El Toro, California, and went overseas in January 1944. He was based on Bougainville in the Solomons, and the New Hebrides, and participated in some of the first night bombings of Rabaul, New Britain Island, for which he received a citation. He visited Sydney, Brisbane and Townsville, Australia, while based on these islands. He returned to the United States in April 1945, and was an instructor at Pensacola, Fla., until November 1945. He was released from active duty as a first lieutenant, and has since been promoted to Captain, U. S. Marine Reserve. He graduated from Texas A. & M. College, June 1948, with a B.S. in Aeronautical Engineering. Employed, Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation, engineering department, July 1948. A Baptist, and a communicant of Broadway Baptist Church, Fort Worth.
3. Bevil Gordon Granville was English and a direct descendant of Sir Richard Granville, 'The King's General', made so familiar to American readers by Daphne duMaurier's novel of the same name. He came to America as a young man and became a naturalized American; was a mining engineer in Colorado, New Mexico, California and Arizona. He met and married Eloise Moore Earnest at Denver where she was employed by the Halleck-Howard Lumber Company of which her uncle, Mr. Howard, was a partner. She was born in New Jersey but her family lived at Chicago for many years.

2. Ibid. Andrew Gustave Steelhammer was born at Carlstad, Sweden, son of Johan Friedtjuf Stahlhammar and Ragna Andersen. He emigrated to the United States in the late 1860's, and when he became naturalized, adopted the English translation of his name. The family name was originally "Hammar [hammer]" but several generations ago, during one of the Swedish wars, one Oberst Leutnant Johan Hammar was cited for valor in battle, the citation including the statement "you have served like steel [stahl]. Henceforth the name shall be 'Stahlhammar'". A mention of this incident still appears in Swedish school histories.

AG VI MILFORD TOLLIVER DeARMOND (1872-), Maryville, Tennessee

Milford Tolliver DeArmond, son of Richard Granville DeArmond and Susan L. Brown, was born August 10, 1872, in Rocky Ridge community, 12th District of Blount County, Tennessee. He was educated in the Peppermint Academy from which he graduated. Afterwards, he helped his father in the butcher business and farming. At an early age he became apprentice to a carpenter, and followed that trade for several years. He was fond of sports, and considered himself a genius in bird-trapping. He joined the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church at the age of 19. He immediately began the study of music, as he had a good voice for singing. This he did by the light of the fire after the day's work was done. He later served as chorister of his church for a number of years, and directed the quartet. After two children were born, he gave up farming and followed the trade of carpentering for 15 years in Maryville, and then served as carpenter foreman for Knoxville contractors. In 1926, he returned to his farm, having lived within the 12th District all of his life. He died in Blount County, Tenn., Mar. 13, 1954.

AG VII JANIE BLACKBURN D'ARMOND (1867-1948), Baton Rouge, La.

Janie Blackburn D'Armond, daughter of Thomas Henry D'Armond and Sallie Jane Dixon, was born in Clinton, Louisiana, November 1, 1867. She undoubtedly received her education from Silliman's institute there, as it was located next door to her father's home.

At the age of 20, she fell in love with a young merchant of Clinton, but her father frowned on the affair because the boy was a member of the Jewish faith. One morning early, he rode up to her home on horseback, leading a saddled horse. Janie came out costumed in a riding habit, and they rode off, ostensibly for an early morning canter. They rode over to the next parish, and were married.

Janie married, August 23, 1887, Amite, Louisiana, Eugene Adler (b. Nov. 21, 1860, Clinton, La., d. June 17, 1924, Baton Rouge, La.), son of Solomon Adler and Celeste Levy. He was a farmer's supply merchant, and continued in business at Clinton until 1912, when the boll weevil ruined cotton production, and farmers and merchants alike were broke. He moved to Meridian, Mississippi, and purchased a business there, but disliked the town and business both so intensely that he sold out his business within three months and returned to Clinton for the summer. He then moved to Baton Rouge, and entered the cigar business. He was a devoted husband and affectionate father, and gave his children every advantage.

That fall, he entered Louisiana State University, where he earned a B.S. degree in civil engineering in 1914. He went to work immediately for the Mississippi River Commission. A year later, he became an engineer with the Louisiana Highway Department, and in 1916, he took a position as a Jefferson Davis Parish engineer, remaining there until the beginning of World War I. In 1917, William joined the U. S. Army, and became a second lieutenant in field artillery, and served ten months with his outfit overseas. He returned to civilian life in July 1919, and only a few days later, on August 1, accepted his first job with the Standard Oil Company, as a construction engineer. In 1931, he was promoted to a dual posi-

She lived as a child in Arkansas; after her mother's death, her father moved to Stuttgart, Arkansas, and in 1935, to Gillette, and in 1937, to DeWitt, where he operated a jewelry store. In July 1942, Christine and her sister, Alline, went to Borger, Texas, to live with her mother's brother, Edward A. Foster. In October 1943, she moved to Washington, D. C., and lived with her mother's half-sister, where she graduated from McKinley High School, Feb. 1, 1946. She met her husband while he was stationed there during his army service, attending Georgetown University. After their marriage, she made her home in Richmond while he was attending medical school. On July 1, 1949, they moved to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where her husband served his internship. From July to September 15, 1950, they lived in Ocean City, New Jersey, where her husband was house physician for the Shore Memorial Hospital. She has since made her home at Cape May Court House, New Jersey, her husband being in private general practice there. (1952).

She married on March 16, 1946, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Ulric J. Laquer (b. Mar. 24, 1924, Frankfurt, Germany), son of Dr. F. O. Laquer and Kathleen M. LINE A-2
KNOX COUNTY, TENNESSEE
and

AG II JOHN DERMOND (c1738-1809), Knox County, Tennessee

John Dermond, son of James d'Armond and Mary Johnston,¹ was born on his father's farm in West Hanover township, near Monadahill, Lancaster (later Dauphin) County, Pennsylvania, about 1738. He may have been named for his mother's brother, John Johnston, of Pennsylvania. His father died in 1748, and John and his two brothers and two sisters were reared by his mother on the home place. His father's will bequeathed to John the place which his father had purchased from Mary McNeely, and the home place to his youngest brother, Richard. The will also appointed Reverend Richard Sankey (q.v.), who was pastor of the old West Hanover Presbyterian Church from August 31, 1737, to June 6, 1759, as guardian for James' children.¹ No record has been found of the disposition of the property willed to John at his father's death but undoubtedly a cash settlement was paid to him when the property was sold. In 1780, his mother died in Hanover township, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, and in her will instructed her son, Richard, to pay to her son, John, the sum of "100 pounds current Money of the State of Pennsylvania".⁵ This represented John's share of his mother's estate, apart from what he had received under his father's will.

After his marriage and about 1760, John and Thomas, in company with his wife's family, migrated to Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, and settled on McMichaels Creek, where both John and Thomas bought extensive land holdings.³ Whether this move was influenced by the removal of Reverend Sankey to Virginia or the insecurity of the settlers in Pennsylvania due to the recurring attacks by the Indians, we do not know. It is inconceivable that John and his brother would have left Pennsylvania because of the Indian raids and have left their mother there with only their younger brother for her protection. Many settlers were moving away from the Pennsylvania settlements, due in part to the migratory habits of all the early American settlers who were pushing out steadily into the wilderness seeking more and better land. John Caldwell, who had emigrated from North Ireland to Pennsylvania, made exploratory trips into Virginia and the Carolinas seeking out greater land areas for the relatively crowded settlements in Pennsylvania. His reports of generous land grants, fertile soil, mild climate, and a firmer control of the Indians who themselves were not as warlike as the Pennsylvania tribes, led many Pennsylvania families to leave their homes and settle in Virginia and North Carolina. It is entirely possible that John and his older brother, Thomas, made their decision to move southward while the family was temporarily dispossessed by the Indian massacres of 1756 and their mother refusing to abandon her Pennsylvania home, remained behind in Pennsylvania. John made his home in Mecklenburg County for the next 25 years and there most of his children were born.

From 1781 through 1784, John served with the North Carolina militia, being then about 45 years old. For this service he received pay by military vouchers.⁶ No record has been located of his activities but it could not have been of a minor nature since his land award was equal to that of his wife's brother, Samuel Flenniken (q.v.), whose career was an illustrious one.

On February 15, 1784, he was awarded a warrant for 500 acres of land "in our county of Green on the south of Holston", now known as Topside community of Knox County, Tennessee.⁷ This grant was superseded by a Tennessee land grant issued after the Tennessee Assembly ruled that these Carolina grants were void. This grant lay along the shores of Holston (now Tennessee) River, just above the mouth of Little River, and was bisected through the middle by Knob Creek which empties into the Tennessee River. In 1785 or 1786, John sold his holdings in North Carolina and migrated to East Tennessee, coming down the French Broad River in flatboats, and settled on this land,⁸ accompanied by his wife and children, and three of the sons of his brother, Thomas. He was the first settler in what later became Knox County, Tennessee.¹⁶ He built a cabin and a tubmill, near Colonel Churchwell's ferry across the Tennessee River, which was so greatly in demand that it was several years before he could install runners of good stone.⁸ A study of John's will and the will of his son, John, indicates that the mill was located on Knob Creek near its mouth. He became a successful farmer, and being the first settler, a prominent member of the community. He took no part in the political life of the county but devoted himself to the operation of his mill, the clearing and developing of his farm, and the acquisition of additional lands. One historian has referred to him as Knox County's "first industrialist".

In 1787, John signed a petition made by the inhabitants of the "Western Country" to the North Carolina Legislature praying for representation. This extant document contains the only existing example of John's signature.¹⁷

He appeared in the Knox County Tax Lists for 1806 and 1807 as the owner of 400 acres of land, and in the 1808 list with 421 acres, and in the 1809 list with 426 acres.¹⁸ His original log home is still standing, having been twice moved to other locations by later owners. It stands today on the original farm not far from its original site, now owned by the heirs of Squire R. E. Masterson, Masterson Road, Knox County. The home of Squire Masterson stands on the original site.

He died at his home in Knox County, in July 1809, his will being probated at the July 1809 Term of Court.⁹ His grave is in the family burial plot, located on a hillside on the Masterson farm.

He married in Pennsylvania, about 1760, Esther Flenniken (b. Jan. 12, 1740; d. after April, 1822¹⁰), daughter of James Flenniken (q.v.) and Jane Gillespie. His brother, Thomas, married her sister, Mary.²

AG III JOHN DEARMOND II (1761-1834), Knox County, Tennessee

John Dearmond II, better known in later life as 'John Dearmond, Senior', son of John Dearmond I, and Esther Flenniken, was born in 1761⁶ either in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, or in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, after his parents had settled there. He served with the North Carolina militia in 1784, for which he received depreciation pay.¹ Sometime after 1784, he came with his father to East Tennessee and settled south of the Tennessee River in what is known today as Topside Community, Knox County. At first, apparently, he lived on his father's grant.

On February 2, 1805, he purchased a tract of land from Stockley Donelson which had been granted to Landon Carter by the State of North Carolina by patent number 1255, July 12, 1794, and which was located on "southside of Holston (now Tennessee) River."² The deed was issued to "John Dearmond Sr. of Blount County" although all court records which affected him throughout his life were recorded in Knox County. On June 9, 1809, he secured a land grant from the State of Tennessee for 422½ acres of land in Knox County, within the limits of the tract located for the use of academies on the Holston River.³ He is found in the 1806 tax lists for Knox County with 376 acres; in 1807 and 1808 with 367 acres; is not listed in 1809 and 1810, indicating that he may have sold not only his own holdings but also his share of his father's estate which was bequeathed to him at his father's death in 1809. In 1811 and 1812, he was taxed with the land which he had secured through the Tennessee land grant in 1809. It may be assumed that he purchased this grant with proceeds of the sale of his former holdings.⁴

He was a farmer, so far as is known, and also engaged in buying and selling of farm land.⁴ He held a prominent place in Knox County life since so many of his family events were recorded in the newspapers of that day. He died April 13, 1834, but his burial place is unknown.⁶ He, his wife, and daughter, Ellen, were members of the Second Presbyterian Church which was organized in 1818.

He married first, about 1780 in North Carolina, but there is no record extant of this marriage or his first wife's name.

He married second, September 26, 1798, Ellen Moore¹³ (b. c1775⁵), who survived her husband.⁷

AG III JAMES DEARMOND (1771-1831), Roane County, Tennessee

James Dearmond, son of John Dearmond and Esther Flenniken, was born July 3, 1771, in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina. He was named for his grandfather, James d'Armond, of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. He came, while still a youth, to Knox County, Tennessee, with his parents, and lived on his father's grant south of the Tennessee River, in what is known today as Toppside community. Early in his manhood, he joined with the pioneer settlers who accepted the job of resisting the Indian raids, and pushing them back from the encroaching white settlements. He was active in many skirmishes and engagements, and his personal courage and intrepidity was a telling factor wherever he appeared.

Breazeale recounts that in August 1794, Lieutenant (afterwards, Colonel) John McClellan was ordered to march toward the Cumberland Mountains to meet Captain Evans at Crab Orchard. On arrival at Crab Orchard, he found a letter from his captain stuck up on a pole set up in the road, directing him to return. They turned about, retraced their steps about a mile and a half to the foot of Spencer's Hill, where they encamped for the night. It had been raining all day and they commenced building fires without taking the precaution to draw the wet charges from their guns and re-load. Without receiving any warning, they found themselves suddenly surrounded by Indians, and cut off from most of their horses. General confusion of course ensued; McClellan, however, rallied his men as well as circumstances would allow, and they fought as they retreated, with the utmost valor and intrepidity, but many of them could not get their pieces to fire at all. Some of the men whose guns would not fire ran along the line priming for the others, when their guns happened to mis-fire. The Indians were twice repulsed, but they again rallied, and so far outnumbering the whites (there being about 100 Indians), McClellan was finally compelled to make a precipitate retreat up the mountain. Most of the men lost their horses and baggage; Lieutenant McClellan lost his. James Dearmond ran to his horse, cut the spangle from his legs, and mounted him barebacked, the halter being upon him. As he mounted, an Indian threw a tomahawk at him which grazed his head, but he escaped unhurt. He then followed his retreating companions up the mountain, and on overtaking them, McClellan halted and bawled out to his men, "Boys, make your escape—I can go no further—I am done—but pay no attention to me—take care of yourselves". Dearmond, hearing this, sprang from his horse and threw McClellan on him, exclaiming, "Now, lieutenant, make your escape; there is not a damned Indian in all the nation that can catch me." And McClellan did escape and so did Dearmond. McClellan lost four men killed and one was wounded.

The loss of the Indians was fifteen or twenty; they were seen to fall under the fire of McClellan's men.¹ James also served with Captain Houston's Company in 1808.

His father obtained North Carolina Grant number 635, dated August 23, 1788, for a tract of land in Roane County. James settled on this grant and developed it into a home for himself and family. On April 12, 1809, shortly before his father's death, his father deeded this tract of land to James,⁸ and it has remained in the family for over a hundred years. It was located on Little Emory River where it flows through a gap in Waldens Ridge. The Southern Railway eventually built its main line from Harriman to Knoxville by this site, and later constructed a branch line through the gap to the coal fields at Petros. This railroad junction point was designated as DeArmond Station. James was undoubtedly one of the first settlers in that section, and served on the first jury of Roane County in 1801.

He died at his home on March 1, 1831, and is buried in DeArmond Graveyard on Little Emory River, near Harriman. The finest tribute to his life is contained in his obituary, which reads: "Died at his residence in Roane County on the third instant, James Dearmond, aged upwards of 60 years. He was an ardent friend, a firm and unyielding Republican,² and a devoted patriot, of which he gave many proofs through the whole course of life but especially in the war which the Cherokees waged upon the first settlers of this country. In those perilous times when the helpless female and tender infant had no shield to defend them from savage barbarity save the bosom of the soldier, the deceased was one of their most bold and intrepid defenders. He accompanied the celebrated Governor Sevier in nearly all his campaigns against the Indians, frequently acted as spy, and was always exposed to imminent danger, in consequence of which he became almost proverbial for his personal activity and bravery. And his last efforts in defense of his country were in the late war with the Creek Indians, where he also distinguished himself. He has left a large family, most of whom are females, together with many relatives and friends to mourn their hapless lot."³

He married, March 16, 1802, Susan Shaden (b. Sept. 1, 1786, in Va.; d. Feb. 18, 1869, Roane County, Tenn.)¹⁶ She was a small, gracious and energetic woman who ruled her family with a firm hand. She played the harpsichord and must have been a beautiful woman in her youth, since her daughters were famous for their beauty.

AG III DAVID FLENNIKEN DEARMOND, Sr. (1775-1834), East Feliciana Parish, La.

David Flenniken Dearmond, Sr., son of John Dearmond of Knox County, Tennessee, and Esther Flenniken, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, about 1775, and was named for his mother's brother, David Flenniken, one of the signers of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence. He was brought to East Tennessee by his parents soon after 1784, and grew to manhood on his father's grant in what is known today as Topside Community, Knox County. He left Knox County about 1802 in company with his cousin, Samuel Dearmond, and another cousin, Joseph F. Flenniken. They followed the Natchez Trace to Mississippi Territory,¹ and about 1803, moved into Louisiana which was then a part of West Florida, a Spanish possession.² He and his cousin, Samuel Dearmond, undoubtedly staked out their possessions about the same time, although they were some several miles distant from each other. His plantation, bisected by Sandy Creek and north of the plantation later held by his cousin, Thomas Flenniken D'Armond, was only slightly smaller than Samuel's plantation, and consisted of 639.90 acres. It was about 3 miles east of Clinton, in East Feliciana Parish, and near what is known today as D'Armond Hill.³

He was a successful planter and slave owner, and held his plantation intact until his death when it was divided between his widow and his children.⁴ He reared a large family,⁵ all of whom survived him but his son, James. He died in 1834, after January, since he made a conveyance to his son, David, Jr., on January 29, 1834.⁷

He married Elizabeth Mc — (b. 1776, S. C.)⁸ She survived her husband by many years,⁹ and was still listed as a woman of means as late as 1850. She maintained her home since some of her children were still minors¹⁰ and operated the plantation with the help of her sons.¹¹ The date of her death has not been established.

AG III WILLIAM DEARMOND (c1775-b1830), Meigs County, Tennessee

William Dearmond, son of John Dearmond of Knox County, Tennessee, and Esther Flenniken, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, about 1775. He was brought to Knox County, Tennessee, by his parents between 1784 and 1787, and helped his father and brothers carve a home from the wilderness on his father's grant, located at the confluence of the Tennessee and Little rivers, now Topside Community.

He married in 1805 and built a home near his father's home. He is listed in the Knox County, Tennessee, tax lists for 1806 and 1807, with 13 acres of land and one white poll; in the 1808 and 1809 lists, he appears without land and taxed only for one white poll. In 1810, he was taxed with 178½ acres, apparently his inheritance under his father's will which was probated in 1809. In 1811, he was listed with 113½ acres, and in 1812, with 100 acres.⁹

At his father's death in 1809, he was named as one of the executors in his father's will, and was qualified in July, 1809.² On December 19, 1809, he sold to his brother, Richard Johnston Dearmond, 45 acres of land, from his portion of his father's estate. On January 4, 1811, he sold 49½ acres of his land to John Jordan. On Feb. 24, 1812, he sold to Reuben Tipton, 19 acres of land "which he inherited from Estate of John Dearmond, deceased".³ These sales totaled 113½ acres, and likely constituted the entire land holdings William had received from his father's estate. On July 4, 1810, a suit against him by Solomon Geron was dismissed by Court, and he was authorized to recover against plaintiff for his court costs.⁴

After the War of 1812, Richard Waterhouse engaged in extensive land speculations in the Tennessee River valley in Rhea County. Since William and Waterhouse were friends, it appears certain that he was influenced by Waterhouse to move to Rhea County. William's grandson, John Boss DeArmond, told the author that his grandfather came down the Tennessee River in flat-boats, and settled first in what is now Rhea County, and later settled across the river in what is now Meigs County. The first census listings show William's wife, Mary, as the head of the family in 1830, indicating that William was by then deceased.⁵

William married, March 6, 1805, Knox County, Tennessee,¹ Polly Wandless (b. 1775; d. a1840, Meigs County, Tenn.). Mary was listed as the head of the household in the 1830 census for Meigs County,⁵ and in the 1840 census for Meigs County, she was listed as living with her son, John.⁶ Since she is not found in the 1850 census, she must have died after 1840.

AG III RICHARD JOHNSTON DEARMOND (1778-1863), Knox County, Tennessee

Richard Johnston Dearmond,¹ son of John Dearmond and Esther Flenniken, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in 1778.² He was brought by his parents to Knox County, Tennessee, as a small boy, between 1784 and 1787. One wonders how and where he was able to obtain his education in that virgin forested country, for he, his father and his brothers must have been fully occupied from dawn till dark with the task of building a log home, clearing the forests in order to grow necessary food, and the construction of the tubmill which his father built and placed in operation not later than 1787.³

Being the youngest son, Richard remained at home after his brothers had moved out to set up their own homes. He married about 1805 and was shown in the tax lists as living apart from his parents until his father's death. He was listed in 1806 as Richard J. Dearmond with one white poll but no land, and did not appear in the 1807 list. He was listed in the 1808 and 1809 tax lists with one white poll. He appeared in the 1810, 1811, and 1812 lists as Richard Dearmond, with 219 acres of land, evidently his inheritance under the will of his father who died in 1809.⁴ Since his "house" is mentioned in his father's will, apparently it was built on a part of his father's land. Under his father's will, Richard inherited a substantial portion of his father's 500 acres located between the Tennessee and Little rivers, now Topside Community, including the large family log home.⁴ This site is owned today by the Masterson family descendants by virtue of their inheritance from Richard's second wife, Lucy Ritchie (Masterson).

After his first wife's death, Richard attempted to maintain his home alone. There is a family legend that Richard would swim the Tennessee River on his way to market at Knoxville, tying his clothes on his back to keep them dry. The children, perforce, were left to their own devices, and they would play on the bank of the river, the older children swimming out to what is now known as Williams Island, leaving the younger ones playing on the sand at the water's edge, never seeming to fear that they might fall in the river and drown. On one occasion, a neighbor came by and found the baby,

Eliza, asleep on the bank, and the other children on the island hunting for turtle eggs. Upon being apprised of their conduct by the neighbor, Richard meted out punishment which remained vivid in their memories throughout their lives.¹

He died in 1863 at the age of 85, and is probably buried in the family graveyard located on the old home place along with his first wife, although no headstones can be identified today other than as grave markers. He bequeathed the home to his second wife, Lucy, a gift of money to his daughter, Vandalie, and to his wife's grandson, Richard Masterson, of whom he was very fond; and the remainder of his estate to the children of his first marriage.⁸

He married first, about 1805, Rhoda Hence (or Hinch), of whom nothing is known except her name.⁵ She died in 1818, either at the birth of her daughter, Eliza, or shortly thereafter, and is undoubtedly buried in the family graveyard on the home place.

He married second, Lucy Ritchie (Masterson), a widow, (b. 1788, Va.)² whom he had brought into his home to be housekeeper for his children.

AG IV JOHN DeARMOND III (1780-1856), McMinn County, Tennessee

John DeArmond III, better known as John DeArmond, Jr., son of John DeArmond II, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, about 1780, before his father and grandfather had settled in East Tennessee.¹ He came to Knox County, Tennessee, with his parents as a small boy, after 1784, and grew to manhood on his grandfather's farm.

In January 1804, he was appointed a member of a jury of view to mark a public road from Thos. Rhea's old place, which was to cross the road at Calvin Johnson's place.¹¹ On June 26, 1810, he secured a land grant from the State of Tennessee for 466 acres of land in Knox County "located within the tract located for the use of Academies in the District south of the French Broad and Holston rivers, on Holston River".³ He was taxed in Knox County in 1812 with 1 poll, no land.¹⁰ On August 1, 1825, he took title to 6 acres adjoining and above his land grant.⁴ On January 5, 1834, he conveyed to G. W. Churchwell, all interest and title in estate of his father "John Dearmond of Blount County",⁵ although his father did not die until three months after the contract was made.

Prior to 1830, he moved to McMinn County, Tennessee, where he spent the remainder of his life.^{1, 2} These southern counties of East Tennessee were being gradually cleared of Indians, and young men from the older Knox County settlements were rapidly moving in and taking possession of the uncleared virgin land. He died in McMinn County, Tennessee in 1856, as his will was executed June 7, 1856, and probated the same year.⁷

He married, June 4, 1811, in Knox County, Annie Burnett (b. c1785).⁶ The date of her death is not known but she must have predeceased her husband since he did not mention her in his will.

AG IV JOHN DeARMOND (1808-1896), Roane County, Tennessee

John DeArmond, son of James Dearmond and Susan Shadden, was born on his father's farm on Little Emory River, in Roane County, Tennessee, October 30, 1808, the postoffice which was later established being Webster. He grew to manhood there, and continued to make it his home after his marriage, making a home for his family and his spinster sisters, until his death. He became one of the leading citizens of Roane County; was a pioneer in the development of the coal mining area in his county, and a promoter and stockholder in the Harriman Coal, Iron & Railway Company, which ran from Harriman to DeArmond Station; and many other enterprises for the development of local resources. He dealt extensively in real estate and coal lands; operated a general merchandising business at Webster near his home for many years. At one time and certainly in 1872, he was engaged in business as DeArmond & Langley, selling wines and liquors. He became a man of considerable wealth, and was a great influence in county progress and politics.

During the Civil War, he operated the coal mines in his area under authorization of the Union military authorities, and supplied large amounts of coal to the Union army blacksmith shops. From his merchandising enterprises, he also supplied large quantities of food to the military. Receipts given by the military for these purchases are in family documents preserved today.¹ He was never paid for any of these supplies, his action in the United States Court of Claims about 1893 having been denied on technical grounds, the total as given by him being $3535.91, no interest being computed.

He remained quite active in his business interests until shortly before his death which occurred at his home, May 21, 1896.²

He married, October 29, 1863, Caledonia Bowers (b. Oct. 8, 1842; d. Nov. 11, 1927), daughter of a Methodist minister; William Ellis, J. P., officiating.³

"Harriman, Tenn., May 24: Col. John DeArmond, Sr. died at his residence four miles northeast of this city, May 21, and was buried yesterday in the family cemetery in the presence of from 200 to 300 relatives and friends, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. Jas. C. Wright, D. D., of Harriman. Col. DeArmond's father was one of the pioneers of this section of country, having settled here prior to 1780, when Tennessee was a part of North Carolina, and Indians and game of the larger order were superabundant. The old gentleman was one of the heroes of the great and decisive Battle of King's Mountain, where so many brave Tennesseans fought the foe. Col. John DeArmond was born at Little Emory Gap, formerly called DeArmond's Gap, in honor of its first settler, October 30, 1808, Little Emory Gap being within one mile of the beautiful home in which the grand old man departed this life. He was married to Miss Caledonia Bowers, Oct. 29, 1863. His wife and eight children, four boys and four girls, ranking among the best people of the county, survive him. During the war, Col. DeArmond was a true Union man, and was very helpful to the loyal men who went from East Tennessee to join the federal army, being himself too old for enlistment, but he served faithfully as a pilot. He has lived all these years in this community, a leader and an honored man, a farmer, merchant, and trader, and by industry and honesty he acquired a snug fortune to leave to his children. He was a kind man to the poor and helpful to his neighbors, a man whose business advice to them was always safe. While not a church member, he expressed himself as satisfied of his future salvation. A good, useful man has gone to his reward, and the noble old patriarch will be missed by hosts of people. Harriman Post, G.A.R., held memorial services this evening in the Universalist church, and was ably addressed by Rev. J. C. Wright. The post was out en masse, and a large audience attended. The mission though a sad one, was beautifully impressive, and carried the old veterans back through memory's vale to days of actual soldiering."

Author's Note: Our subject's father, James Dearmond, did not come to East Tennessee until 1784 or later; his participation in the Battle of King's Mountain is improbable because of his tender age at that date, and no record of his participation has been found.

AG IV JOHN DeARMOND (1810-1867), Meigs County, Tennessee

John DeArmond, son of William Dearmond and Polly Wandless, was born in Knox County, Tennessee, in 1810. Later, his father moved down the Tennessee River in flatboats to what is now Rhea County, and settled on the west bank of the river, but afterwards settled on the east side of the river in what is now Meigs County.¹ Here John grew to manhood and received what education was available in the area county schools. He was recorded for land and poll tax in 1827 and 1828.²

He volunteered for service during the Mexican War, 1846-1847, and enlisted in a company of volunteers from Rhea County, organized by Richard Waterhouse,³ and was listed as a private. He was also shown in Captain Gillespie's Company, same district, from Oct. 4, 1846, to June 14, 1847, as a private. He was wounded at the Battle of Cerro Gordo, in 1847.⁴ He was listed in the 1840 census as living at home with his mother and one sister. He appears in the 1850 census as living alone, occupation, farmer; his mother having died.⁴ He died Mar. 5, 1867, and an inventory of his estate was filed for probate, April 13, 1867.⁵

He married, April 1, 1851, Martha Hunter, daughter of Jacob (?) Hunter.⁶

AG IV DAVID FLENNIKEN DeARMOND (1807-1890), Knox County, Tennessee

David Flenniken DeArmond, son of Richard Johnston DeArmond and Rhoda Hence, was born at his father's home in present Topside community, Knox County, July 17, 1807, where he grew to manhood. His education was not extensive, being limited to the district schools available in the still primitive country which his grandfather had pioneered. As soon as he reached manhood, he left his father's home and began farming in the Seven Island community of Knox County, although the exact date of his removal there is not known. He was probably influenced in his decision to settle in that part of the county by the fact that his wife's parents were living in that area.

He established a large farm on a site overlooking French Broad River and Seven Islands, which he increased by constant and astute buying until it totaled some 800 acres, much of which was river bottom land. His home on the hill above commanded one of the finest views in the county, overlooking the mirror-like French Broad River as it swings around a bend after passing through the shoals at Sevens Island, with the bluffs on the opposite bank as background. He became postmaster at Gap Creek, which post he held for more than 30 years. He was also justice of the peace for a number of years, and was a democrat.³ The Court and trustee records of Knox County are replete with the recordings of his many activities, giving proof of his industry and influence in County affairs. He was a constant reader and kept abreast of the history of his day and of his country. He was anxious that his children enjoy the advantages of a good education, and willingly defrayed the cost for those of them interested in pursuing it. He died at his home, at the age of 83, November 9, 1890, and is buried in Seven Islands cemetery.

He married, October 6, 1831, Sarah B. Hines¹ (b. Dec. 28, 1812; d. Sept. 13, 1883), daughter of Robert and Lavinia Hines.² She also is buried in Seven Islands cemetery.

AG IV JAMES DeARMOND (1809-1859), Knox County, Tennessee

James DeArmond, second son of Richard Johnston Dearmond and Rhoda Hence, was born March 16, 1809, at the home place in Knox County, Tennessee, where he grew to manhood. He became a farmer¹ and owned a farm in Knox County.² He died at the age of 50, June 28, 1859, and is buried in the family graveyard on the home place, now the Squire Masterson farm, Masterson Road, in Topside community, Knox County. A headstone was later placed by his two sons.

He married, March 8, 1849, at the age of 40, Nancy Childress (b. Oct. 5, 1831; d. March 1920; g. Salem chyd, Blount County, Tenn.), William C. Tipton, J. P., officiating.³ She was a very tall, slender woman, of great courage, energy and determination. After the death of her husband, being still a young woman, she married, February 18, 1860, James S. Spicer, N. B. Williams officiating,³ by whom she had issue. After a few years he also died, and she later married a Mr. Manus, by whom she also had issue. She owned and lived on a farm at Tipton Station, Blount County, Tenn., and after the death of her third husband, ran the farm and reared her children, alone. She continued to live there until her death.

AG IV ANGELINE DeARMOND (1813-1847), Cherokee County, Alabama

Angeline DeArmond, daughter of Richard Johnston Dearmond and Rhoda Hence, was born May 29, 1813, on the original home place, located on the Tennessee River, near its confluence with Little River, Knox County, Tennessee. Her mother died when she was about five years old, and she was reared by her stepmother. According to family legend, the children were not too happy at home, and all got away as soon as possible. It is likely that Angeline visited her Uncle James Dearmond in Roane County, and this visit may have been an extended affair. At any rate, her future husband was born in Roane County, and she must have met him there. They encountered considerable opposition to their marriage in her husband's family as they were strict Presbyterians and the DeArmond family were too fond of a good time for their taste. It is not clear whether they eloped in the face of this opposition or not, but since there is no record of their marriage in either Roane or Knox Counties, it is a logical assumption. She died Nov. 23, 1847, and is buried in Forest Hill c., Gaylesville, Ala.

She married about 1834, Lorenzo Dow Griffitts (b. Aug. 28, 1809, Roane County, Tenn.; d. July 18, 1882; g. Forest Hill c., Gaylesville, Ala.), son of Eli Griffitts.¹ He was a Presbyterian minister, and spent most of his adult life in Gaylesville, Alabama. Angeline died at the age of 34 while the children were very young but there is no record of who cared for them until they were grown. Angeline's sister, Eliza, came to live with her soon after Angeline's marriage, and although Eliza married before Angeline's death, it is possible that she acted as foster mother to Angeline's children.

AG IV ELISA DeARMOND (1818-1898), Cherokee County, Alabama

Elisa DeArmond, daughter of Richard Johnston Dearmond and Rhoda Hence, was born in 1818, on her father's farm, adjacent to the original home place of her grandfather, John Dearmond, on the Tennessee River in present Topside community, Knox County, Tennessee. Her mother died shortly after her birth and she was cared for by her older sisters until her father remarried. Her sister, Angeline, married about 1834 and settled in Cherokee County, Alabama, and wrote urging Eliza to come and live with her. Elisa did so, and never returned to her father's home.

She was described by her granddaughter, the author's mother, as a gay, lively woman, with a dry sharp sense of humor, and little patience with the foibles of old age so often indulged in by the aged. After the death of her husband in 1886, she lived with her son, Lorenzo Dow McCalman.¹ Her daughter, Talitha, moved to Texas after the death of her husband, and became ill with tuberculosis. Elisa went by train sometime after 1894¹ to live with Talitha and care for her children. The work and exposure were too much for her advanced age and she contracted pneumonia, and died about 1898.³ Her grave is at Collinsville, Texas.

She married, about 1842,⁴ John Scott McCalman² (b. Jan. 9, 1814; d. May, 1886), a farmer and large land owner. He was justice of the peace at Gaylesville for 30 or 40 years.

AG IV VANDALIE DeARMOND (1822-1897), Knoxville, Tennessee

Vandalie DeArmond, daughter of Richard Johnston Dearmond and Lucy Ritchie, was born in Knox County, Tennessee, January 5, 1822, in the original family log home in present Topside community. She grew to womanhood there but married at an early age, and afterwards lived at the old Gossett home place at Maynardville, Tennessee. After the death of her husband, she lived on Laurel Avenue, Knoxville, in a cottage with a large sweeping lawn. She was a gracious, stately woman, who resembled strongly her father's people. She died September 17, 1897, and is buried in Woodlawn cemetery, Knoxville.⁴

She married, September 3, 1839,¹ Calvin Gossett (b. Oct. 14, 1815; d. April 5, 1851; g. Hansards Chapel, Maynardville, Tenn.), son of Calvin Calloway Gossett (d. 1852; g. Hansards Chapel; fought as a colonel under General Sam Houston).² He was an officer in the Knoxville Dragoons in 1846⁵ and an officer in a volunteer company in a Tennessee regiment in the Mexican War.⁴ He lived only 12 years after his marriage, and the task of rearing his two sons devolved on his widow.

"Mrs. Vandalie Gossett died at her home in West Knoxville at four o'clock yesterday morning, after an illness of a week. She was in the seventy-sixth year of her age. She was a native of Knox Co. and had lived here nearly her entire life. The date of her birth was January 5, 1822. Her husband, who died more than 40 years ago, Calvin Gossett, was an officer in a volunteer company in a Tennessee regiment in the Mexican war. Her two sons, who survive her, Volney F. and C. B. Gossett, served more than three years each in the union army in the last war. More than 40 years ago, she became a member of the Methodist church and has lived an honest, sincere Christian life.

Mrs. Gossett was a woman of more than ordinary intelligence and was endowed with extraordinary strength of character. In all the matters of life, she displayed an accuracy and a strength of discrimination, and a decision that stood her well and enabled her to grapple with life's problems successfully. Those who knew her best only, understood the full strength of her honest, virtuous life, and among those she was held in the highest respect and esteem. Funeral services will be held at the residence on Laurel Avenue at two o'clock. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery."

"Mr. John D. Chandler and Miss Lulu D'Armond were married Tuesday evening last at the home of the bride's mother. Both parties are well known to the people of Harriman. Mr. Chandler is a leading merchant at Petros, and a highly respected citizen, while the bride is one of Roane County's most beautiful and popular young ladies. The ceremony was beautifully performed by Chaplain J. C. Wright of Athens, and in the presence of a large number of friends of the contracting parties. The attendants of the bride and groom were Misses Alice Ayres, of Harriman; Dora Brasel and Cora Kelly, of Petros, and Messrs. S. A. Breaseale, Esq., of Kingston; Percy Chandler, Esq., of Harriman, and C. H. Brasel, of Chattanooga. Soon after the wedding the contracting parties left on the southbound train for Chattanooga and other southern points but will soon be at home to their many friends at Petros, where Mr. Chandler's business interests are at present."

2. Religious Herald, Richmond, Va., March 23, 1905.

"The death in his 87th year, at his home in Richmond a few days since of Captain Thomas T. Chandler, should be accorded something more than the simple announcement given in the secular papers. He was the oldest son of the Rev. Rufus Chandler, an A.M. of Yale College, and a scholar who is credited with the establishment of the first grade academy in Virginia. It was located in Caroline County on the North Anna river, two miles from Doswell, and was widely known as Little Yale. At this school Capt. Chandler was educated. The name of the school became the name of the home where, after a few years passed as a surveyor in the West, and as a railroad man, he lived as a farmer until sixteen years ago, when he moved to Richmond to educate his daughters and be with his boys, three of whom were railroad men, with headquarters in the city. Three of his daughters are full graduates of the best Virginia schools and two of his sons are well known lawyers in Tennessee. (by J., Fork Union, Va.)

AG V JAMES DeARMOND (1832-1902), Knoxville, Tennessee

James DeArmond, son of David Flenniken DeArmond and Sarah B. Hines, was born at Gap Creek, Knox County, Tennessee, in the Seven Island Community, August 18, 1832. He obtained his education in the county schools of his neighborhood, and moved to Knoxville as a young man where he engaged in the milling industry. During the Civil War, he was conscripted to operate the grist mill on his father's plantation and was not permitted to volunteer for other military service due to the urgent need of the grain products to feed the troops. He later moved to Kingston, Tennessee, where he operated a grist mill. He moved back to Knoxville in May 1867, in order to afford better educational facilities for his children. He established his home on South Central Street near the corner of Church Avenue, which was a good residential neighborhood at that time. Later, as the neighborhood began to deteriorate, he moved his residence to Hannah Avenue, where he lived the remainder of his life. After his return to Knoxville, he leased the old Scott flour mill located at the corner of Central Street and Clinch Avenue, which he operated for many years. George Peters, who later operated the Peters & Bradley Milling Company, was his head miller for years. In later years, James was a member of the Knoxville Police Department. He was a faithful Baptist, a great Bible student, and a member of the old First Baptist Church on Gay Street. His face was as familiar in the congregation as that of Captain W. W. Woodruff, as they sat near each other in all services, and were lifelong friends. He died, July 1902, and is buried in Island Home churchyard, Knoxville.

AG V LORENZO DOW DeARMOND (1834-1909), Kimberlin Heights, Tenn.

Lorenzo Dow DeArmond, son of David Flenniken DeArmond and Sarah B. Hines, was born at Gap Creek, Knox County, Tennessee, in the Seven Island community, July 25, 1834. He was his father's second child and was named for a famous evangelist of the period. His education was obtained from the county schools in his neighborhood. He became a farmer and owned and operated a farm adjacent to his father's extensive holdings. In 1882, when his youngest child was about 2 years old, he moved to Knoxville and lived in a brick house on West Cumberland Avenue, at the corner of Crozier (now South Central) Street. Directly across Cumberland Avenue on the opposite corner lived Christopher Columbus Nelson, father of Frank Nelson, noted Knoxville musician. Diagonally across the intersection on the northwest corner, was the home of the Jenkins family, parents of Kyle, Nelle and Charles. Halfway up the first block on Crozier Street, between Cumberland and Church Avenues, lived Lorenzo Dow's brother, James. There was no bridge or viaduct over Crozier Street at Church Avenue in those days, and the neighborhood was a good one. Lorenzo Dow operated a fleet of transfer wagons and a grocery store on Crozier Street adjacent to his home. His son, John, assisted him in the grocery enterprise. He remained in Knoxville about 10 years, and then when his son, John, entered business elsewhere in partnership with Will H. Roberts, he returned to his farm, but neither his wife nor his daughters were content there. They returned to Knoxville, and his wife secured a divorce.

Lorenzo Dow lived out the remainder of his life on his farm. He was a tall, lanky man, with gray eyes and sandy brown hair; possessed of a quick, fiery temper, of quick and unhesitating decisions, and rigid adherence to a conviction once arrived at. He was a man of little compromise but loyal to those who measured up to his standards. Two incidents exemplify his nature. A Knoxville man recounted to the author that he lived as a small boy adjacent to "Uncle Dow" DeArmond's farm and knew him quite well. Lorenzo Dow was in dispute with a neighbor about the ownership of a certain pasture strip. One day while he was in Knoxville, the neighbor went into the field with some helpers and mowed the hay. When Lorenzo Dow reached home, the neighbors were binding the hay. Lorenzo Dow got his shotgun and approached the field and yelled, "What're you doing in my pasture? Get out or I'll blow you out!" The neighbor began an argument about the ownership of the pasture but Lorenzo's only answer was the sound of a shell being injected into his shotgun. Knowing his reputation, the neighbor and his friends departed and tarried not in their going. The other incident involved our informant himself. He and some other boys tree'd an opossum in a tall, straight "chestnut oak" on Lorenzo Dow's farm which they could not climb because of its lack of limbs. One boy suggested that they cut it down but our lad proposed to get "Uncle Dow's" permission but none of the other boys would accompany him because of Lorenzo's reputation for violence, so he went alone and knocked on Lorenzo's door at midnight. Lorenzo Dow came to the door after some delay and asked who was there and what he wanted. The boy identified himself and told of the opossum and the tree. "Why don't you cut it down?", asked Lorenzo without hesitation. "But, Uncle Dow, it's the finest chestnut oak you've got", remonstrated the boy. "What difference does that make", said Lorenzo, "it'll make good firewood, won't it? Chop it down." And with that, he closed the door, turned out the light, and went back to bed.

He died at his home, August 6, 1909, and is buried in Seven Island cemetery.

He married first, January 28, 1858,¹ Talitha Angeline Keener (b. Dec. 19, 1835, Seven Island community, Knox County, Tenn.; d. July 18, 1901, Knoxville; g. Woodlawn c.), daughter of Abraham Keener² and Nancy Pitner, Reverend John N. Bowman, officiating. Her father died in 1850 and she was living, prior to her marriage, with her uncle, Leroy Scothern Keener, whose farm adjoined that of Lorenzo Dow's father. She was a small, black-haired, black-eyed girl, this coloring being characteristic of the earlier members of the Keener family. After she divorced her husband, she and her daughters returned to Knoxville and purchased a home on McCammon Avenue. She later sold this home to her son, John Rosecrans, and purchased another home farther east on the same street which remained her home until her death. Her children continued to live there until they married.

AG V DAVID DUNCAN DeARMOND (1836-1917), Kimberlin Heights, Tenn.

David Duncan DeArmond, son of David Flenniken DeArmond and Sarah B. Hines, was born at Gap Creek, Knox County, Tenn., Dec. 9, 1836. He grew to manhood on his father's farm and was educated in the neighborhood county schools. He was a farmer all of his life, owning a farm at Kimberlin Heights, near his father's farm. He was a great fiddler, and was frequently a participant in fiddling contests and exhibitions. He was photographed in 1886, on the stage of the old Market Hall in Knoxville, with Bob Taylor, famous Tennessee democrat who later became governor, Shed Armstrong, and Bartley Giffin, where the four participated in a public contest in old-time fiddling.¹ He was a tall, slender man, with large brown eyes and quite handsome in his youth; a quiet mannered person, well liked and respected in his community. He had a rugged constitution and thought nothing of completing a visit with relatives in Knoxville late in the evening and returning to his home at Kimberlin Heights, making the trip on foot, a distance of about 15 miles. He died, Dec. 25, 1917, at the age of 81, and is buried in Seven Islands cemetery.

AG V GEORGE WASHINGTON DeARMOND (1843-1871), Riceville, Tenn.

George Washington DeArmond, son of David Flenniken DeArmond and Sarah B. Hines, was born in the Seven Islands community of Knox County, Tennessee, January 21, 1843. The Civil War broke out when he was but 18 years old and he enlisted almost immediately. Having a frail constitution, the rigours of army life of that period were too much for him to withstand, and he developed tuberculosis and was invalided home. Aferwards attended medical school at Philadelphia, where he graduated in medicine. He set up his practice at Riceville, Tennessee. He lived only a few years more and died, February 11, 1871, of the disease contracted during his war service.

He married at Riceville, Ossie McClary, who survived her husband by only six years, and died in 1877.

AG V DR. CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS DeARMOND (1847-1925), Knoxville, Tenn.

Dr. Christopher Columbus DeArmond, son of David Flenniken DeArmond and Sarah B. Hines, was born at Gap Creek, Knox County, Tennessee, January 12, 1847. He grew up on his father's farm and attended the neighboring schools. He afterwards studied medicine one term at Philadelphia, and completed his study at Louisville, where he received his doctorate in medicine. He practiced at Knoxville, and became noted for his successful treatment of fever cases. It was said he had a record of never having lost a fever case. His colleagues respected his skill in this field, and when one of them had a difficult fever case, he called in Dr. DeArmond as consultant. His practice was wide, and he was a familiar figure on the streets of Knoxville, either on foot or in his buggy. He was a tall, spare man of quiet dignity and serene disposition. He maintained offices in the Empire Building at Market Street and Church Avenue, and his home on Sevier Avenue at the corner of Davenport Road. He died, October 30, 1925, at the age of 78, and is buried in Woodlawn cemetery.

He married, June 30, 1869, Emily McCallie (b. July 31, 1850; d. Feb. 12, 1921; g. Woodlawn c.), daughter of Andrew J. McCallie and Harriet Cunningham.

AG VI FRANCIS MARION DeARMOND (1868-), Seymour, Missouri

Francis Marion DeArmond, son of William Blount DeArmond and Mary Cook, was born in a community called the Hindoo Nation, near Duncan, Wright County, Missouri, February 18, 1868. His father died when he was a small child, and while still a boy he went to work as a farm laborer. Later, he worked on the construction of the Frisco Railroad's Kansas City-to-Memphis line. The family home in "the nation" was blown away, and Francis Marion and his mother were injured in the Marshfield tornado which devastated that section in 1881. He lacked the advantage of more than a few month's schooling but became a very successful farmer.

He married, October 18, 1886, Londa Rush (b. Dec. 16, 1866), daughter of Absalom Rush (b. 1813, Davidson County, N. C.) and Mary Goss (b. Davidson County, N. C.).

AG VI GEORGE EMERSON DeARMOND (1865-1901), Knoxville, Tennessee

George Emerson DeArmond, son of James DeArmond and Charlotte Elizabeth Wrinkle, was born at Kingston, Tennessee, June 6, 1865, but was brought to Knoxville when his father returned there with his family in 1867. He obtained his education in Knoxville public schools, and was the only boy in his graduating class. The high school was then located on West Main Avenue, and his sister, Sarah Jane, was attending the same school when he graduated. He became a teacher in Knoxville schools and earned an outstanding reputation for leadership and discipline among his students, many of whom are prominent citizens today. His career is best described by the following quotation from a newspaper article: "Professor George DeArmond, known as 'Flop'¹ DeArmond, taught school in the old Hampden Sydney School, and was well beloved by every boy. He was considered one of the finest instructors in the city schools at that time, and was later sent to the Bell House school to rule over a group of young bucks who had found it impossible to get along with any other teacher in the city schools. It was said that he made a great success with these chaps and with a little coaxing and much flogging finally made men out of the majority of his charges."²

He afterwards studied medicine, and was a practicing physician at the time of his death. He was a man of strong will, forceful personality and sharp wit, and this combination made him a formidable opponent in any verbal exchange or battle of wits.

His qualities of leadership plus his personal charm brought him many friends and admirers. He died, Feb. 1901, aged 36, of a heart ailment, and is buried in Island Home Baptist churchyard, Knoxville.

He married, May 2, 1889, Katie McGlothen³ (b. Dec. 15, 1874), daughter of Charles McGlothen (b. Lynchburg, Va.; g. Old Gray c., Knoxville) and Caledonia Cummings (b. Louisville, Tenn.; g. Third Creek c., Knox County), O. L. Harley, officiating. Katie was a student in high school and George was a teacher there when they met, fell in love and married, she being only 14 years old.

AG VI ARTHUR DeARMOND (1874-1921), Knoxville, Tennessee

Arthur DeArmond, son of James DeArmond and Charlotte Elizabeth Wrinkle, was born September 26, 1874, Knoxville, Tennessee. He obtained his education in the city schools of Knoxville. He was a man of special gifts, and it is the opinion of the writer who knew him that he could have succeeded at any enterprise he might have undertaken. He was warmhearted, deeply sympathetic, and very loyal to his family and friends. His time, talents and pocketbook were always ready for any member of his family in distress and there is no doubt but that his generosity was often abused. He told the writer that on one occasion the superintendent of the old Knoxville water pumping station became suddenly ill and there was no one else who understood the worn and temperamental pumps, so Arthur without authorization or recognition, then or later from the City authorities, took over and nursed the pumps and other equipment until the superintendent was able to return, and kept the city water supply at normal. For a man of his abilities and varied interests to do this was incomprehensible to the author but it was so characteristic of Arthur that he gave it no thought and expected no recognition. He engaged in many enterprises and maintained a high standard of living for his family. He died of a heart ailment, June 26, 1921, and is buried in Greenwood cemetery, Knoxville.

He married, February 19, 1896, at the age of 22, Johanna Wilhemine Clara Haupt (b. Oct. 6, 1873, Knoxville; d. April 17, 1949, Bluefield, W. Va.), daughter of Johann Friedrich Haupt (b. Feb. 15, 1825, Mulhausen, Prussia; m. Sept. 30, 1858, New York City) and his second wife, Johanna Wilhemine Clara Begilsky (b. Aug. 13, 1838, Berlin, Prussia; d. Oct. 31, 1877, Knoxville; g. first in family graveyard on home place north of Sixth Avenue, removed to Old Gray c. in 1895).¹ Clara was a tall, graceful woman who maintained a charming home and dispensed hospitality with a prodigal hand. She was cherished by her husband and daughter, was a lover of flowers, birds and pets and had an endless procession of friends in spite of her quiet nature. After the death of her husband and the marriage of her daughter, she continued to live at her home on Leonard Place, Knoxville, for several years. Later, she made her home with her daughter at Bluefield, West Virginia. She enjoyed perfect health and an erect, graceful carriage, until her sudden and only illness which terminated in her death. She is buried in Greenwood cemetery, Knoxville.³

Alexander Hamilton DeArmond, son of Lorenzo Dow DeArmond and Talitha Angeline Keener, was born at Kimberlin Heights, Knox County, Tennessee, January 28, 1859. He grew up on his father's farm and came to Knoxville when the family removed there, where he continued to live throughout his life. Being a shy, retiring man and addicted to a full beard, he earned the reputation of being almost a recluse and had few friends. Those who knew him well, however, found him to be a likeable and kind person. He died August 25, 1933.

John Rosecrans DeArmond, son of Lorenzo Dow DeArmond and Talitha Angeline Keener, was born at Kimberlin Heights, Knox County, Tennessee, July 18, 1863. He spent his childhood on his father's farm, received his education from the neighborhood county schools, and at the age of 19 came to Knoxville when his father moved there in 1882. His father operated a grocery business near the corner of Cumberland Avenue and Crozier (now S. Central) Street and John helped his father run the business. A few years later, John left his father and opened a business in partnership with Will H. Roberts¹ on Clinch Avenue, just east of Crozier Street. He also engaged in a broom manufacturing enterprise for a short time. Later, he bought out his partner and operated the business as an individual until his death. At this time, a number of prominent families still lived in that neighborhood, and even though his mature life was a short one, he was well known and liked by many of the business people of Knoxville.² He was an industrious, hard working man, with a strong sense of economy, and very ambitious to make a success of himself. He was over six feet tall, with an erect carriage, and inherited the dominant family characteristics of bold features, sandy brown hair and gray eyes. He was a great tease but quite affectionate and sympathetic. He was a member of the old Park Street Christian Church. He died October 20, 1902, at the age of 39, of acute Brights Disease, after only a few days illness, and is buried in Woodlawn cemetery, Knoxville.

He married first, January 23, 1889,³ Nancy Alice Roberts (b. Oct. 28, 1867; d. Feb. 9, 1891; g. Old Gray c., Knoxville), daughter of John Harrison Roberts and Jane Pollard (b. 1849; d. Oct. 3, 1933), and a granddaughter of Houston Roberts (b. Abingdon, Va., of Scotch-Irish ancestry). Ashley S. Johnson, who later became the president of Johnson Bible College, Kimberlin Heights, was the officiating minister. She was a pretty, dark haired girl, with blue eyes and of a gentle, demure disposition.

He married second, February 22, 1892,⁴ Knoxville, Loudema Vashti McCalman (b. Oct. 26, 1869, Gaylesville, Ala.; d. May 13, 1951, Knoxville), daughter of Lorenzo Dow McCalman⁵ and Harriet Mahala Hurley. The marriage was held in the parlors of the First Baptist Church of Knoxville, Reverend Carter Helm Jones, the pastor, officiating. Loudema Vashti grew up in Cherokee County, Alabama, and went to boarding school at Gaylesville, and later taught school near her home. She met her future husband while visiting her cousin, Sarah Jane DeArmond (q.v.). All three were cousins.⁶ After John's death, Shirley Lee Ernest went to live with his maternal grandmother and Loudema Vashti moved to West Knoxville, and set up a dressmaking shop to support herself and small son. She continued this work until her son grew up and assumed the responsibilities of the home. She had a serious illness in 1919 and spent several winters at Sarasota, Florida, regaining her health. After her son's marriage in 1924, she made her home in Florida until 1945, when failing health required that she be brought to Knoxville by her son. She died at Knoxville and is buried in Highland Memorial cemetery. She was a young woman of great beauty at the time of her marriage, with wavy chestnut brown hair, large brown eyes, and a creamy complexion. She proved to be a woman of courage and resourcefulness, and very generous natured. She was outspoken and often critical but in spite of these traits had a wide circle of friends in all walks of life. She possessed a keen intellect that was rarely deceived.

AG VI ELIZABETH NARCISSUS DeARMOND (1880-), Orlando, Florida

Elizabeth Narcissus DeArmond, daughter of Lorenzo Dow DeArmond and Talitha Angeline Keener, was born at Kimberlin Heights, Tennessee, October 11, 1880. She was brought to Knoxville as a child and received her education in the public schools there. The author remembers her as a pretty, gay and warmhearted young girl who carried him with her on many occasions. After her second marriage, she has made her home at Orlando, Florida, where she has lived for many years. She and her husband have various real estate holdings there. She has a "green" thumb and also has an astounding gift for intricate and flawless needlework.

She married first, July 19, 1902, Walter Boyd Vandigriff (b. April 27, 1876; d. April 10, 1938), of Atlanta, Georgia, Rev. Robert Stewart, officiating.¹ She later divorced him.²

She married second, August 6, 1914, Orlando, Florida, William Henry Smith (b. Dec. 1, 1879), son of Edward John Smith. He was chief of police at Orlando for many years; is now retired (1953). Issue: none.

AG VI MOLLY ETHA DeARMOND (1885-), Bellflower, California

Molly Etha DeArmond, daughter of William Alexander DeArmond and Harriet Swaggerty, was born at Kimberlin Heights, Tennessee, May 29, 1885. She grew to young womanhood on her father's farm but since her marriage has lived in California.

She married, August 27, 1912, San Bernardino, California, Christopher Columbus McGinty (b. Aug. 15, 1879, Taylor County, Iowa), son of James Henry McGinty (b. July 13, 1841, Decatur County, Ind.; d. Feb. 19, 1912) and Nancy Jane DeLong (b. Dec. 7, 1845, Indiana; d. Feb. 26, 1914). He lived as a boy in Kansas and Nebraska, and got no schooling until he was 12 years old, and only 2 months out of 12 most years. At the age of 17 he was nearly blinded by an accidental powder explosion and was 29 years old before he could continue his education. He entered Johnson Bible College, Kimberlin Heights, Tennessee, in 1908, where he remained until April, 1912. He then went to San Bernardino, California, where he and Molly Etha were married. Afterwards, he attended Philips Bible Seminary, Canton, Ohio, until 1914, when he returned to California because of his mother's death. In 1915, he entered Drake University at Des Moines, Iowa, as a part time student due to high cost of living during World War I. After the war, he entered public school work, and continued to improve himself by two summer courses at State Agricultural College, Ames, Iowa. In 1923, he returned to San Bernardino, where he continued in the teaching profession. After summer courses at University of Southern California, he entered State Teachers College, Santa Barbara, 1924. He graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in education in 1927. Afterwards, attended summer classes at David State Agricultural College in 1928, and continued to teach until 1933. The low income received by most educators, and his growing family forced him to return to the building trade which he had learned as a young man, and he is now a licensed general contractor, and living at Bellflower, California.

AG VII SHIRLEY LEE ERNEST DeARMOND (1889-1948), Knoxville, Tennessee

Shirley Lee Ernest DeArmond, son of John Rosecrans DeArmond and Nancy Alice Roberts, was born in Knoxville, Tennessee, October 20, 1889. He attended Bell House

School, Hampden Sydney School for Boys, and Knoxville High School. His mother died during his babyhood and he was reared by his stepmother. After his father's death, he made his home with his maternal grandparents, and lived in West Knoxville. His maternal uncle, William T. Roberts, then a 'teen age boy, took a great interest in Shirley, and when he later entered the retail grocery business on Fort Sanders Street at Euclid Avenue, he took the boy in as a helper. Later, Shirley became a partner in the business with his uncle, and the business was moved to West Clinch Avenue at Tenth Street, where it prospered. Shirley eventually sold his interest to his uncle and launched out on his own on Cornell Avenue near the Louisville & Nashville railroad yards. In later years, he operated a large and prosperous business on South Central Street, near Willow Avenue. After several years of operation, the building suffered a severe fire. After disposing of the damaged stock, Shirley re-entered business in the Forest Avenue Market, in partnership with his son, Jack, and left the active operation of the business in Jack's hands. This business was restricted to the supply of hotels, restaurants and institutions.

In the meantime, Shirley had gotten interested in the salvage, wrecking and razing business, and now devoted his time to this enterprise with Reagan Branch, the operation being a three-way partnership including, Shirley, his son, Jack, and Reagan Branch. This business grew rapidly and Shirley began to amass considerable real estate holdings, consisting of business locations, residential and farm developments. He had purchased, a number of years previously, a large and historic old brick mansion on Third Creek Pike, with a large farm, which became his home. He developed a large spring into an artificial lake in front of his home and stocked it thoroughly with fingerlings. He became an authority on the appraisal of real estate, building materials, and contractual undertakings, and his expert testimony was often requested in court actions. He was a man of almost inexhaustible energy and was never idle. He was a born trader, and there are many tales of his trades involving one or two hours activity which earned him from several hundred to several thousand dollars. On one occasion, he entered into a contract to raze the once-famous Lake Toxaway Hotel, a huge and rambling frame structure in Western North Carolina, against the advice and opposition of his partners, which became so strong that at one time in the negotiations he asked his brother if he would join him in the enterprise if his partners refused. His partners finally went along with him, and when they sold the furnishings of the hotel and before they began the razing operations, they had cleared more profit than they had expected from the entire operations. But for federal taxes, this contract alone would have created for Shirley a comfortable estate.

In spite of his keen business acumen, he was a warm, friendly, and generous person. Known familiarly as "Shirl" to all his friends, he was well known, admired and liked by a host of Knoxville citizens. He was a man of no pretense, and his absolute sincerity was never questioned. He was a person of deep and constant attachments; devoted to his family, this devotion flowing out to include his brother and his brother's family, his wife's brother and sisters, nephews and nieces. His endless activity finally took its toll of his body and his health became impaired for 10 years before his death. While there was no inherited heart weakness, the constant demands made on it by his overworked body created high blood pressure which developed an angina complication which brought on several heart attacks, but his death was sudden and instantaneous and unexpected. He died at Kingston Pike Hospital, Knoxville, September 1, 1948. Interment was in the family plot in Woodlawn cemetery.

He married first, November 16, 1906,¹ just after his seventeenth birthday, Sarah Grace Bolton (b. Feb. 25, 1891; d. Aug. 15, 1937; g. Woodlawn c.), daughter of Robert Lincoln Bolton (b. Sale Creek, Tenn.) and Margaret Elizabeth Byerley (b. Grainger County, Tenn.). Grace was a friendly, thoroughly honest person with complete confidence in her ability to accomplish any task. She never met a stranger and wasted no time on self pity ever. She had a cheerful disposition, and was always in a sunny mood. She and her husband remained sweethearts until her death. She was fatally injured in an automobile collision near her son's home, and died within an hour.

AG VII ROSCOE CARLISLE d'ARMAND (1892-1972), Knoxville, Tennessee

Roscoe Carlisle d'Armand, son of John Rosecrans d'Armand (DeArmond) and Loudema Vashti McCalman, was born at Knoxville, Tennessee, Dec. 11, 1892. He obtained his education from Bell House elementary school, Highland Avenue Grammar school, Hampden Sydney Boys High and Knoxville High schools, and Remington School of Languages.

After completing a course in accounting, he was employed as bookkeeper with T. E. Burns Company of Knoxville, the south's first modern grocery. In 1913, he became general bookkeeper for Tate Spring Hotel, Tate Spring, Tenn., and returned to T. E. Burns Company in 1915. In 1917, he went to Miller's department store as assistant credit manager, where he remained for six years, with time out for service in the First World War. He left there after becoming credit manager, and took the same position with Sterchi Brothers, furniture dealers. In 1927, he became secretary-manager of the Knoxville Automobile Club, where he remained eight years. During his management, the club changed its name to East Tennessee Automobile Club and expanded its territory to include most of East Tennessee, its primary civic function during those years being the promotion of the creation of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. In 1935, he resigned and opened his offices in the Mercantile Building, engaging in real estate, insurance and investments.

Our subject served in World War I from June 1918 until January 1919, being stationed at Jacksonville, Florida, at Camp Joseph E. Johnston, in the Quartermaster Corps and later, Transportation Corps. On the basis of this service, he received an appointment as second lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps, Officers Reserve Corps, January 8, 1925. He was recalled to active duty for service in World War II, on Jan. 11, 1942, and was stationed at the Quartermaster School, Camp Lee, Va., first as instructor, then battalion commander, 3rd Q. M. Regiment, and on August 10, 1942, became executive officer of the same regiment. On December 7, 1942, he was assigned as commanding officer, 278th Q. M. Service Battalion, Camp Sutton, North Carolina, which unit he activated and trained. The unit was moved by rail to Utah Q. M. Depot, Ogden, Utah, in February 1943, where its training was continued. Its training completed, the unit was shipped overseas, and our subject was sent to Fort Warren, Wyoming. From there he was ordered overseas, sailing from San Francisco, October 18, 1943. He was assigned for duty as Quartermaster Supply Officer, under the Base Quartermaster, Port Moresby, New Guinea, and on August 1, 1944, became base quartermaster. In November, 1944, he was ordered to duty with Base M, which was staging in Leyte, Philippine Islands. He served first as liaison officer to Sixth Army, and afterwards as beach quartermaster. He was hospitalized, December 24, 1944, and eventually returned to U. S., where he was released from active duty, April 30, 1945.

He married, June 17, 1924, Knoxville, Virginia Luck Berger (b. Nov. 1, 1898, Burkeville, Va.), daughter of Thomas Carson Berger¹ and Rose Martha Graves, Dr. William F. Blackard, officiating. Virginia is a graduate, Randolph Macon Institute; Cincinnati Conservatory of Music in piano, organ and voice; and also studied voice with LaForge in New York. He died September 27, 1972 in Knoxville.

AG II RICHARD DEARMOND (1743-1802), Dauphin County, Pennsylvania

Richard Dearmond, son of James d'Armond and Mary Johnston, was born on his father's farm in West Hanover township, Lancaster (now Dauphin) County, Pennsylvania, September 1, 1743. His father died in 1748¹ and in his will appointed Reverend Richard Sankey as guardian for his children, and bequeathed the home place to his son, Richard. Richard was reared by his widowed mother, along with his brothers and sisters, until they reached maturity. About 1760, his brothers, Thomas and John, married and migrated to North Carolina. His mother died in 1779 and willed her "lands" to Richard.² Subsequent to his mother's death, Richard must have purchased from his brother, John, the farm bequeathed to John by his father, as later deeds to this property passed through Richard's hands.³

He served with distinction in the Revolutionary War in 1778 and 1779, being shown as a private in 1st Company, Sixth Battalion, Lancaster County Militia, and in 1780 being shown as Quartermaster with the same organization.⁴ In early tax records his name was recorded as 'Dermond' and 'Dermont' but eventually became shown as 'Dearmond'. He followed the pursuit of farming, was a substantial land holder, was active in county and religious affairs, and was a man of influence in his community.⁵

He died November 17, 1802, and is buried in the Old English "Cemetary", Grantville, East Hanover. His grave is marked by a large slab of granite which also covers his wife and children, James and Margaret.

In his mature years, Richard married Eleanor Stewart (b. May 4, 1753; d. Feb. 19, 1830; g. beside her husband), daughter of Andrew Stewart (q.v.) and Mary Dinwiddie.

Andrew Stewart Dearmond, son of Richard Dearmond and Eleanor Stewart, was born at his father's home in West Hanover township, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, March 19, 1790. After the death of his brother, James, in 1812, Andrew was appointed administrator for his brother's estate and also replaced James as administrator for his father's estate, on March 8, 1815.¹ From a will filed in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, we find that Andrew S. Dearmond who was the administrator of James Dearmond who was the administrator of Richard for land in Erie and Dauphin Counties, Pennsylvania, gave bond to the legal heirs of the persons for whom they were administrator. He was a construction engineer, farmer, and merchant.

During the War of 1812, he enlisted, August 26, 1814, in the 66th Regiment, as a volunteer, Captain Walker commanding.² His enlistment expired March 5, 1815, his residence being given as Dauphin County and York, Pennsylvania, as place of rendezvous, distance 38 miles.³

He died December 11, 1839, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.⁴

He married, September 15, 1818, Harrisburg, Penna.,⁴ Eliza Rose Chambers of Trenton, New Jersey (b. May 12, 1799; d. May 5, 1880),⁵ daughter of Alexander Chambers, Jr. and Elizabeth Eyre. AG IV RICHARD CHAMBERS DeARMOND (1819-1865), Philadelphia, Penna.

Richard Chambers DeArmond, son of Andrew Stewart DeArmond and Eliza Rose Chambers, was born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, August 25, 1819. He attended schools in Harrisburg and in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and entered Princeton University as a sophomore, November 8, 1838. He graduated on the last Wednesday of September 1841. He was admitted to the bar at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, in 1844. In 1849, he settled in Columbia, Pennsylvania, and in 1851, removed to Philadelphia, where he became a merchant. He also owned a line of canal boats operating between Columbia and Holidaysburg.

He was a strict and devout Christian and became a clerk of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions. Sunday was a day of worship and Richard insisted it be devoted to church and Sunday School and Bible study. A letter to his son, Andrew Goodrich, who was in the army during the Civil War, epitomizes his religious devotion. "You cannot imagine how much pleasure your short letter gave us at noon today, and yet we were pained too at one expression you used. Do not, my Dear Son, allow yourself to acquire the degrading habit of—shall I call it profanity—well, of using low language. I know you would have this and many other temptations to contend against in Camp life—but I trusted and still trust that the Almighty would keep you and restore you to your home pure and honest. Remember you have your testimony to bear of the truth of the Christian religion—and ever look to the Captain of Your Salvation for guidance and direction. If you faithfully commit your affairs to Christ he will keep you both bodily and spiritually. We do not forget to pray for you—do not forget to pray for yourself. Next Sabbath is Communion, we wish you could be home with us—We will not forget you at the Home of Grace. You have gone to be a Soldier—do not flinch now—and do not shirk any duty. The trial will soon be over— and it will be a very gratifying reflection that you have done your whole duty. With love from the whole family, I subscribe myself, Your affectionate father, R. C. DeArmond. P. S. Be faithful unto death and He will give you a Crown of Life."

He died suddenly of spotted fever, February 7, 1865, at Philadelphia.

He married, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, April 22, 1845, Eliza Matilda Kellogg (b. Dec. 23, 1823, Towanda, Pa.; d. Mar. 6, 1883, Fernwood, Delaware County, Penna.), daughter of Alvah Kellogg and Mary Morse. After the death of her husband, Eliza operated her home with more relaxed discipline than had been enjoyed while her husband was living. The older children sought employment while Eliza reared the four younger ones. She encouraged her children to bring their friends into the home and enjoy music. The daughters played the organ and banjos, Andrew and William were flutists, and George was an expert accordianist. They enjoyed singing, George and Andrew having good tenor voices. The carpets were rolled back, and George taught his brothers and sisters to dance. In short, Eliza faced modern social trends and marched with them, even permitting the youngsters to play cards which had all too recently been considered a part of the Devil's workshop. Eliza was a woman of wisdom, diplomacy, and tremendous energy but her body was not equal to her driving spirit. She contracted tuberculosis which caused her death. She was nursed by her three daughters and so ignorant was medical science of the proper treatment for this disease in those days that all three contracted t. b. from their mother and died of it.

AG V ANDREW GOODRICH DeARMOND (1846-1923), Swarthmore, Penna.

Andrew Goodrich DeArmond, eldest child of Richard Chambers DeArmond and Eliza Matilda Kellogg, was born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, March 27, 1846. When the Civil War broke out, he enlisted in E. Spencer Miller's Dalgren Howitzer Battery of Independent Artillery as corporal. On June 19, 1863, he re-enlisted to serve for the emergency, as 2nd lieutenant of Captain E. Spencer Miller's Company of Independent Battery Volunteers. He was discharged, July 25, 1863 (?), at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, by reason of the expiration of the term of service, by E. Spencer Miller, Captain, commanding the company.¹

Andrew was preparing for college when his father died in 1865, so he abandoned his plans for college and went into the printing business. In 1872, he moved to Town Point, Maryland, and engaged in farming. In 1874, he bought a farm at Swarthmore, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, and took up dairy farming, breeding a herd of pedigreed Alderney cows. He formed the Swarthmore Land Improvement Company and was made president. As the farms disappeared and small suburban estates began to appear with no more than an acre of ground apiece, he lost interest and moved to California. He grew oranges and grapefruit for a few years, but because of the distance from the eastern markets and the lack of good transportation, he moved to Florida and took up truck gardening.

In his late seventies, his health began to fail and he was advised to seek a higher altitude. He moved to North Wilkesboro, North Carolina, where he died, January 12, 1923.

He married, November 3, 1869, Philadelphia, Lizzie Douglas Foulks (b. July 23, 1847, Philadelphia; d. Oct. 27, 1936, Swarthmore, Penna.), daughter of Charles T. Foulks and Mattie Douglass. She was a graduate of Westchester State Teachers College, and became famous as a writer of religious songs under the name "Lizzie DeArmond". Among her best known hymns are If your Heart Keeps Right and Good Night, Good Morning. Homer Rodeheaver, noted evangelical singer, used many of her hymns when he worked with Billy Sunday, and when she died, he canceled all engagements and went to Swarthmore, and sang her hymns at her funeral.

AG V WILLIAM CHAMBERS DeARMOND (1848-1931), Philadelphia, Penna.

William Chambers DeArmond, son of Richard Chambers DeArmond and Eliza Matilda Kellogg, was born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, July 27, 1848. He moved with his family to Columbia, Pennsylvania, in 1849 and to Philadelphia in 1851. During his early years he attended public school in Philadelphia, and later studied accounting under an instructor who specialized in railroad accounting.

In late 1863 or early 1864, he went with his brother, Andrew Goodrich, to Harrisburg, and became connected with the Pennsylvania Canals Company, a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was assigned to the accounting department, and among his early duties was the collecting of tolls. Later, he was sent to Bordentown, New Jersey, to adjust the accounts of the Delaware & Raritan Canal Company, which had been recently purchased by the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was later transferred to the Pennsylvania Railroad office at Philadelphia, and was assigned to the accounting department, where he subsequently became chief clerk.

During the Spring of 1878, he moved his family from Philadelphia to Beverly, New Jersey. In 1879, he resigned from the Pennsylvania Railroad and accepted a position with the Norfolk & Western Railway, as assistant to the president. A few years later, he was promoted to the position of general purchasing agent, this position including the presidency of the Roanoke Land & Improvement Company, Radford Brick Company, Norfolk & Western Hotels Company (this company operating Hotel Roanoke of Roanoke; Radford Hotel of Radford, Virginia, and Luray Inn at Luray, Virginia).

In the spring of 1893, he resigned his position with the Norfolk & Western Railway to accept the position of chief of sales, of the Trogan Car Coupler Company, Troy, New York, his headquarters being in New York City, where he moved his family. He resigned this position in 1896 to become sales manager of the Schoen Pressed Steel Company, Pittsburgh, with general offices at Philadelphia. He moved his family back to Philadelphia, spending the winters there and the summers at the family home in Beverly, New Jersey. In January of 1900, the Schoen Pressed Steel Company and the Fox Steel Truck Company were merged to form the Pressed Steel Car Company. William was made secretary of this company, and also had charge of sales to certain railroads. In 1901, he formed the Protectus Company for the manufacture of metallic preservative paints. Later, he formed the Rincon Mines Company, which later became the Weaver Mountain Mining Company, which operated a gold mining claim in Arizona. He was also interested in the formation of other companies, two of which were the Smoke & Spark Arrester Company and the Carbonator Company.

He died at Philadelphia at the age of 83, May 21, 1931.

William married first, Feb. 20, 1873, Philadelphia, Mary Caroline Baker (b. July 14, 1851, Philadelphia; d. June 9, 1888, Beverly, N. J.), daughter of Isaac Baker and Mary Stuart. She was the youngest of six children.

James Cowden DeArmond, son of Richard Chambers DeArmond and Eliza Matilda Kellogg, was born at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, January 15, 1851. He was the most athletic of Richard's sons, and participated in all sports but excelled in figure ice skating.

After the death of his father in 1865, he became a carpenter and builder. He later secured employment with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and eventually became a conductor. This was during the era of the link and pin couplings. In acting for a missing brakeman on one occasion, James was badly crushed between two cars while operating the coupling, and died, January 4, 1880, Philadelphia.

AG V GEORGE JOHNES DeARMOND (1853-1944), Philadelphia, Penna.

George Johnes DeArmond, son of Richard Chambers DeArmond and Eliza Matilda Kellogg, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, February 18, 1853. He had an overpowering devotion to his mother and family, and learned at his grandmother's knee many quotations from the Bible, and could recite in order, the books of the Old and New Testament up to the day of his death.

Although only 12 years old when his father died, he left school and worked in a printing office until he contracted double pneumonia. After his recovery, he was sent to visit one of his Harrison cousins¹ at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. On his return home, he worked for Fairbanks, Morse & Company, manufacturer of scales. About 1873, he worked as a printer for J. H. Zeilin & Company, a proprietary medicine company. They did their own advertising printing and also compiled a very complete almanac. He soon became head of the department. This position proved very confining and he secured a promotion to the sales department, and was assigned to the southern territory. His trips through this territory proved to be of 14 and 15 months duration, and in certain sections of the deep south where railroads did not reach, he traveled by wagon team, calling on the druggists who in many cases were also the doctors of the small towns and villages.

On March 15, 1888, he became a merchant in Philadelphia with Alexander Denniston as partner, under the name of Denniston & DeArmond, as wholesale distributors of upholstery goods and cabinet hardware. Mr. Denniston had had experience in the field and was thoroughly conversant with it, while George Johnes financed the partnership. In 1900, George Johnes bought out his partner and the firm name was changed to DeArmond & Company. In 1901, his son, James Keyser, finished college and joined his father in the business. In September 1901, George Johnes suffered a breakdown from overwork, and his son became manager.

On January 19, 1926, the business suffered a devastating fire. Nothing daunted, George Johnes, then 73 years old, purchased an eight story modern building at 925-927-929 Filbert Street, with a frontage of 60 feet and a depth of 140 feet, which was equipped with two passenger elevators and one large freight elevator. The company occupied the entire first and second floors and the basement, except for maintenance facilities. The remaining upper floors were leased to other occupants.

George Johnes remained active in the business until a few days before his death, which occurred September 14, 1944, he then being in his 92nd year.

He married, December 7, 1876, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Elizabeth Webster Keyser (b. Aug. 10, 1853; d. April 25, 1924, Philadelphia), daughter of James Davis Keyser and Ann Thorpe Webster.

Powell DeArmond, son of Richard Chambers DeArmond and Eliza Matilda Kellogg, was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 15, 1859. He was too young to go to work when his father died in 1865, and remained at home with his mother and sisters. After he reached manhood, he secured a position with the Norfolk & Western Railway shops at Roanoke, Virginia, possibly through the influence of his brother, William Chambers, and became a shop engineer. When his brother became interested in the Pressed Steel Car Company of Pittsburgh, he went to work for that company after the turn of the century, and made his home at McKees Rocks, Pennsylvania. He died there, August 7, 1927.

AG VI FRANK LUCAS DeARMOND (1873-1953), Tucson, Arizona

Frank Lucas DeArmond, eldest child of William Chambers DeArmond and Mary Caroline Baker, was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 22, 1873. He was reared at Beverly, New Jersey, and attended the Farnum School. During the summer vacation of 1890, he joined the Engineer Corps of the Norfolk & Western Railway, at Ceredo, West Virginia, which was then building a bridge across the Ohio River. The West Virginia end of the bridge developed into a town and became Kenova. In the fall, he returned to his home and attended the Polytechnic Academy, Philadelphia. The following summer vacation, his father sent him to Roanoke, Virginia, where he worked in the shops of the Norfolk & Western Railway for three months.

In October 1891, he enrolled as a freshman in the College of Engineering, University of Pennsylvania. He graduated in June 1895, with a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering. During his four years at the university, he was Freshman Class treasurer, a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, and one of the organizers of the Mu Phi Alpha engineering fraternity.

After graduation, he took a course at the Philadelphia School of Industrial Art, Textile Section, in preparation for a position with the New York Tapestry Mills of Philadelphia, which had been sponsored by DeArmond & Company of Philadelphia. Later, Frank Lucas and his brother, Ross, became the owners and operators of this mill. The business was sold in 1902. Frank afterward became associated with the Protectus Company which his father had organized, manufacturing steel preservative paints and selling railway supplies. He held the position of assistant general manager, general manager, and treasurer, progressively, until May 1918.

On May 17, 1918, he entered the Quartermaster Corps of the U. S. Army as captain, being assigned to the Construction Division Section "C", which had jurisdiction over temporary construction at coast defense and interior army posts. On April 28, 1919, he was promoted to the rank of major, and given the task of cleaning up and closing the various projects on which he had been working. He was honorably discharged from the army on September 6, 1919.

After the termination of his army service, Frank Lucas became connected with the Office of the Alien Property Custodian, and was sent to Passaic, New Jersey, as resident representative of the custodian at Botany Worsted Mills. He held the title of Assistant Treasurer of the Botany plant until June 1926, when the property was returned to the original owners. He then resigned and went to live with his father at Philadelphia.

While living at Philadelphia, his uncle, George Johnes DeArmond of DeArmond & Company, suggested that he accept a position with Kemitex Products Incorporated, of Wadsworth, Ohio, as salesman in its eastern territory. Some months later he was transferred to the factory general offices at Wadsworth, and placed in charge of sales in Ohio, southern Michigan, eastern Indiana, northern and western Kentucky, portions of West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. He traveled this territory three times each year. In 1937, due to a change in the management of the home office, he resigned, and joined the sales department of the Cleveland branch, Illinois Shade Cloth Corporation, Chicago Heights, Illinois. In 1939, he moved to Baltimore, and made his home with his sister, Retta, and her husband. In the fall of 1940, he went by car with his sister and her husband, to Tucson, Arizona, where he operated the Catalina Court, owned by them. In January, 1944, this property was sold and Frank Lucas retired. He afterwards made his home with his sister, Retta, at Tucson. He died, May 1, 1953, and is buried in Evergreen cemetery, Tucson.

He married, October 15, 1907, Milford, Delaware, Ann Burton Marvel (b. Feb. 3, 1886), daughter of David T. Marvel and Mary Robinson Wootten. Issue: none.

AG VI ROSS DeARMOND (1875-1903), Philadelphia, Penna.

Ross DeArmond, son of William Chambers DeArmond and Mary Caroline Baker, was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 17, 1875. He was reared at the family home in Beverly, New Jersey, and attended the Farnum School there, from which he graduated in June 1892. In the fall of 1892, he entered the Wharton School of Business Science and Political Economy, University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in June 1896. While in college, Ross played on his class football team, and rowed on the class crew. He was vice president of his class during senior year, and on class day was elected Bowl Man of his class. He was a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

After graduation, he joined the firm of Covington and McArthur, the firm name later being changed to Covington, McArthur and DeArmond. Afterwards sold his interest in the business and joined his brother, Frank Lucas, in the ownership and operation of the New York Tapestry Mills of Philadelphia.

While still a member of the firm of Covington, McArthur and DeArmond, he enlisted in the Philadelphia Second City Troop, a cavalry organization dating back to the time of General Washington and the Revolution. At the time of his death, he held the rank of second lieutenant in the troop.

He died, single, May 11, 1903, a La Junta, Colorado. Issue: none.

Clarence DeArmond, son of William Chambers DeArmond and Mary Caroline Baker, was born in Beverly, New Jersey, September 7, 1880. He received his early education at the Farnum School, Beverly, but after his father moved to New York City in 1893, Clarence attended the Friends School there. In 1896, the family moved to Philadelphia, and he enrolled at William Penn Charter School. While there, he established a new interscholastic record for the 100 yard and 220 yard dashes. After graduation, he entered University of Pennsylvania, and was presenter at his class day exercises upon graduation in 1903 as an architect. He was a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

He served his apprenticeship in the office of Frank Miles Day, one of the most celebrated architects in Philadelphia at that time. Later, he formed the partnership of DeArmond, Ashmead & Bickley, architects. During World War II, one of his partners died, and Clarence offered his services to the government in connection with housing. He remained in this work as architect to the Army Engineers after the war and until his death. He died, September 18, 1953, at Philadelphia, and is buried in West Laurel Hill cemetery, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.

AG VI RETTA DeARMOND (1885-1949), Tucson, Arizona

Retta DeArmond, daughter of William Chambers DeArmond and Mary Caroline Baker, was born at Beverly, New Jersey, August 31, 1885. She received her early education at the Friends School in New York City, and after her family moved to Philadelphia, she attended Miss Judkins Seminary School for Girls. During World War I, she was employed in the insurance department of Penn Mutual Company of Philadelphia. After the war, she lived with her sister, Edna, at Montclair, New Jersey. She studied filing in a New York business school and became head file clerk in the real estate office of the D. L. & W. RR. at Hoboken, New Jersey. She held this position when she married. After her marriage, she lived at Baltimore, Maryland, until the fall of 1940, when she and her husband moved to Arizona because of his health.

She married, July 22, 1922, Mario Mouton (b. Dec. 23, 1894, Fieume, Austria-Hungary; d. Oct. 22, 1941, Tucson, Arizona). His father was Italian-French and his mother was an Austrian. He became a seaman and came to the United States. During World War I, he enlisted in the army and became a corporal, and was in charge of a machine gun crew. During the Battle of the Argonne Forest, he was wounded in a mustard gas attack. After his discharge from the army, he returned to the sea, his first love, and became a Master Mariner. He was captain of several ships of the American South African Line, his home port being Baltimore. In 1940, he became quite ill because of his gassed lungs, and was forced to resign. He recovered partially from this illness, and in September 1940, he and his wife, accompanied by his wife's brother, Frank Lucas DeArmond (q.v.), moved to Tucson, Arizona. At first, the dry atmosphere improved his health but since mustard gas poisoning is not true t.b., the improvement was only temporary, and he entered the Veterans Hospital at Tucson, where he died. He was buried in Soldiers Section, Evergreen cemetery, Tucson, with full military honors. He was a member of the Morgan-McDermont Post No. 7 of the American Legion, which post conducted the services. He was a Mason. Issue: none.

AG VI JAMES KEYSER DeARMOND (1877-), Philadelphia, Penna.

James Keyser DeArmond, son of George Johnes DeArmond and Elizabeth Webster Keyser, was born at Philadelphia, December 21, 1877. He graduated from Friends Central School, Philadelphia, June 1897, and from Haverford College, with an A.B. degree, in June 1901.

After graduation from college, he entered DeArmond & Company, Philadelphia, his father's firm, as an apprentice. When his father became ill in 1901, he became manager, and afterwards expanded the business to follow modern trends by adding the lines of drapery goods and drapery hardware, awning stripes and supplies, and window shades. Twenty-five years later, the business suffered a destructive fire and was re-established in an eight story building at 925-27-29 Filbert Street, where it was operated on a much larger scale.

James Keyser is a man of cultured tastes, with an absorbing interest in the history and antiquities of his native state, and is a member of the Pennsylvania Historical Society.

He married, October 27, 1906, Philadelphia, Emily Janney (b. June 17, 1882, Philadelphia), daughter of Nathaniel Ellicott Janney and Anna Canby Smyth.

James Keyser DeArmond, Jr., son of James Keyser DeArmond and Emily Janny, was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 2, 1913. He attended George School at Newtown, Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

On October 5, 1933, he entered his father's business, DeArmond & Company, Philadelphia, where he was in charge of salesmen's cars and delivery trucks. On May 28, 1943, he entered a government camp at Big Flats, near Elmyra, New York, operated by the Department of Agriculture for forestry, soil conservation, and the development of soil control grasses. His mechanical ability soon placed him in charge of the motor farm equipment and trucks. He was later put in charge of the maintenance of the camp. He was released from duty on May 12, 1946. During the following year he was connected with a cooperative association which made alterations in old buildings and constructed new homes. On July 9, 1947, he went to the Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology, as assistant to the chief of maintenance.

Cumberland County, Pennsylvania
descendants

Henry, a brother of James d'Armond, may have come to America with his brother in 1735, but since he was only nine years old at that time, it is more likely that he followed his brother to Pennsylvania after he was old enough to make the voyage alone. Our first record of him is at the age of 20.

A legend among the descendants of Richard Dearmond says Henry was living in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, in 1822. No official record of him after 1800 has been found, but if this legend is correct, then he was still living at the advanced age of 96.

Only one son has been definitely identified, Henry, Junior, whose issue consisted of four daughters. Joseph M. has been tentatively identified as another son but even he becomes lost after 1800. Probably, there were other children but all research has failed to discover any records of any descendants of this family after 1800.

AG I HENRY D'ARMOND, SR. (1726-?), Cumberland County, Penna.

Henry D'Armond, Sr., whose parentage is unknown, was born in England in 1726. He is first recorded in Pennsylvania on July 23, 1746, when he enlisted as a laborer in the provincial service of Pennsylvania, and began service on August 4, 1746, under command of Samuel Perry, under proclamation by Governor George Thomas of Pennsylvania, dated June 9, 1746, to raise 400 men within the province of Pennsylvania, to be used in concert with regular forces for the immediate reduction of Canada. The troops went into winter quarters at Albany, New York, and were finally discharged on October 31, 1747, the expedition against Canada being abandoned for the time.¹ Henry gave his age as 20 and his place of birth as England.

On May 13, 1756, Henry Deyermond secured a warranty for 50 acres of land in Paxtang township, Dauphin County.³

On April 13, 1772, Henry Dearmont appeared in Derry township, Cumberland County, the adjoining county to Dauphin on the west side of the Susquehanna River, in a caveat against the acceptance of a survey by P'r application number 2756 of a tract of land in Derry township made by John Stump for James Barr.⁴ This may have involved title to 300 acres of land recorded to Henry Deyarmond in Cumberland County on August 2, 1773.⁵ On March 15, 1776, Henry Dermond was again forced to defend his title against a caveat entered by Michael Gander on behalf of himself and the heirs of Peter Schneider, deceased, against the acceptance of a survey or granting a patent to Henry Dermond or any other person claiming under a warrant to Arthur Forster for a tract of land in Derry township, Cumberland County, alleging that said Peter Schneider [had] obtained a warrant in the year 1755 for land on the other side of Kishaquoquillas Creek and lived on and improved the same until he was drove (sic) off and killed by the Indians and that said Henry Dermond [had] since obtained a survey on the warrant of Forster which included the land intended by Schneider's warrant.⁶

In 1778, Henry Deimond (sic) was taxed in Derry township for 137 acres of land, 2 horses, 1 cow;⁷ and in 1779, his acreage is recorded for tax purposes as 446 acres;⁸ indicating that the two holdings were now definitely his. In 1780, his acreage is shown as 440 and 302, with 4 horses, 6 cattle.⁹ In 1781, he is shown with 500 acres and 3 cattle;¹⁰ and in 1782, his holdings were reduced to 200 acres, 2 horses, 3 cattle.¹¹

The 1790 census for West Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, lists Henry Dearmont with 2 males over 16 and 4 females. This would indicate that Henry was now living with his son, Henry, Jr. He was then 64 years of age. There is also a 1790 census list for "the remainder of Cumberland County" which shows Henry Yarmon (sic) with 1 male over 16; 3 males under 16; and one female. In spite of the similarity of the names, this author is of the opinion that there is no connection.¹³

The 1800 census for West Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, lists Henry Deerman with 1 male over 45; 1 male, 26-45; 2 males under 10; 1 female over 45; 1 female, 16-26; 3 females, 10-16; indicating that Henry, Sr. and Henry, Jr. were still domiciled together. The young boys listed may have been grandchildren since Henry, Jr. had no sons. Where Henry, Sr. lived after the death of his son in 1804, has not been learned, nor the date of his death.¹⁴ The only later knowledge we have is the legend in the Richard Dearmond family which places him as living in Harrisburg in 1822. This legend has not been otherwise substantiated.²

Henry Deyermond was married on April 24, 1760, in Paxtang township, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, to Mary 'Byars, by Reverend John Roan, pastor, Newside Presbyterian Church, near Harrisburg.¹²

AG II HENRY D'ARMOND JR. (a1760-1804), Cumberland County, Penna.

Henry D'Armond, Junior, son of Henry D'Armond, Senior, and Mary Byars, was born in Pennsylvania and perhaps Dauphin County, soon after 1760. He grew to manhood there and in Cumberland County where his father eventually settled and owned large acreage.

He was first recorded in 1779 as Henry Deyermond, freeman, tax 7/10/0;¹ and again in 1780, still a freeman, tax 20/0/0.² He was listed in 1781 in West Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, as being single, and the owner of 50 acres of land, 1 horse and 1 cattle;³ and again in 1782 without any change in his taxable status.⁴

He served during the Revolutionary War in Captain James Irwin's Company, 5th Company, 2nd battalion, Cumberland County, as Henry Deyermond, second class, September 10, 1781.⁵

He was listed in the 1790 census for West Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, with 2 males over 16, and 4 women. Apparently, this census listing included both Henry, Jr. and his father, indicating that they were still living together. They were again listed in the 1800 census as being in the same household.⁶

Like all our pioneer ancestors, Henry devoted himself to developing his land and rearing his family, and otherwise led a quiet life. He died in the prime of life, between August and October, 1804,⁷ at Newville, West Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, and was buried in Big Spring Presbyterian graveyard.

We know nothing of his wife except that her given name was Deborah.

AG II JOSEPH M. D'ARMOND (a1760-?), Cumberland County, Penna.

Joseph M. D'Armond, presumably a son of Henry D'Armond, Sr., and Mary Byars, was born in Pennsylvania, after 1760.

He is first found on August 28, 1793, in "a true list of names and surnames of every free and ablebodied male white of Coumberland County Militia, inhabiting within the bounds of Cumberland County Militia, 18-45 age", as Joseph Deyermond.¹ He was listed in the 1800 census for West Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, with a family.² The township and his age make reasonable our assumption of his relationship to Henry D'Armond, Sr.

No research has been undertaken beyond 1800 in Cumberland County census records, and no other official record of him has been found beyond 1800.

The history of the early members of this family has been created with great difficulty and uncertainty, from scanty and almost non-existent records. The relationship between William and James d'Armond of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, although obviously close, cannot be determined, nor the date of his arrival in Pennsylvania. In fact, there is only one record to prove his existence. He may have been a brother of Thomas Dearmond of Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, and therefore, a son of Alexander Diermond of County Donegal, Ireland. Also, the frequency of the name 'Michael', 'William', and 'Peter' in this family indicates a close relationship with the Dearmont family of Fauquier County, Virginia (Line G), but several years of research and study of existing records have failed to produce any tangible proof of such relationship.

William's children's names have been established from their ages, places of early residence, and the association of given names. Most of them remained in Pennsylvania, and helped to settle and develop other counties of the state, particularly Huntingdon and Blair.

Aggressive and more localized research is needed to give this family the prominence it deserves. The author has been greatly hampered by his distance from all record sources on this line.

AG I WILLIAM DEARMOND of Cumberland County, Pennsylvania

William Dearmond, whose parentage has not been determined, came to America, probably after 1750, and evidently from North Ireland. He was no doubt influenced to come to America by letters written to the family in Great Britain by James d'Armond, who had settled in Lancaster County about 1735.

He is recorded as having settled in Kishiquoquillas Valley which was in Derry township, (then) Cumberland County, in 1755. He lived there until 1761, devoting himself to the improvement of his land. He then sold his improvement rights to James Alexander who may have been a relative.¹ Whether his decision to dispose of his holdings was occasioned by his death, dissatisfaction with the land, or other reasons, we do not know. William disappeared from all records in Pennsylvania, although there are frequent references to his children in after years in Cumberland and nearby counties. In 1789, Derry township became a part of the newly formed Mifflin County.

Henry Deyarmond, son of William Dearmond of Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, was born about 1751. He served in the Revolutionary War as a private in 1781 under Captain James Irwin.¹ He was first listed in 1786 as living in Peters township, Franklin County, taxed with 1 cow. Also listed was Harmon Deyarmon. In the 1790 census for Hamilton township, Franklin County, he was listed as Henry Dearman with 1 male over 16; 3 males under 16 and 3 females. In 1791, same township and county, he was taxed as Henry Deyermont with 2 cows. In 1796, he was listed for tax with one horse, 2 cows. Again in 1799, he was listed as Henry Dearmin with 1 horse, 1 cow, same location. In 1804, he was taxed with 1 distillery, 2 horses and 2 cows. In 1807, he was shown for tax purposes with 244 acres of land, 1 distillery, 2 horses, 1 cow, now being in Antrim township, Franklin County.⁴

On September 2, 1809, he made a deed for land situated in Hamilton County, containing 240 acres and 166 perches, to James Deyarmon and William Deyarmon, of the

AG II JAMES DEARMOND (1755-1820), Huntingdon County, Penna.

James Dearmond, son of William Dearmond, was born in North Ireland prior to 1755, and brought to Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, sometime before 1755, by his father, where he grew to manhood.¹ He was first listed in Middleton township, Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, in 1779, as James Dorman, for taxes, with 1 horse, 1 cattle.² He was listed in 1780, same spelling, but in Armagh township, Cumberland County,³ and again in 1781.⁴ In 1782, he was listed as James DeArmond, same township and county.⁵ In 1789, Armagh township became part of Mifflin County which was created that year, but no further record has been found of our subject in either Cumberland or Mifflin Counties.

In 1788, James Dearmont was listed on a return from Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, of persons made subject to military duty, in Capt. Igoe's Company of 144 men.⁶ He was again listed as number 47 on a list of Capt. Little's Company of 104 men,⁷ and again as number 79, same company,⁸ which may have represented his son, James, Jr., instead of himself.

The 1790 census for Huntingdon County lists James Dermit with 1 male over 16; 5 males under 16; 3 females, indicating that most of his sons were born after 1774. In 1793, he is shown as James Deyarmond, Huntingdon County Militia, his name being spelled variously as Dearmon, Dearmont, Deharmond. He was shown as being "also of Delaware."⁹ In 1798, James Dearmont was shown as the owner of 296 acres, West township, Huntingdon County.¹⁰ He is again shown in the Huntingdon County Militia as one of the effective men of the 2nd Company, 1st Battalion, 1790-1800.¹¹ He was listed in the 1800 census for West township, Huntingdon County, with 1 male over 45; 2 males, 16-26; 2 males, 10-16; 3 males under 10; 1 female, 10-16; indicating that his wife may have been deceased. He was not listed in the 1820 census, and it is assumed that he deceased between 1810 and 1820.

His first marriage must have taken place about 1770, but there is no record of his wife's name. Two marriages were recorded in 1789, one of which may refer to our subject, and the other to his son, James, Jr.¹² On January 15, 1826, is recorded the death of "Mrs. Dearmet, wife of James Dearmet, Sr. of West Township".¹³ The only possible assumption is that this reference is to his second wife whom he married in 1789.

AG II JOHN DEARMONT (1755-1810), Huntingdon County, Penna.

John Dearmont, son of William Dearmond of Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, was born before 1755 in North Ireland, and brought to America as a small child by his father. He was first recorded in Chester County, Pennsylvania, as a freeman in 1767, for supply tax, lbs 3/0/0, Chester County rates.¹ He took the oath of allegiance in Hanover township, Dauphin County, August 4, 1777.²

He served during the Revolutionary War as a private in Capt. William Soull's Company 11th Pennsylvania Regiment, commanded by Col. Richard Humpton. He enlisted Feb. 11, 1777, and his name last appears on the company muster roll for August 1777, dated Sept. 5, 1777. He also served in Captain Grier's Company, 1st Continental Troops, Pennsylvania; enlisted July 1st, year, rank nor period being shown.¹⁵ He served with the Rangers of the Frontiers, Northumberland County, with Wm. Clark's Company, 1778-1783,³ and received depreciation pay for services in Northumberland County, Revolutionary War.⁴ He was also listed with the Continental Line, Northumberland County Militia,⁵ and again with the Rangers of the Frontier, Northumberland County.⁶ He was listed as a private from Northumberland County in a list of soldiers of the Revolution who received pay for their services, 1778-1783, Revolutionary War.⁷

In 1787, John Diermond was listed in Turbot township, Northumberland County, for state tax, with 100 acres, tax lbs 3/9/0, living next to Thomas Dearmond (q.v.) who had settled earlier in the county. This is the first listing of his name in Northumberland County.⁸ In 1790, he was listed in the Northumberland County census with 1 male over 16; 1 male under 16; 1 female; next to Thomas Dearmond.

In 1789, he is listed as a settler in Huntingdon County, in Warriors Mark township, which was being set off from Franklin township.⁹ There is an overlap of one year at this point. Apparently, he was influenced to settle in this county by his brother, James, who settled there in 1788. Daniel Dearmont is also recorded as an early settler.¹⁰ John is listed in the 1800 census for Barre township, Huntingdon County, with 1 male over 45; 3 males, 16-26; 1 male under 10; 1 female, 26-45; 1 female, 16-26; 1 female, 10-16; 3 females under 10. He was not listed in the 1810 census or any subsequent census, indicating that he may have died between 1800 and 1810.

 16. Author's Note. It has been impossible to establish completely the relationships between the various members of the family recorded in Huntingdon County due to the fact that John and James lived simultaneously in adjoining townships, and their children were of the same ages. AG III WILLIAM DEARMOND (a1773-a1844), Chambersburg, Penna.

William Dearmond, son of Henry Deyarmond and Jane Holmes, was born in Franklin County, Pennsylvania, after 1773. Records indicate that he was a farmer and lived his entire life in the same county. He was first listed in 1807, in Antrim township, Franklin County, as a freeman, for taxables.¹ On September 2, 1809, his father made a deed for land in Hamilton township, to William and his brother, James.² On July 1, 1815, William purchased land in Hamilton township, being Lot No. 71 on the town plot, from executors of Benj. Chambers of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. The deed shows that William was also living in Chambersburg.³

On April 8, 1844, William Dearmond and his wife, Mary, executed a deed to Peter Christ, covering property situated in Chambersburg.⁴

The date of his death is unknown.

AG III JAMES DEYERMONT (a1773-?), Franklin County, Penna.

James Deyermont, son of Henry Deyarmond and Jane Holmes, was born in Franklin County, Pennsylvania, after 1773. He was a farmer. He was first listed in 1788, Franklin County, as being taxed with one horse.¹ On September 2, 1809, his father executed a deed to James and his brother, William, for land in Hamilton township.² On January 2, 1812, James Dearmont of Hamilton township purchased from John Brown of Peters township, and Elizabeth, his wife, land located in Hamilton township, containing 137 acres, 87 perches.³ On April 18, 1818, James Deyarmond obtained a warranty for 27.140 acres of land in Franklin County, Pennsylvania.⁴ On September 9, 1818, James Dyarmond and his wife, Martha, gave a deed to William Bratton, all of Hamilton township, for land in Hamilton township "which is held by virtue of 2 patents dated April 18, 1818."⁵

He married, May 12, 1807, Martha Shannon, Reverend David Denny, pastor, Falling Springs Church, Chambersburg, officiating. His name was recorded as "James Diermont".⁶

AG III JAMES DEARMONT, Jr. (1774-a1840), Huntingdon County, Penna.

James Dearmont, Jr., (also spelled DeArmitt), son of James Dearmond of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, was born in 1774. He was first listed in 1788 as James Deermit, single freeman, in Huntingdon township, Huntingdon County, with a tax of 12.0.¹ He was later listed with his father in Captain Little's Company of 144 men, in the same year.² He was listed in the 1790 census for Huntingdon County as James Darnet, with 1 male over 16; 2 females; no others. He was shown in the 1800 census for Huntingdon County, as living in Warriormark township, as James DeArmand with 1 male, 26-45; 1 male under 10; 1 female, 26-45; 1 female, 10-16; 2 females under 10. He does not appear in the 1810, 1820 or 1830 census records for Huntingdon County.

James Dearmott was recorded in 1806 as constable, and in 1803, 1818, 1821 and 1822 as road supervisor.⁵ He was recorded, along with William Dearmin, as receiving a warranty for 396 acres of land, Huntingdon County, date of survey being April 11, 1825.⁶ This may refer to land inherited from his father who died prior to 1820.

The 1840 census for Huntingdon County finds him in Morris township as James Dearmet with 1 male, 50-60; 1 male, 15-20; 1 male, 10-15; 1 male under 5; 1 female, 50-60; 1 female, 20-30; 1 female, 5-10.

In 1845, Jackson township was formed, and he was shown as one of the owners of seated lands.⁴ Since neither James nor his wife were listed in the 1850 census, it is assumed they were then deceased.

James married in 1789, either Esther Long or Rebecca Finley.⁶

Since James DeArmond Sr. died prior to 1820, it must be presumed that his son later became known as "James, Sr." and his son as "James Jr." George probably was another son.

5. Ibid., This could refer to either James, Sr. or James, Jr., but the age of the elder inclines us to believe that James, Jr. was the man who was engaged in those more active pursuits.

AG III WILLIAM D. DEARMON (1787-1830), Huntingdon County, Penna.

William D. Dearmon, son of James Dearmond of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, was born in Huntingdon County in 1787. He served in the War of 1812 from Huntingdon County, with the drafted troops, age 25, officers being Capt. Jeffries, also Capt. Wharton.¹ He was later listed in the roll of militia of the 33rd Pennsylvania Regiment, as returned from service on April 13, 1813, as Wm. Dearmont, private.² He was again shown as Ensign Wm. Dearmond, in the list of officers and privates of the 46th Pennsylvania Regiment, drafted troops, 1812-1814. Apparently, he had resigned as a soldier and been appointed to the officer corps.³ He was also shown as a private, Roll of Drafted Companies from Huntingdon County, November 1813.⁴ On August 17, 1813, he obtained a warranty and survey for 300 acres of land in Huntingdon County.⁵

He was a blacksmith and farmer in civilian life. He must have died before 1830, since his wife is listed as a widow in the 1830 and 1840 census records.⁶

He married Nancy Kennedy (b. 1790-1800). Apparently, she removed to Ohio with her son, Samuel, in 1844, as there is no further record of the family in Huntingdon County.

AG III BARNABAS DeARMITT (1791-1860), Huntingdon County, Penna.

Barnabas DeArmitt, son of James Dearmond, Senior, of Huntingdon County, was born in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, June 3, 1791.¹ He grew up on his father's farm and apparently lived out his life in the same locality, as he is listed in the 1830, 1840, and 1850 censuses as living in West township which is in the same valley where his father's home was situated.² He died in Huntingdon County, March 1, 1860.

The name of his wife is not known, but the 1830 and 1840 census records show she was born between 1800 and 1810. Her absence from the 1850 census indicates that she may have died after 1840.

After our subject's death, the family must have settled elsewhere, as later historians reported that none of the name were living in the county.³

AG III WILLIAM DEARMONT (c1775-1840), Huntingdon County, Penna.

William Dearmont, son of John Dearmont of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, was born 1775-1780, presumably in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania. He came with his father to Huntingdon County as a teen-age boy. Apparently, he was a farmer, and lived in Barre township throughout his life.¹ The date of his death is not known but since he is not found after 1830 in the census records for Huntingdon County, it is possible that he died between 1830 and 1840.

He married before 1800 but the name of his wife is not recorded unless the record of Mary Dearmitt of Barre township in the 1840 census is that of his widow.²

AG IV SAMUEL KENNEDY DeARMOUN (1819-1848), Butler County, Iowa

Samuel Kennedy DeArmoun, son of William D. Dearmon and Nancy Kennedy, was born in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, in 1819.¹ He grew to manhood on his father's farm, and after his father's death, continued to make his home with his widowed mother until 1844, when he removed to Ohio. It is presumed that his family moved with him. He was living in Marion County, Ohio, before his marriage. In 1855, he and his wife removed to Butler County, Iowa, by wagon teams, accompanied by her parents, brothers and sisters.² He died April 8, 1896, in Butler County, Iowa.

He married in Crawford County, Ohio, June 29, 1848, Esther Harlan (b. Jan. 14, 1828, Richland County, Ohio), daughter of Jehu Harlan and Susanna Moore, who was living in Crawford County at the time of her marriage. In 1912, she was living at Dumont, Iowa.³

Columbia County, Pennsylvania
and

AG I MICHAEL DEARMOND (1748-1839), Columbia County, Penna.

Michael Dearmond, probably a son of John Diermond of County Donegal, Ireland, was born in County Donegal in 1748. While still a lad, he entered the British Army and served in India for a number of years.¹ After this service ended, he emigrated to America, and settled in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania. He enlisted at Reading, Pennsylvania, November, 1775, as a private, in Captain John Spohn's Company, Colonel Magew's Pennsylvania Regiment, for service during the Revolutionary War. On November 16, 1776, he was wounded in the Battle of Fort Washington, taken prisoner and confined until February 1777, at which time he was released on parole.² At the time of capture, he was with the 5th Battalion, Captain Benezet's Company.³

In November 1778, Michael took the oath of allegiance before Colonel Timothy Green, Hanover township, Dauphin County,⁴ although his address was shown as Sunbury, Northumberland County, when he was taken prisoner in 1776.³ He was not found in the 1790 or 1800 census but appeared in the 1810 census as living in Londonderry township, Northumberland County, with 1 male over 45; 2 males under 10; 1 female, 26-45; 2 females under 10.

He was afterwards recorded in Columbia County, but this may have been due to the formation of that county from Northumberland County in 1813 rather than an actual physical move by Michael. He owned "a small lot" consisting of 506 acres of land, located 5 miles from Danville.¹ In 1818, he made application for a pension, giving as his residence, Columbia County, and his age as 70.² The certification of the pension by William Montgomery, Judge, comments on his extreme poverty. No explanation was given of the whereabouts of his children. In 1820, he made a statement in Open Court at Danville, Columbia County, that he was 72 years old, a shoemaker by trade but unable to pursue his trade because of bad eyesight; his wife dead and none of his family living with him.²

He was recorded in 1820⁵ and in 1825⁶ as still receiving a Revolutionary War Pension. In 1834, a recapitulation of his pension payments was made to the U. S. Senate, and later historians reading the poorly constructed statement judged him to be 86 years of age at the time of commencement of his pension, although he was actually 86 years old in 1834 when the report was written.⁷

He died in 1839, at his home near Danville, at the age of 91, and is buried in a cemetery at Danville. Last payment on his pension was made April 6, 1838, at the Girard Bank, Philadelphia, to Michael Tracy, attorney for the pensioner.⁸

AG II JOHN DeARMOND (c1804-1848), Fulton County, Illinois

John DeArmond, son of Michael Dearmond and Hester McMahan, was born in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, about 1804. In 1813, Columbia County was formed from part of Northumberland County, and presumably John found himself, along with his father, in another county. He is first found in the 1840 census for Liberty township, listed apart from his father and with his own family.¹ He was living in or near Danville when his father died in 1839.

Sometime after 1840, he removed to Illinois, where he apparently followed the pursuit of farming. He may have settled first in Sangamon County² but if so, did not tarry there long as he was living in Fulton County when he died, February 20, 1848.³

He married, in Columbia County, Pennsylvania, about 1825, Elizabeth Campbell (b. 1808, Ireland), daughter of William Campbell⁴ and Nancy McMullen. Since her father settled near Canton, Illinois, about 1848, it is possible that his removal there from Pennsylvania was occasioned by the widowhood of his daughter and probable that they made their home together afterwards.⁴ The date of her death is not known but Cora May DeArmond Davidson (q.v.) says that Elizabeth spent the winter of 1884 in Cora May's father's home and was 76 years old that year. "She enjoyed her cup of tea and made tomato preserves, using sorghum molasses."

His wife, Elizabeth Campbell, was born in Ireland and their son John moved to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1846. Their son William born Columbia County, Penna., Feb. 1826, moved to Atchison County, Missouri, and owned land." [The above biographical sketch, although badly garbled, has preserved some facts of movements and some dates. The author had his names hopelessly confused.]

AG II JAMES DeARMOND (1812-?), Blair County, Pennsylvania

James DeArmond, son of Michael Dearmond and Hester McMahan, was born in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, in 1812.¹ Sometime after he reached manhood he removed to Blair County, where he met and married his wife. He was listed in the 1850 census as an engineer.¹ In 1866, he moved to Davenport, Iowa, and later removed to Greenfield, Dade County, Missouri, to be near his son, David Albaugh. He was a farmer; a man of determination and enterprise. He is reputed to have died at the age of 94 or 96, but since he was considered for many years to have been born in 1790, this cannot be relied upon.

He married, Blair County, Pennsylvania, Catherine Albaugh (b. 1815, Maryland; d. 1904), the youngest of thirteen children.

AG III WILLIAM DeARMOND (1826-1908), Fairfax, Missouri

William DeArmond, son of John DeArmond and Elizabeth Campbell, was born in Columbia County, Pennsylvania, February 26, 1826. He was reared on his father's place near Danville, Pennsylvania, being 13 years old when his grandfather, Michael, died. His parents moved to Sangamon County, Illinois, in 1846, and to Fulton County, Illinois, shortly after, but William remained in Sangamon County, working as a thresher.¹ Later, he settled at Knoxville, Iowa, and from there moved to Fairfax, Atchison County, Missouri,² where he remained until his children were grown. Afterwards, he moved to Washington state and settled near Sultan, where he died, December 17, 1908, and is buried.

He married, March 26, 1851, Sangamon County, Illinois, Leah Adeline Carson (b. July 30, 1829; d. Oct. 17, 1908, Sultan, Wash.; g. same), who was related to Kit Carson, famous Western scout.

AG III JUDGE DAVID ALBAUGH DeARMOND (1844-1909), Butler, Missouri

Judge David Albaugh DeArmond, son of James DeArmond and Catherine Albaugh, was born at Altoona, Blair County, Pennsylvania, March 18, 1844. His father removed to Davenport, Iowa, in 1866, and it is presumed that David moved with his father. He eventually settled in Bates County, Missouri, and in 1884, was a presidential elector on the democratic ticket of Cleveland and Hendricks. He was a Missouri State Senator from 1879 to 1883, and was Missouri Supreme Court Commissioner in 1884. He was elected to the U. S. House of Representatives, and served from March 4, 1891 until his death.¹ He was a man of strong character and a caustic tongue, which coupled with his prodigious memory and comprehensive knowledge of the Constitution, made of him a dreaded adversary. Many a Congressional opponent has had cause to regret he tangled with the Missouri representative. His nephew, Louis D'Armand, has this to say of his uncle: "After absorbing all his adversary had to offer, he would rise, face old Joe Cannon and draw his words and sentences across the finest file ever used in Congress."

He lost his life when his home burned and he went back into the burning building to save the life of his grandson. Both perished in the flames, November 23, 1909. The entire nation was shocked at the tragic death of one of the most colorful and dynamic personalities in the U. S. Congress. He is buried in Oak Hill cemetery, Butler, Missouri.

He married Alice M. Long, of Greenfield, Missouri.

of Northumberland County, Pennsylvania

Thomas was the American sire of a prolific and distinguished family. Two of his sons remained in Pennsylvania, and the descendants of one of them are still residing in Northumberland County. The other two sons settled in Ohio, and left many descendants who assumed a prominent part in the development of Butler and Hamilton Counties. For many years, the family has held a reunion each summer for the renewal of family ties, and the exchange of news and family history. As a result, a rich store of family history has been preserved, which was generously shared with this author and has been included in this work.

From Ohio, some descendants moved into other sections of the country, but for the most part, the family has remained rooted in Butler County, and today forms a part of the government and cultural life of the community.

AG I THOMAS DEARMOND (c1735-c1811), Northumberland County, Penna.

Thomas Dearmond, son of Alexander Diermond of County Donegal, North Ireland, was born in North Ireland about 1735. He came to America as a young man, and settled first in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania. His wife, who was French, died in childbirth soon after his arrival, and he returned to Ireland for another bride.¹ He was first recorded on June 28, 1768, in a caveat proceedings by Robert Dunbar, involving title to his land which had been improved about 1758 by Joseph Scott and sold by him to Thomas Dearmond, who in turn sold it to Alexander Miller, who sold it to Archibald Stewart, who was then living on it.² No location was given but it was probably in Dauphin County. One history says he emigrated from Scotland to Ireland and from there to America,³ but this is perhaps only partly true since the family was apparently established in North Ireland before Thomas was born.

He served during the Revolutionary War, 1776-1779, as a private in Captain Alexander Lawson Smith's company, Rawling's Regiment, Continental Troops (which later became Capt. Gabriel Long's Company, Morgan's Rifle Regiment, Continental Troops). He enlisted, August 17, 1776, and his name last appeared on the company payroll for July 1779, which bore no remarks. His name was recorded variously as 'Thomas De-Arnot', 'Thomas Dearmott', 'Thomas Dearmon'.⁴

By 1783, Thomas was living in Turbot township, Northumberland County, with 150 acres of land.⁵ On December 26, 1786, he purchased additional land.⁶ The 1790 census shows his family as consisting of himself, wife, and four sons.⁷ On November 18, 1791, he was listed on the roll of pay for the Volunteer Corps of Scouts, employed on frontiers of Allegheny County for 8 days.⁸ On September 8, 1793, he purchased from Frederick Watts, property in Turbot township.⁹ The 1800 census reveals that his family was breaking up, two sons being gone, and a third one married.¹⁰ On December 20, 1805, he sold property in Turbot township to John Hower.⁹ The 1810 census shows him a widower, living with his two youngest sons, including the wife and children of Samuel.¹¹ On September 4, 1811, he sold to his "son, Samuel DeArmond", property located in Turbot township.¹² On October 22, 1811, he transferred to the Warrior Run Presbyterian Church congregation, property in Turbot township.¹³ No further record of him has been found, and it is presumed that he died, 1811-1812.

After the death of his first wife, he returned to Ireland and married Peggy King (b. b1755; d. 1800-1810, Northumberland County, Penna.), and brought her to his home in Dauphin County. This may have occurred about 1766.¹

He seemed to think all of the name had to leave. He thought that only one came to America from Ireland (Thomas Dearmond) and his wife was French but did not live long after they arrived here, when her first baby was born and died. AG II KING DeARMOND (1767-1844), Butler County, Ohio

King DeArmond, son of Thomas DeArmond and Peggy King, was born in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, in 1767. About 1783, he removed with his parents to Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, where he grew to manhood and married. In 1806, he and his family, in company with his brother Alexander and his family, came down the Ohio River in a flatboat seeking new homes. They turned up the Great Miami River near Cincinnati, and then up the Whitewater. They pushed the flatboat up the Whitewater to a point about 2 miles above Harrison, where they landed. King located on land about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile west of what is now Shandon, Ohio, which is now known as the Atherton farm. A log house which stood east of the present farmhouse was his home.¹ He lived out his life in this log house; all his children who were born after he reached Ohio were born there. He was a justice of the peace as early as 1811, and became a successful farmer and planter. He died at his home, October 24, 1844, and is buried at Shandon, Ohio.

He married first, Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, about 1804, Hannah Hardin (b. 1781; d. 1828; g. Shandon, Ohio), daughter of Samuel Hardin.

He married second, Lydia Demoret (b. 1774; d. Feb. 2, 1867, Butler County, Ohio), sister of Nicholas Demoret.² No issue.

Her brother, Nicholas, is mentioned in the deed which made King no longer responsible for her upkeep". A narrow interpretation of this document would indicate that King had regretted his marriage to Lydia Demoret.

AG II ALEXANDER DeARMOND (1769-1833), Butler County, Ohio

Alexander DeArmond, son of Thomas DeArmond and Peggy King, was born in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, October 16, 1769, and moved with his father to Turbot township, Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, about 1783, where he grew to manhood and married. In 1804, he came to Ohio on horseback to scout a new homesite.¹ After he found what he wanted, he rode back to Pennsylvania and returned to Ohio with his brother, King, and their families, by flatboat down the Ohio River. They entered the mouth of the Great Miami River and then up the Whitewater River. They pushed the flatboat up the Whitewater about 2 miles above Harrison, where they landed. After their arrival, the Indians stole their horses. Alexander settled for about two years on what was later the Wash Mettler farm, on the Harrison and Brookville pike. After living for a short time in the Whitewater Valley, he moved to Morgan township and settled on land which is now known as the Pop Otto farm. He entered this section of land. The log house in which he lived stood on the premises and not far from the houses on the Pop Otto farm. This log house was afterwards torn down and rebuilt in Okeana and became the home of Harry DeArmond. He died April 24, 1833, at the age of 63.

He married, in Pennsylvania, Elizabeth Huff (b. June 25, 1774; d. Sept. 9, 1854, Okeana, Ohio; g. Shandon, Ohio).

He accumulated considerable land by purchase from his father and others.² He died in 1818.³

AG II ROBERT K. DeARMOND (1784-1826), Northumberland County, Penna.

Robert K. DeArmond, son of Thomas Dearmond and Peggy King, was born in 1784, probably in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania. He continued to live in Turbot township, and accumulated considerable property.¹ He may have followed the pursuit of farming, although there is no clear record on this point. He died at the early age of 42, July 26-29, 1826. We are indebted to his will for the identification of the sons of Thomas Dearmond, his father, since being without living issue, Robert hoped to perpetuate his name through the children of his brothers.² The bulk of his estate was left to the Penuel Church, of which he was a member, for the maintenance of the pastor's salary.

He married, prior to 1810, although the name of his wife has not been found.³ She predeceased him, and both were buried in the same plot.² It is possible to assume from the census record that he had a son who may have died in infancy.³

Samuel Hardin DeArmond, son of King DeArmond and Hannah Hardin, was born in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, November 15, 1805. While a baby, he was brought down the Ohio River in a flatboat by his father who settled in Butler County, near Shandon, in 1806. Here Samuel grew to manhood. He was a county squire for 25 years, and never had a case reversed by a higher court. He also served as treasurer of his town for 9 years, and was trustee for two years.¹ He died, October 1888.

He married, November 2, 1826, Sarah Youmans (b. Nov. 2, 1806; d. 1897), daughter of Peter Youmans (b. 1777, Sussex, New Jersey) and Sarah Perigo (b. 1779). Sarah's family settled in Butler County in 1815, and lived at Shandon. Thomas DeArmond, son of Alexander DeArmond and Elizabeth Huff, was born, March 6, 1793, in Turbot township, Northumberland County, Pennsylvania. He was brought to Ohio by his parents in 1806.¹ He grew to maturity on his father's farm, and later made his home near Okeana, and built a house in which he lived until his death. Some of his grandchildren were born in this house. He died November 26, 1879, and is buried in Shandon cemetery, where his monument flanks the entrance to New Shandon cemetery.

He married first, December 15, 1814, Butler County, Ohio,⁴ Rebecca Jenkins (b. Pittsylvania County, Va., 1793), daughter of William Jenkins (q.v.) and Susannah Walker. She came to Ohio with her family in 1807. She died October 6, 1834, and is buried in Shandon cemetery.

He married second, 1835, Anna Youmans (Stokes) (b. April 19, 1802, N. J.; d. Mar. 22, 1878), daughter of Peter Youmans² and Sarah Perigo. She was the divorcée of William Stokes³ whom she married when very young. Her husband deserted her and she returned to her father's home with five small children and secured a divorce. Anna's sister, Maria, married James DeArmond (q.v.), and her sister, Sarah, married Samuel Hardin DeArmond, Sr. (q.v.).

AG III KING DeARMOND (1800-c1849), Butler County, Ohio

King DeArmond, son of Alexander DeArmond and Elizabeth Huff, was born in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, in 1800, prior to his father's removal to Ohio. He was brought by his father to Ohio on a flatboat down the Ohio River from Pennsylvania to Butler County, Ohio. He lived on the old Atherton place, probably the home of his mother's father. After reaching a mature age, he went to California during the gold rush. He died of cholera, and was buried at sea, either on his way to or return from California, or possibly during a coastal voyage from one point in California to another. This would place his death about 1849-1850.

He married first, Phoebe Shaw (b. 1798?), daughter of John Shaw (b. 1759, Va.; a drummer in the Revolutionary War; d. Nov. 8, 1855, Franklin County, Ind.; g. Mt. Carmel, beside his wife) and Rebecca Atherton (b. 1767, Va.; d. Mt. Carmel, July 1, 1853).

AG IV JAMES THOMAS DeARMOND (1844-1903), Shandon, Ohio

James Thomas DeArmond, son of Thomas DeArmond and Anna Youmans, was born on his father's farm, near Okeana, Ohio, March 28, 1844. In early years, he attended a private college at Peoria, Indiana, as it was the desire of his very devout mother and sisters that he become a minister. He was not inclined that way, and enlisted for service with the federal troops during the Civil War, for which he received a pension in his later years. After the war ended, he returned to his home, and followed the pursuit of farming for the remainder of his active life. After his children reached school age, he moved from the farm to Shandon, Ohio, to be near good schools. He had many excellent traits and was well liked by friends and acquaintances, but had a weakness for strong drink which caused his wife, Amanda, to divorce him, after which she supported the family by her own endeavors. He died in Hamilton, Ohio, February 20, 1903, and is buried at Shandon, Ohio. His grave marker reads: "Co. F, 93rd Ohio Infantry".

He married first, March 1865, Eliza Hommer (b. Oct. 23, 1841; d. April 29, 1867), daughter of John Hommer and Lucinda Brundage. No issue.

He married second, December 26, 1867, Amanda M. Hommer (b. April 10, 1849; d. May 18, 1927; g. Shandon, Ohio), sister of his first wife.

Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania

This immigrant ancestor of the Crawford County, Pennsylvania, family, may have come to America accompanied by several brothers, whose names must, in absence of better proof, be speculative. The Geographical Index of Unidentified Names shows several of the name in Allegheny, Washington and Westmoreland Counties, Pennsylvania, whose indicated ages would preclude any relationship other than that of brother or cousin. These names disappear from Pennsylvania records after 1800, and all efforts to trace their descendants have been fruitless.

John apparently settled finally in Crawford County, although no actual record of him there has been located. Most of his descendants remained there, and participated in the growth and development of the county.

This is an imperfect account since neither the marriage, deed or will records for Crawford County have been searched. An intensive local search could easily develop this record into a comprehensive and complete history of this family.

AG I JOHN DeARMENT (c1750-a1812), Westmoreland County, Penna.

John DeArment, son of John Diermond of Fersalmore, Parish of Leck, County Donegal, North Ireland, was born about 1750, in County Donegal, Ireland.¹ He emigrated to America, and came into Pennsylvania through Maryland, and settled first in Newton township, Cumberland County, where he was listed in 1779 as "John Deyermond, freeman," for supply tax, 3 pounds.² He was afterwards shown on August 2, 1782, in the Class Roll of 2nd Company, 6th Battalion, Cumberland County Militia, commanded by Colonel James Dunlap, as "1st Class, John Dearmin", Associators and Militia.³

He is found in the 1790 U. S. census for Mifflin County, as living in that part of the county lying north of the Juniata River, with 1 male over 16; 3 males under 16; 4 women. He soon after removed to Westmoreland County, in the western part of the state, where he was listed as having received depreciation pay.⁴ Apparently, he moved north into Crawford County, and settled in Fallowfield township about 1800.

There were several other persons of the name living in Allegheny, Washington and Westmoreland Counties subsequent to the Revolution, some of whom may have been his brothers.⁵ No later record of him has been found unless the payroll record for Capt. John Collom's militia company covering the winter campaign of 1812-1813, which records "John Dearmid, service 6 months, $20.00, paid at Erie," refers to him. His son, John Cook DeArment, is shown alongside in that payroll.⁶ The date of his death is not known and no census record of him subsequent to 1790 has been found.

His wife was Nancy Cook⁷ whom he must have married in Ireland, since the 1850 census shows his son, John Cook, as having been born there in 1780.

AG II JOHN COOK DeARMENT (1780-1856), Crawford County, Penna.

John Cook DeArment, son of John DeArment and Nancy Cook, was born in Ireland in 1780,² and brought as a very small child to America by his parents. His parents removed to Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, sometime after 1790, and about 1800, the family moved north into Crawford County, and settled in Fallowfield township. John Cook was still living in Fallowfield township at the time of his marriage. Afterwards, he settled in Greenwood township.

He served in the War of 1812, in the 7th Company, Capt. John Collom, commanding; 2nd Battalion, 136th Regiment, Major D. Nelson, commanding; 1 B 16 Militia Division, General H. H. Harrison, commanding. He enlisted as a private and may have achieved the rank of sergeant. Since two of the name signed one payroll, it is possible that his father served as ensign in the same company.⁶

He spent the remainder of his life farming on the place he settled after 1820.² He died in February, 1856.³

He married, December 6, 1810, Mercer County, Pennsylvania, Mary Minnis¹ (b. 1785; d. July 28, 1880),⁵ of Sandy Lake, Mercer County, Pennsylvania.⁷

"Died at her home with her son Samuel DeArment of Greenwood township, Crawford Co. Pa., July 28, Mrs. Mary DeArment, aged 95 years. Mrs. DeArment was the widow of the late John DeArment, a soldier of 1812, who died twenty-four years ago last February, aged over seventy years. They came from the southern part of the state in 1800 and Mrs. DeArment has lived on the farm, where she died, for more than seventy years. From her youth, she had been a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and beloved by a large circle of acquaintances as a neighbor and friend. She retained her mental faculties quite clear and vigorous to the last. Without doubt notwithstanding her great age, her life was materially shortened by a cancer, with which she had for sometime suffered. Her funeral last Sabbath, was attended by a large number of people from near and far. The sermon was preached by Rev. David Waggoner of Venangoboro, Pa., who had known the deceased for forty years."

After his marriage, he lived for awhile at Oil City, Pennsylvania, but in 1886, he started a tool manufacturing industry at Conneaut Lake, a village not far from where he was reared. The business thrived and grew to such proportions that in 1904, he removed to Meadville, in the same county. This industry became the Champion DeArment Tool Company, and its products have attained a nation-wide reputation. Soon after removing to Meadville, he built a home at 263 Randolph Street, which he continued to occupy until his death. He died May 5, 1917, and funeral services were conducted by Dr. William B. Irwin, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, on Tuesday, May 22, 1917, interment being in Greendale cemetery.¹ Because of his personal integrity and business acumen, he was a man highly esteemed over a wide area.

He married, March 25, 1879, Eva Lucinda Whiting (b. Sept. 30, 1853), Rev. McNabb, officiating. She has traveled extensively before and after the death of her husband, and has spent many winters in Florida. She is still living at Meadville, now 98 years old (1952).

He entered his father's business when he completed his schooling, and when his father retired, he and his brother assumed the management, he becoming president. He was a director of the Crawford County Trust Company; served on the Meadville City Council; was a member of the First Presbyterian Church; and a 32nd degree Mason. He was a business leader but possessed of a sense of responsibility toward his fellowman as evidenced by his public service and generous purse to all worthy causes, and was beloved by his fellow citizens. He died suddenly on the evening of September 3, 1927, while attending the theatre with his wife. He is buried in Greendale cemetery.¹

Kent County, Maryland

There is much uncertainty about the history of this family. On the surface, the early records were contradictory, and it has been well nigh impossible to discern the truth. The immigrant ancestor, whose name we do not know, and to whom we have assigned the arbitrary name of "Michael" as a means of identification, may have been a brother of William Dearmond of Cumberland County, Pennsylvania (Line C). He was, of course, closely related to the other immigrant members of the DeArmond family since many of the early Pennsylvania families used the same spelling.

This outline follows only those of this family who settled in Virginia, as the others disappeared, and no trace of them has been found. The Virginia descendants divided, one family remaining in northern Virginia, and the other settling in Missouri.

The author has spent years pondering this family but the results were unrewarding. Possibly, descendants of the lost members of this family can, by use of this account and their more intimate knowledge of their particular ancestors, find some of the solutions that eluded him.

AG I ?MICHAEL DEARMONT of Harford County, Maryland

This man, the immigrant ancestor of this family must have been born in North Ireland about 1730, and emigrated to America apparently after 1760. His first name is not known with absolute certainty, but the frequent appearance of 'Michael' among his descendants lends credence to the assumption of that name for him. He probably came up the Delaware River, landed at Newcastle, and settled in Delaware or Maryland, between the upper reaches of Chesapeake Bay and Delaware River. Apparently, he died before 1790, as no record has been found of him in the 1790 census.

His wife, Mary Dearmont, is listed in the 1790 census for Harford County, Maryland, as "Mary Dearmatt, with two females in family; no others." She was born, presumably, in Ireland between 1740 and 1750. After the death of her son, William, Mary removed to Virginia, and lived with her son, John Dearmont (q.v.), until her death.

The names of the children of this union have been determined from their early movements and the similarity and spelling of names. William, Michael, and James, were recorded in Virginia before and during the Revolutionary War but John remained in Maryland until after the death of his brother, William. Peter appears in Virginia for the first time in 1810.

AG II WILLIAM DEARMONT (c1750-c1793), Fauquier County, Va.

William Dearmont, son of ?Michael and Mary Dearmont of Kent County, Maryland, was born, probably, in North Ireland, and brought as a boy by his parents to America, where he was reared either in Delaware or Maryland.

He appeared in Fauquier County, Virginia, in 1771, along with his brother, Michael, on the list of Irish emigrants who found their way into the Shenandoah Valley prior to the Revolutionary War. He served during the Revolution in Colonel Fry's Regiment, his name being carried on the rolls throughout the war, from 1778 to 1783.¹ His grandson told his children that William also served in the French and Indian Colonial Wars, and that he was with Washington at the defeat of Braddock.²

According to family legend, William died while his children were quite young, apparently about 1793, as all of his children appear to have been born between 1790 and 1794. The 1810 census lists his widow, Mary, as living in Frederick County, Virginia, with her two sons and daughter.³ The 1820 census for Frederick County lists her son, Michael, as head of the household which included his mother, brother and sister.⁴ The 1830 census does not show Mary or the family entity, indicating that she had died and her children were scattered.

Family legend also says that William's children were reared by his bachelor brother, John Dearmont (q.v.). Undoubtedly, through his efforts, he provided a home and sustenance for them, leaving to their mother the responsibility of rearing them and maintaining the home.²

AG II JOHN DEARMONT (a1760-b1840), Fauquier County, Va.

John Dearmont, son of ?Michael and Mary Dearmont of Kent County, Maryland, was born 1760-1770, probably in Delaware after his parents reached America. He grew to manhood in Newcastle County.

He served during the Revolution as a private in Captain John Boggs' Company, 2nd battalion, Delaware Militia, commanded by Colonel Couch. His name appeared on the company muster roll covering the period from December 17 to 27, year not shown. He was also shown in Captain Carson's Company, 2nd Regiment, Newcastle County, Delaware Militia, rank not stated. His name appears on an undated return of the absentees in the Western District of White Claycreek on Muster Days, September 26, 1778 and October 31, which shows: "Days 2".¹ He served as a substitute from Harford County, Maryland, in the Maryland Militia, from May to December 10, 1781.² He is shown in the 1790 census for Harford County as living alone.³

Later, he moved into Virginia, and settled in Fauquier County. His brother, William, died about 1793, and after the death of his brother, Peter, in 1811, John assumed the responsibility of providing for William's widow and children. They continued to live on the farm which Peter had leased from the Fairfax heirs in 1793.⁴

The 1810 census for Frederick County, Virginia, lists Peter Dearmont with 2 males over 45; 3 females over 45. This undoubtedly includes John but not his nephews and niece since they were separately listed with their mother, Mary Dearmont. The three females remain unidentified except that one was probably John's mother.

John is himself listed in the 1830 census for Frederick County, Virginia, age 60-70, living alone with his mother, age 80-90. All histories and family legends say he lived out his life in Fauquier County surrounded by his brother's descendants, and Peter Dearmont of Mound City, Missouri, remembered him there when he (Peter) was a child.⁴ However, the census records show him in Frederick County through 1830 and he is not listed thereafter, indicating he may have died between 1830 and 1840. He never married.

AG II PETER DEARMONT (c1760-1811), Frederick County, Va.

Peter Dearmont, son of ?Michael and Mary Dearmont of Kent County, Maryland, was born 1760-1770, perhaps after his father reached America. He is first recorded on April 6, 1793, when he leased from Denny Fairfax, 100 acres in Frederick County, Virginia, for the period of the natural life of himself, his brother, John, and his nephew, Michael . . .¹ On this farm, he established himself, his brother, John, and the widow and children of his deceased brother, William.

The 1810 census for Frederick County lists him with 2 males over 45; 3 females over 45. Presumably, this includes his brother, John, who does not appear elsewhere in that census; one of the women listed may have been his mother.

He died in 1811, his will, dated June 5, and probated December 2, reading as follows: "I give to John Derman, Mary Derman, Ann Derman and Betsy Derman, all my property during their natural lives and desire that these four persons shall live together as long as each shall live". His nephew, Michael Dearmont [sic], was a witness.² John is easily identified as his brother; Mary, as his mother; the identity of the two last named, Ann and Betsy, is speculative. Family legend says that both Peter and John were bachelors, but the 1810 census, apparently, refutes this, as a logical interpretation would indicate Peter and John, their mother, and their wives, as living in the same household.

AG III MICHAEL DEARMONT (c1790-c1854), Clarke County, Va.

Michael Dearmont, son of William and Mary Dearmont, was born 1790-1794, in Fauquier County, Virginia. While he was a small child, his father died, and he and his brother and sister were reared by his mother with the aid of his bachelor uncle, John Dearmont. In 1810, the family was found in Frederick County, where they remained until after 1830. Family legend says Michael was reared on his uncle John's mountain home in Fauquier County which is still owned by the family of Washington Dearmont.¹

Michael was for many years a builder of macadamized roads, and made a comfortable fortune at the business. After he gave up road building, he bought a farm in Clarke County, Virginia.¹ He was in Prince William County in 1827, and the following year appeared in the vicinity of White Post.²

His will, dated August 13, 1855, was probated October 22, 1855, and mentions his wife, Lucy; daughter, Sally; and sons, John, James Thomas, and Washington. There is no explanation for the omission of his son, Peter, from his will.³ We may assume he died between August and October, 1855, although his brother, Peter, was listed as head of his family in the 1850 census and Michael was not listed.

He married, October 25, 1826, Frederick County, Virginia, Lucinda Ferguson (b. 1805, Prince William County, Va.), whose father was born in Scotland and whose mother was Miss Marshall.⁴

AG III PETER DEARMONT (1790-1856), Frederick County, Virginia

Peter Dearmont, son of William and Mary Dearmont, was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, in 1790. His father died while he was a child, and he and his brother and sister were reared in Frederick County with the help of his uncle, John Dearmont. His mother must have died after 1820 as she does not appear in the 1830 census. Peter appears in the 1830 census for Frederick County, with 2 males, 20-30; 1 female, 30-40; 10 slaves, showing that he was a prosperous planter. The census also indicates that his sister, Mary, had not yet married and was still living at home. The two males listed pose an enigma since Peter's brother, Michael, married in 1826 and was separately listed in the 1830 census. Although Peter's uncle, John Dearmont, was also listed separately in the same census, they were, according to family tradition, living together.

Peter does not appear in the 1840 census but does appear in the census for 1850 as head of the household of his brother, Michael.¹ This is another mystery since Michael did not die until 1855. All the names in this census record check with other histories and family legend.

Peter died, apparently, in 1856, as an inventory was taken of his personal property on October 27, 1856, by Washington Dearmont, administrator.²

AG IV COLONEL WASHINGTON DEARMONT (1828-?), Clarke County, Va.

Colonel Washington Dearmont, son of Michael Dearmont and Lucy Ferguson, was born in Clarke County, Virginia, in 1828. He was reared on the farm where he was born and grew up in the atmosphere of the Blue Ridge Mountains. After his father died, while he was still a teen-age youth, the support of the younger members of the family devolved on him. He is listed in the 1850 census as living in the household with his uncle, Peter Dearmont, and as manager of the farm, aged 22.

He became a colonel of militia and was with his regiment in command of Winchester when the Civil War began. When Virginia seceded from the Union, his regiment and command passed to the Confederate Army. He later enlisted in Colonel John S. Moseby's First Company of Guerillas and served through many raids with this famous Confederate warrior.¹

In civil life, he was chosen first supervisor of Greenway District, and was later elected sheriff and treasurer at a time when these two offices were combined. He was a democrat and a Mason.²

He married first, after 1850, a daughter of Strother Bell and Jane Ann Potts. His brothers, Peter and James Thomas, married her sisters.

Issue: none.

He married second, Jane Bowen (Poague), a widow (b. 1846, Berryville, Clarke County, Va.). Her father was a resident of Clarke County, a captain of militia, and his command took part in the John Brown raid. It is said that one of his men prevented the escape of Brown. Jane Bowen had no children by her first marriage.²

Dr. Washington Strother Dearmont, son of Peter Dearmont of Mound City, Missouri, was born at Mound City, September 22, 1859. After completing his primary education at home, he entered the University of Missouri, from which he graduated in 1885 with an A.B., Pd.B. degree. In 1889, he received an A.M. degree from the same institution. In 1907, the Westminster College, Fulton, Missouri, conferred on him the honorary degree of Litt.D. He obtained his master's degree from the University of Chicago in 1922.

He became superintendent of schools at Kirkwood, a suburb of Saint Louis. From there he went, as president, to the Normal School at Cape Girardeau. In 1919, in concert with other state normal school presidents, he was instrumental in having the normal schools of Missouri designated by the Missouri General Assembly as the State Teachers College. He was president of the Southeast Missouri State Teachers College from October 1899 to June 7, 1921, a period of 22 years. During his tenure of office the institution made great progress in plant development and its status as an educational institution. He was one of the early promoters of the American Association of Teachers Colleges.

He afterward studied at University of Chicago toward his master's degree. He became Professor of Education, and Dean of the College of Education, at Southwestern Louisiana Institute in the early 1930's, which position he held until 1938, when he returned to Cape Girardeau, and was made president emeritus of the Southeast Missouri State College, which status he retained until his death. He died at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, July 17, 1944.

Joseph, Alexander, Hugh, and David, presumably sons of Hugh Deyarmont of County Down, emigrated to America about 1785, and settled first in Pennsylvania. They made their homes in different counties, and David settled in Ohio. As early as 1875, their families appear to have almost lost the knowledge of the relationship between them, and it is only through modern accessibility to old records that we re-establish the fact that they were brothers.

Whether other sons of Hugh Deyarmont came to America cannot be determined since no clear records of his family have been located.

AG I JOSEPH DEYARMON (1756-1824), Dauphin County, Penna.

Joseph Deyarmon, probably a son of Hugh Deyarmont of County Down, Ireland, was born in Ireland, January 8, 1756. He was first listed in Hamilton township, Franklin County, Pennsylvania, in 1789, for tax purposes, with taxables consisting of 2 horses, 3 cows.¹ The 1790 U. S. census, Franklin County, Pennsylvania, for the district which included Hamilton, Fannet, Letterkenny, Montgomery and Peters townships, listed him with 1 male over 16; 1 male under 16; 3 women.² In 1791, he was again listed with taxables consisting of 2 horses, 2 cows, in Hamilton township, Franklin County.³

Before 1800, he removed to Dauphin County, and was listed in the 1800 census for Londonderry township, and again in 1810 in the same township.⁴ He was also recorded as living at Palmerstown [now Palmyra], Lebanon County, Pennsylvania, near the Dauphin County line, at the time of the marriage of his daughter, Elizabeth, in 1806.⁵ He was again recorded as residing in Palmerstown in 1812.⁶ A document in the possession of Miss Jessie E. Pocock of Medina, Ohio, in 1933, is an original agreement entered into between Joseph Deyarmon and his son, Dr. Joseph C. Deyarmon, signed by both, and Susanna and Mary S. Deyarman, under the terms of which Dr. Joseph C. Deyarmon purchased 125 acres of land in Halifax township, Dauphin County, from his father, on November 3, 1814, for $1500, $750 payable "May next" and $100 yearly on the first of each April until the full amount was paid. The two families were to live together as they had in the past, for six years from that date, or longer if either parent survived. According to a survey of Joseph's plat, there was left after this sale, 22 acres, 3 rods and 26 perches. Joseph must have lived for a few years in Palmerstown but retaining his farm in Dauphin County, to which he returned after 1812. He lived for 10 years after entering into the agreement with his son, and died, December 2, 1824.

He married, January 29, 1787, Susanna Chapman (b. Dec. 25, 1755), daughter of John Chapman and Mary Twining.

AG III CHRISTIAN SPAYD DeARMOND (1820-1898), Loudenville, Ohio

Christian Spayd DeArmond, son of Dr. Joseph Chapman Deyarmon and Phebe Stubbs, was born in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, November 3, 1820. He was taken to Ohio as a child by his parents, and grew to manhood at Wooster and later, Loudenville. He became a cabinetmaker by trade and lived on a farm at the outskirts of Loudenville, in Ashland County. He later moved to town, and owned and operated a grain elevator, and was a dealer in grain, seeds and wool. He also owned and operated a planing mill. He served as mayor of Loudenville, was an ardent Republican, and a lifelong Methodist. As a boy, before the outbreak of the Civil War, he and his brothers helped operate the "underground railway", accompanying as guards the wagons apparently loaded with a jag of hay or bagged grain. His father's place at Millbrook, west of Wooster, was too public to use as a station on the underground, since patients were constantly coming and going, so a widow's home nearby was used, and the brothers did the transporting of the escaping slaves to the next point north of Wooster. He sent two substitutes to the Civil War, as he was a 'one lunger' and not eligible to serve.¹

On February 11, 1841, letters of administration were issued to him for the Estate of Joseph Deyarmon, bond being given for $300, for the purpose of sale of real estate. This was undoubtedly the estate of his grandfather.² He died November 26, 1898, at Loudenville, and is buried there in a cemetery which he had beautified with avenues of maple trees.

He married, March 28, 1844, Caroline Eliza Harris (b. Sept. 15, 1820; d. Apr. 26, 1905), daughter of Asa Harris and Mary Houghton.

AG I ALEXANDER DEYARMON (1765-1852), Fayette County, Pennsylvania

Alexander Deyarmon, probably a son of Hugh Deyarmont of County Down, Ireland, was born at Cargy Gray, Annahilt Parish, County Down, Ireland, in 1765, and came to America as a young man. The first record of him is found in a newspaper account of early American papermaking which stated that Alexander Deyarmon, a skilled papermaker, was the chief vatman. The paper mill was located on Redstone Creek, Fayette County.³ He did not appear in the 1800 census but is found in the 1810 census with his wife, stepchildren and his own eldest children.¹

His farm in Jefferson township became known as "Clifton". This part of the family history is a contradiction of the census records which show him living in Washington township. Family records also say he died in 1852, but again census records are not in agreement as he disappears completely after the 1830 census.

He married Jane (Russell) (b. 1765-1775; d. 1851), a widow. She had two sons by her first marriage: William Russell and Boyd Russell.²

AG I HUGH DEYARMON, SR. (1766-1811), Uniontown, Pennsylvania

Hugh Deyarmon, senior, probably a son of Hugh Deyarmont of County Down, Ireland, was born at Cargy Gray, Annahilt Parish, County Down, Ireland, about 1766. He came to America as a young man and is first found in the list of "free and ablebodied males between the ages of 18 and 45 inhabiting within the bounds of the 5th Battalion of Cumberland County [Penna.] militia", list being dated February 4, 1793.¹ He is supposed to have settled in Fayette County about 1800² but no census record of him in 1800 has been found. Where he spent the intervening years cannot be learned. Apparently, he settled, cleared and farmed, the land where he made his home.

According to Grover R. Deyarmon (q.v.) of Old, Iowa, he was killed at the age of 45 by a fall from a horse. Since his youngest child was born in 1811 and his widow's first child by her second marriage was born in 1813, we assume his death must have occurred about 1811.

He married Elizabeth Spratt (b. 1776, Ireland), who, according to family tradition, came to America on the same boat with Hugh and married him soon after. Within two years after her husband's death, Elizabeth remarried.³ In 1850, Elizabeth was living in the household of her son, Alexander Deyarmon (q.v.), and apparently again a widow.⁴ The date of her death has not been determined.

1810 U. S. census, Fayette County, Penna., for Menallen twsp. Charles McCormack with 1 male,

26-45; 2 males under 10; 1 female over 45; 1 female, 16-26. [The female over 45 was perhaps his mother and the other female, 16-26, perhaps his first wife.]

1820 U. S. census, same location. Charles McCormick with 1 male over 45; 1 male, 10-16; 2 males under 10; 1 female, 26-45; 1 female, 10-16; 2 females under 10. [Here, apparently, is Charles' family and that of Elizabeth by her first marriage, combined.]

1830 U. S. census, same location. Charles McCormick with 1 male, 50-60; 2 males, 20-30; 1 male, 15-20; 1 male, 10-15; 1 male, 5-10; 1 male under 5; 1 female, 40-50; 1 female, 10-15; 2 females, 5-10; 1 female under 5. [Here, apparently, is part of Charles' first marriage, Elizabeth's first marriage, and children of their union.]

1840 U. S. census, same location. Margaret McCormick with 1 male, 20-30; 1 male, 15-20; 1 female, 50-60; 1 female, 10-15. [Here we find Margaret, a widow; we must assume that we are dealing with Margaret Elizabeth Spratt in order to sustain our premise; her second husband deceased, and living at home with her, perhaps: Hugh Deyarmon, Jr., John McCormick, and one of her McCormick daughters.]

AG II D. BENJAMIN DeuARMON (1800-1837), Huntsville, Alabama

D. Benjamin DeuArmon, son of Hugh Deyarmon, Sr. of Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and Isabella Spratt, was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania,¹ March 1, 1800. He was reared on his father's farm, and continued to live there after his father's death, about 1811, and his mother's remarriage. He left home, probably about 1820, and went to Knoxville, Tennessee, to study medicine.² Why he chose Knoxville, and whether he took his studies at the University of Tennessee which did not then have a College of Medicine, cannot be learned. The enrollment records of the University of Tennessee for those early years have been lost. His presence in Knoxville has been established by the record of his appointment as administrator of the Estate of James Simpson in 1822.³

He is next found in the 1830 census for Madison County, Alabama, as Benjamin DeuArmand with 3 males, 20-30; 1 male, 15-20; indicating that he was a bachelor and that perhaps his younger brothers were living with him, although Alexander married before 1825 and records do not indicate that he ever left Pennsylvania. Hugh Hadden Deyarmon, Sr., recalled that he saw his Uncle Benjamin at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, in 1835. Hugh Hadden was then 10 years of age and capable of remembering accurately. Apparently, Benjamin had returned to Pennsylvania on a visit.¹ Whether his wife accompanied him on this visit is not known. He died October 6, 1837, at Huntsville, Alabama.

He married about 1831, Emma J. — (b. April 20, 1811, N. C.; d. Apr. 18, 1850, Madison County, Ala.).⁴ After the death of her husband, she remained a widow for a few years.⁵ She was not listed in the 1840 census for Madison County but was there in 1843.⁶ In 1842, she joined the M. E. Church, and on July 16, 1844, she married William Lanford of Madison County.⁴

AG II ALEXANDER DEYARMON (1802-a1877), Uniontown, Pennsylvania

Alexander Deyarmon, Senior, son of Hugh Deyarmon, senior, and Isabelle Spratt, was born at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, October 27, 1802. He grew up on his father's farm, and lived his entire life there, following the pursuit of farming. Whether he purchased his brothers' interest in the farm or received it under their wills at their deaths has not been determined. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church for about 50 years and served many years as an elder.¹ He was still living on April 30, 1878.²

He married first, Phoebe Hadden (b. 1800-1810; d. 1840), by whom he had seven children.¹

 "Dear Sir: I received yours of the 22nd inst. and take this time to reply. I am sure from your letter that we are of the same family. My father's name was Alexander and he is brother to the D. Benjamin you speak of. Their father was Hugh and he settled near Uniontown, Fayette County, Pa., about 1800. My father Alexander was born there, 1801. I was born there 1825 and recollect of seeing Benjamin there sometime about 1835. H died soon after at Huntsville, Ala. I also recollect hearing my father talking of his uncle living in the eastern part of the state. [This undoubtedly refers to Joseph Deyarmon of Dauphin County, Penna.] My father is still living near Uniontown, Pa., on the same farm he was born on; he is now in his 78th year. I have been living in the state of Wisconsin for about 25 years, have been in Florida about 3 years. Without this letter, now 75 years old, it would have been impossible to reconstruct this family. He died, July 16, 1894, Orange City, Florida, and is buried there.

1. Letter written by T. E. DeYarmon to C. S. Deyarmon, Loudenville, Ohio, dated July 11, 1887, carried the following printed heading: "Established 1879—Office of T. E. DE YARMON—12 & 14 N. Seventh St., Richmond, Indiana" and reads as follows: "Dear Sir: Your favor at hand. Replying would say that my father was born near Philadelphia year 1800 and when quite young removed to Ohio, Jefferson County. My grandfather had nine children by his first marriage, four sons, Abraham, Thomas, David and Alexander. The sons with the exception of Abraham left home and went south and west. After moving several times Father settled here, Alexander at Dayton, Ohio, and David in or near Bellaire, O. There are several families of Deyarmon's, a family at Greensburgh, Ind., one near Cincinnati, O. and Orange City, Florida. As my Grandfather was married more than once, I have often thought they might possibly be related. I failed to state that I am a son of Thomas Deyarmon, aged 35. Alex DeYarmon of Dayton, O. has four sons; one of them, Thomas, is in business with Callahan & Co., manufacturers of oil mill machinery. Should you be in this part of the country at any time, call on me, it may be that we can find the "strawberry" mark. Yours truly, T. E. DeYarmon." The envelope which carried this letter bore the following inscription: "If not called for in 5 days, return to T. E. DeYarmon, General Book & Job Printer, Richmond, Indiana".

Mifflin County, Pennsylvania
some descendants

The age and the given names which appear among the known descendants of this emigrant from northern Ireland indicate that he may have been a son of John Diermond of County Donegal, and therefore, a brother of John DeArment [Line F] of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania.

No positive record of him has been identified beyond 1790, but since he was well advanced in years by 1800, it is possible that he lived out his life in Mifflin County, Pennsylvania. There are strong indications that his sons moved into the western part of the state, and from there into newer parts of the country. Only one son, George, Jr., has been identified with any degree of certainty.

Undoubtedly, there are many descendants of this Pennsylvania pioneer, but they cannot be identified without the individual family records of each descendant.

AG I GEORGE DERMON OF MIFFLIN COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

George Dermon, born, apparently, in Donegal County, Ireland, may have been a son of John Diermond of County Donegal. He was first listed as George Diermont, as one of the Battoe men, hired in service of the Province of Pennsylvania, June 21, 1757, all of whom were from the neighborhood of Harris' Ferry.¹ He is next listed in Armagh township, Cumberland County, in 1779, for tax purposes, with taxables consisting of no acres, 1 horse, 1 cattle,² and again in 1780 with one horse.³ He appears again in 1781⁴ and 1782⁵ with 1 horse and 1 cattle. He served in the Revolutionary War between the years 1778-1783, as a private from Cumberland County, and received pay for his services.⁶

In 1789, Mifflin County was formed from Cumberland County and included Armagh township, and we find George listed in the 1790 census for Mifflin County with 1 male over 16; 2 males under 16; 2 women. In 1800, the Mifflin County census lists George Daughman.⁸ If this is our subject, it can be interpreted as including him, his wife, some of his children, their wives and children.⁷

AG II GEORGE DERMON, JR. (c1760-?), Washington County, Penna.

George Dermon, Jr., son of George Dermon of Mifflin County, Pennsylvania, was born probably in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, about 1760, and migrated westward as a young man. He settled in Washington County, where he is found in the 1790 census with 2 males and 3 females in family.¹ The absence of any further record of him in Pennsylvania indicates that he may have migrated south into Virginia or west into Ohio.

John Dearmon, son of George Dermon, Jr., was born in Pennsylvania, in 1787. He was living in Virginia as early as 1806 but whether he was taken there by his parents, or went there as a young man, is not known. In 1820, he was in Kentucky when his daughter, Mary, was born. Sometime before 1830, he removed to Monroe County, Indiana, apparently taking his entire family with him.¹ He was listed in the 1850 census for Monroe County,² and apparently lived out his life there.

Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania

family

It is very doubtful if this early Pennsylvania settler is a descendant of the d'Armand family of France. It is more likely that he sprang from the DEARMAN family of England. There are many descendants of that family now living in Alabama and Mississippi whose name is pronounced "deer - mun".

Since this subject was for many years accredited as the father of Joseph Deyarmon [Line J-1], the author feels his record should be shown herein to prevent the later assumption that his omission from this account had been an oversight.

AG I JOSEPH DEARMAN (?-1831), Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania

Joseph Dearman, a prosperous farmer living in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania, was first listed in 1774 for provincial tax,¹ and in 1779 was shown as tax collector for Lower Dublin township; and also for taxes for the year 1780 with taxables valued at $1500, tax being lbs 31.17.6.² He was again listed in 1782 and 1783.³ The federal census for 1790, Philadelphia County, listed him with two women only in family, apparently representing his wife and daughter.

He served in the Revolutionary War, and later in the Philadelphia County militia, with the rank of captain.⁴

He died in Philadelphia County in 1831, his will being dated January 9, 1827, and probated in 1831. The will mentioned his daughter and two granddaughters.⁵

The name of his wife is unknown.

Rockcastle County, Kentucky
known descendants

It has been impossible to identify the immigrant or first American ancestor of this family. So many of the second American generation moved out of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, and left no trace of their movements that, as a result, there are numerous descendants whose complete American ancestry has not been established, this being a notable example.

It is hoped that later research may reveal records which will link this distinguished family to its earlier members.

KG I DeARMAN FAMILY OF ROCKCASTLE COUNTY, KENTUCKY

The identity of the first member of this family to settle in Kentucky is not established, but there is a record of John Armond who obtained military warrant number 1863 for 100 acres of land in Kentucky, dated November 6, 1784, for services as a soldier of the Virginia line for three years.¹ Since the location of this grant was not given, it is impossible to determine if this man is the father of the younger persons found in Rockcastle County in 1810 or later years. Since the courthouse of Rockcastle County was destroyed by fire in the nineteenth century, there are no early land title records for the county.

Kentucky was a part of Virginia when this land warrant was issued and many of the settlers were soldiers of the Revolutionary War being rewarded for service to their mother state with grants of land in this virgin section of the state. Assuming that this family is descended from earlier Virginia members of the family, we must face the fact that the Virginia records of our family are incomplete, and it has been impossible to establish any order or relationship among the few records which have been collected.

No further record of this man has been found.

KG III JOHN DeARMAN (1798-1869), Benton County, Alabama

John DeArman, son of Jonathon Dearman, was born in Rockcastle County, Kentucky, December 15, 1798. At the age of twenty he married, and after 1820 moved to Clark County, Kentucky,¹ where he remained until 1822. In 1822, he removed to McMinn County, Tennessee, and settled land which was being cleared of the Indians. About 1830, he must have moved on to Alabama since he was not listed in the 1830 census in Tennessee and his son, Jasper, was born in Alabama in 1829, but apparently returned to Tennessee for awhile since his daughter, Delila was born in McMinn County in 1832. On December 31, 1832, he purchased the Choccolocco Valley in Benton County, Alabama, from Indian Chief Oconee and settled there, moving the Indians west.² He devoted the remainder of his life there to farming³ and died, August 18, 1869. Benton County is now Calhoun County.⁴

He married in 1818, Stacy Taylor (b. 1797, Clark County, Ky.; d. Sept. 14, 1869, Benton County, Ala.), daughter of Col. Thomas Taylor of Clark County, Ky.

1. The author cannot vouch for the authenticity of this record. It is from an old memorandum in his papers, and efforts to determine its source were fruitless. The 1810, 1820, and 1830 census records for Allegheny County, Penna., and the 1850 and 1860 census records for Muskingum and Tuscarawas Counties, Ohio, have been thoroughly examined, but no records of this family have been found. There may be a connection between them and similar names found in Washington and Westmoreland Counties (q.v.), Penna.

2. Mrs. James W. Dansey, Chicago, Ill., reports a legend she found in this county of William Dearmond, George Dearmond m. Sadie —, Richard Dearmond m. Clara —, Robert Dearmond m. Mary —. Abigail Adsit was reputedly the wife of one of these, and some of the family are now living in New York City. (Feb. 2, 1938.)

ROBERT BARNHILL OF COLCHESTER COUNTY, NOVA SCOTIA

Robert Barnhill¹ emigrated from Donegal in the north of Ireland, to Halifax, Nova Scotia, with his wife, one son, and three daughters with their husbands and families, and a large number of other persons, in all about 300. The emigration was under the direction of Colonel Alexander McNutt, the British agent. They came in the ship Hopewell. She arrived at Halifax Harbor on October 9, 1761, and passengers were landed at McNabs Island. They remained in Halifax for the winter, and in the Spring of 1762, some went to Windsor, Horton and Londonderry; some to Ouslow and Truro.

Mr. Barnhill and a number of his family settled in Chiganois, and were grantees of the township of Londonderry. His wife is said to be the first person that was buried on the Burying Island in Chiganois Marsh. The place is not known now [1873].

AG I JAMES FLENNIKEN of Mecklenburg County, North Carolina
and descendants

James Flenniken and his wife, Jane Gillespie, were born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and came to America about 1735. There are indications that they may have come in a band of emigrants from Scotland and Northern Ireland, in company with the noted evangelist and minister, Richard Sankey (q.v.). There is a legend in the Flenniken family that three brothers came to America together, Samuel, John and James. It is entirely possible that one or more of James' brothers accompanied him to America since there are numerous records of the name in Pennsylvania after he moved to North Carolina which cannot be accounted for through his children.^o

James and his wife settled in Pennsylvania, where they remained until after Braddock's defeat at Fort Duquesnes, when the Indians began such widespread and brutal assaults on the settlers of the Susquehanna Valley that they were forced from their homes. They arrived in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, about 1760, being accompanied by Thomas and John Dermond who had married into the family. They settled on McAlpins Creek in what is today Sharon township, and there are records of grants issued to James in 1765.¹ James Flenniken is also recorded as a settler on April 25, 1765, when he and others participated in a discussion of preemption and purchase rights governing the Selwyn lands.²

There is no known record of the death of James, but his wife, Jane Gillespie, dated her will,³ May 20, 1779, and gave her occupation as midwife. Apparently, James had already died.

Among Esther's descendants, the name was repeated again and again.

AG II JOHN FLENNIKEN (1744-1821), Mecklenburg County, N. C.

John Flenniken, son of James Flenniken and Jane Gillespie, was born March 7, 1744, in Pennsylvania, prior to his parents' removal to North Carolina. His family settled on McAlpins Creek in what is now Sharon township, and John received a good education for his day. In May 1775, Colonel Thomas Polk, commander of the county, issued orders to his captains to have each of their companies send two delegates to a convention to be held at Charlotte to consider the condition of the country. John, and Neill Morrison were sent as delegates from Captain James Jack's company. Thus, he became a participator and signer of the first formal notice to Great Britain that her colonies would attempt to become free and independent of her tyrannies. This declaration which became famous as the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, was carried by Captain James Jack to the Continental Congress then sitting in Philadelphia. Congress was not prepared for so bold a step and the declarations were not entered of record.¹

Later, when Francis Marion was commissioned to raise a force of loyal men in that district, John served under him as a private soldier. He served as a magistrate and member of the County Court for many years after the Revolution,⁷ and for several terms was on the state court bench. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, now known as Old Providence, and was one of the most advanced farmers of his day. He was especially fond of fine horses and had many blooded animals. He was killed by being thrown from one of his young horses, on Sunday morning on his way to church, and the rock on which he fell when thrown near Providence Church is still pointed out today.¹ One authority gives the time of his death as 1810,⁷ and the other as August 1821-1822.¹

AG II SAMUEL FLENNIKEN (1746-1811), Knox County, Tennessee

Samuel Flenniken, son of James Flenniken and Jane Gillespie, was born, July 19, 1746, in Pennsylvania. He moved with his parents to Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, about 1760, where he grew to manhood, and married. He undoubtedly engaged in farming, and must have lived on a part of his father's lands since no grants there in his name have been found.

He became a member of the North Carolina militia and rose rapidly until he attained the rank of captain. He served under Major Davies and participated in the Battle of Hanging Rock, South Carolina, on August 6, 1780, during the Revolutionary War, when Colonel Sumter with 800 American militia engaged an equal number of loyalists under Major Carden. The Americans were first victorious but were later driven back with considerable losses after inflicting casualties of 269 among the loyalists. For this service, Samuel was recompensed by the State of North Carolina.⁴⁹

Between 1784 and 1787, his brother-in-law, John Dermond (q.v.), migrated to Greene County, one of the western counties of the state, and settled on a grant of land he secured from the governor of North Carolina, located at the confluence of the Tennessee and Little Rivers, in what soon became Knox County, Tennessee. In 1792, Samuel followed him to Knox County, Tennessee, and settled south of the Tennessee River, on the road to Maryville. He was then 46 years old, and all of his children but the two youngest had been born in North Carolina.

On April 21, 1798, Samuel purchased from John Conner of Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, for $500, 500 acres of land "lying in Knox County (late in the county of Greene) on the southside of Clinch River, including the mouth of Conners Mill Shoal Creek, lying along the river". This tract had been conveyed to John Conner by North Carolina grant number 624, dated August 23, 1788, being registered in Greene County, North Carolina, on September 21, 1788.⁸

In 1793, Samuel brought suit in the Knox County, Tennessee, Court, against John Sevier and Adam Meek, Executors for the Estate of Isaac Taylor, for non-performance of covenant. After having the suit passed to several succeeding Courts, Samuel won the action at Court held on January 27, 1795, and was awarded a verdict of $100.⁵⁰ He was an active participant in the affairs of the county, and in 1795 served as Grand Jury foreman; in 1796, as a Superior Court juror, and as justice of the peace; in 1797, he was appointed tax assessor, and in 1803 became election judge.

He was listed in the 1806 Tax List for Knox County, Tennessee, with 875 acres, 1 white poll and 1 slave.⁵¹ He was shown in the 1807 List as Samuel Flenniken, Sr., with 875 acres and one poll. He was shown in the 1808 List as Samuel Flenniken, Sr. with 1029 acres of land, 1 poll, 1 slave. In the 1809 List he was listed as Samuel Flannagan with 923 acres, 1 poll and 1 slave. The 1810 List records Samuel Flanikin with 423 acres, 1 poll, 1 slave, and lists him again with 500 acres of land. The 1811 List shows him as Samuel Flenniken, Sr., with the same holdings, and in the 1812 List, he was shown as Samuel Flannikin with the same holdings. Since he died in 1811, the 1811 and 1812 Tax Lists must have been intended to cover his estate.

On June 9, 1809, Samuel secured from the State of Tennessee, Land Grant No. 601, for 423 acres of land, located in Knox County and south of the Tennessee River, contiguous to holdings of William McClellan and I. W. Flannagin [sic]. This land, apparently, lay along the Old Maryville road, beyond present day Vestal, a suburb of Knoxville.⁵²

Samuel lived 18 years after reaching Tennessee, and died at the age of 64 in January, 1811. His will dated December 22, 1810, and probated January 12, 1811, left his estate to his children and grandchildren.⁹

He married, in North Carolina, Mary Wallace, reputedly a daughter of James Wallace. She was born 1750-1760,¹⁴ and died in Knox County, Tennessee, in 1836.¹⁰

AG III JOHN FLENNIKEN, JR. (1784-1852), Mecklenburg County, N. C.

John Flenniken, Jr.,¹ son of John Flenniken and Hannah McClelland, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in 1784. He was a farmer, and owned and operated a grist mill. He led a quiet life in Mecklenburg County; died in 1852 at the age of 68, and was buried in the Presbyterian graveyard at Sharon.

He married Mary Reid, daughter of Captain David Reid, who was a member of General Sumter's staff.

AG III JAMES WALLACE FLENNIKEN (1776-1840), Knox County, Tenn.

James Wallace Flenniken, son of Samuel Flenniken and Mary Wallace, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in 1776.²⁰ He came to Knox County, Tennessee, with his parents in 1792, at the age of 16. He is shown in the 1806 and 1807 tax lists for Knox County, Tennessee, Captain Tipton's Company, with 150 acres of land and one white poll. He is again shown in the 1808 list with 190 acres and one poll, but is not found in the 1809 list. He again appears in the 1810 list as Wallace Flanikin with 196 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres and 1 poll; was not shown in the 1811 list, but found in the 1812 list as James W. Flenniken with 196 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres of land and 1 poll.²³

As a young man, he was quite active in public affairs, being commissioned a captain in the Tennessee State Militia on September 29, 1800.²¹ From 1803 to 1816, he served intermittently as juror, grand juror, and circuit court juror.²² He built a home four miles south of Knoxville, on the old Maryville dirt road, which is still in use today by his descendants as part of a more modern structure. His principal occupation was farming, although he served in the War of 1812 and evidently achieved the rank of major.²⁴ On July 18, 1820, he was appointed Road Commissioner for a road from Coker to Knoxville, and in July 1820, was appointed overseer of road.²³ He died, August 19, 1840, at the age of 64, a highly respected citizen.²⁰

He married, presumably in Knox County although the record is lost, Mary S. — (b. July 10, 1875, Va.; d. Sept. 21, 1859, Knox County, Tenn.)²⁵ From lack of any evidence to the contrary, we must assume there was only one child born of this union.

AG III JOHN FLENNIKEN, SR. (1792-1871), Knox County, Tennessee

John Flenniken, Sr., youngest son of Samuel Flenniken and Mary Wallace, was born August 3, 1792, soon after his parents reached Knox County, Tennessee. His father died when he was 18, and he was bequeathed one-half of his father's home place, to become his at maturity. He lived his entire life on the home place, and devoted himself to farming. He died, June 15, 1871, and was buried in the Flenniken cemetery, located on the original farm. He was a member of the Second Presbyterian Church, Knoxville.

He married first, July 1, 1813,²⁸ Sarah (Sally) Cottrell (b. July 3, 1796; d. Sept. 16, 1839; g. Flenniken c.).

He married second, January 14, 1840, Isabella Berry²⁶ (b. Jan. 2, 1810; d. Apr. 13, 1891; g. Flenniken c.).

AG III JEAN FLENNIKEN OF KNOX COUNTY, TENNESSEE

Jean Flenniken, granddaughter of James Flenniken and Jane Gillespie, was born, apparently in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, but no record has been found that would identify her parents. It is possible that she came to Knox County, Tennessee, with her uncle, Samuel Flenniken (q.v.). Although her husband was a witness to the signing of Samuel Flenniken's will, Jean was not mentioned in the will. John Dearmond II (q.v.), however, made a bequest in his will to "Samuel Cunningham's children, Malinda, John and William".⁴⁶ Neither Jean nor her husband has been located in the 1850 census for Knox County, Tennessee, indicating that they may have moved elsewhere before that date.

She married, Jan. 15, 1804 [or 1806], Samuel H. Cunningham, bondsmen being John Dearmond and Edward Mason. Testator was W. Park.²⁸

AG IV REV. WARREN FLENNIKEN (1805-1851), Chester County, S. C.

Reverend Warren Flenniken, son of John Flenniken, Jr., and Mary Reid, was born, January 8, 1805, in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina. He received his primary education under Lawson Caldwell, who taught a school on McAlpins Creek, near Providence Presbyterian Church. From there, he entered an academy headed by Reverend Eleazer Harris, at York, South Carolina. From there, he went to Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, entering the junior class of 1827. He graduated in 1829, and the same year placed himself under the controls of the First Presbytery of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church of the South, and began the study of theology. He pursued his studies under the direction of Reverends Isaac Grier, D.D., James Lowry, and Samuel Pressly.

He was licensed to preach in November 1831, and for about one year filled vacancies of the synod and made a missionary tour into Florida. In November 1832, he was ordained, and installed as pastor of Hopewell and Union congregations in Chester County, South Carolina. In 1837, he demitted the Union branch of his charge and devoted his services to the Hopewell congregation. In 1839, he and twelve fellow ministers of the Associate Reformed Church founded Clark and Erskine College, now Erskine College, Due West, South Carolina. His associates were Isaac Grier, James Renwick, Thomas Ketchin, Ebenezer Harris, Joseph Lowry, James Lowry, Ebenezer Pressly, James Pressly, Robert Galloway, Henry Bryson, John Witherspoon, and James Boyce. In 1848, he resigned his charge because of poor health.

Reverend Flenniken was a man of compelling personality and great conversational powers, with a rare gift for public speaking, and possessed of a quick and active mind. His sermons were entertaining and descriptive but delivered in a calm manner fraught with earnestness. He was one of the first prohibitionists in South Carolina, and advocated complete abstinence to his hearers as the only relief for excesses and drunkenness. He died, July 31, 1851, and is buried in the Hopewell churchyard.

He married in 1831, Jane Pressley, daughter of Dr. Samuel Pressly, of Abbeville, South Carolina.

This company as a part of Manigault's Battalion did service for one year on the coast near Charleston. David then volunteered for the war, and joined the South Carolina cavalry. He was assigned as a courier to Gen. W. A. Walker, and served in this capacity throughout the war, participating in nearly all the large battles. He was afterwards a merchant at Winnsboro, S. C., then removed to Columbia. He was an elder of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbia, for more than 20 years. AG V ELIJAH HOWELL FLENNIKEN (1832-1892), Knoxville, Tennessee Elijah Howell Flenniken, son of Samuel James Flenniken and Elizabeth Howell, was born in Knox County, Tennessee, December 23, 1832. He grew to manhood on his father's farm, and at the age of 20, learned the brickmason's trade which he followed until the advent of the Civil War. During the war which caused a cessation of all building activities, he devoted himself exclusively to his farm. In 1865, he again resumed his brickmason trade and also became a brick manufacturer. In 1881, he retired, and moved to Knoxville, his home being on West Clinch Avenue, next door to that of J. W. Yoe. Here he resided the rest of his life, devoting his attention to his farm and town property. He was at one time president of the Kingston Pike Company, and was a long time stockholder and director of the same company. He was a Methodist and a Mason.²⁴ He died, November 6, 1892, at Knoxville,²⁵ and is buried in Old Gray cemetery.

He married, September 19, 1861, Mary Adaline French²⁶ (b. May 3, 1841, Knox County, Tenn.; d. Oct. 24, 1896; g. Old Gray c.), daughter of Michael French and Dorothy Koontz.

AG V WILLIAM MONTGOMERY FLENNIKEN (1850-1912), Knox County, Tenn.

William Montgomery Flenniken, son of William Peery Flenniken and Alcy I. Hinton, was born in Knox County, Tennessee, December 1, 1850. He grew to manhood on his father's farm, being reared by two successive stepmothers. He began farming on land adjoining his father's home. He built first a home for himself and each year thereafter, after the crops were in, built another house until he owned thirteen houses. He had no confidence in banks and put his earnings into real estate. He also owned four houses in Knoxville. He died, January 22, 1912.

He married, March 29, 1882, Margaret Catherine Flenniken (b. Oct. 20, 1862; d. Dec. 25, 1945), daughter of John Flenniken, Jr. (q.v.) and Mary C. M. Brown. She was his first cousin.

KG I ELI GRIFFITTS (1781-1847), Cherokee County, Alabama and descendants³

Eli Griffitts was born, July 21, 1781, but the place of his birth is not known. As a young man, he lived in Roane County, Tennessee, where his family settled, probably after 1800. His father may have been Thomas Griffiths (q.v.) since he served as a bondsman to two Roane County marriages, one of which may have been that of his son.² The 1790 censuses for North Carolina and Pennsylvania are replete with listings of the Griffith family, but only twice does the name Griffitts appear, once in Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania, for Dr. Samuel Griffitts (q.v.) and once in Montgomery County, North Carolina, for Isham Griffitts.⁴

Eli lived in Roane County, Tennessee, for an indeterminate period, making his home in after years in Cherokee County, Alabama, where he died, March 12, 1847, his grave being in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

He married, place and date not preserved, Margaret Louise Wells (b. Mar. 22, 1783; d. Dec. 15, 1856; g. Pleasant Hill, Cherokee County, Ala.).

KG II LORENZO DOW GRIFFITTS (1809-1882), Cherokee County, Ala.

Lorenzo Dow Griffitts, son of Eli Griffitts and Margaret Louise Wells, was born in Roane County, Tennessee, August 28, 1809. He became a Presbyterian minister and, after his marriage, made his home at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama. He died, July 18, 1882, and is buried in Forest Hill cemetery.

He married, about 1834, Angeline DeArmond (q.v.), whom he met while she was making an extended visit in the home of her uncle, James Dearmond (q.v.) of Roane County, Tennessee. Since legend says Lorenzo Dow's family opposed the marriage on religious grounds, evidently the marriage was an elopement. There is no record of the marriage in Roane County, whose marriage records have been carefully preserved. Angeline died at the age of 34 while the children were small, but her husband never remarried, remaining at home with his children.

AG I ISAAC HARRISON (1744-1806), Dauphin County, Penna.

Isaac Harrison was born in England in 1744, the eldest son. He came to America as a young man and settled in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania. There are indications that he owned and operated a fulling mill. He died at the age of 62, January 31, 1806, and is buried at West Hanover, Pennsylvania, along with eight other members of the Harrison family.

He married, probably about 1765, Sarah Stevens (b. 1748, England; d. May 14, 1806, Dauphin County, Penna.; g. West Hanover chyd). Tradition says that Isaac and Sarah fell in love while both were living in England but his father forbade the marriage because Sarah was below his station in rank. Sarah came to America with her parents sometime prior to the Revolution. One version of the tradition says that Isaac followed her to America and married her. Another version says they came to America on the same ship and were married en voyage. For this mesalliance, Isaac was disinherited.

AG III STEPHEN HARRISON, JR. (1823-1899), Granville, Illinois

Stephen Harrison, Jr., son of Stephen Harrison and Eleanor DeArmond, was born, March 26, 1823, at West Hanover, Pennsylvania, 8 months after the death of his young father. His mother, without means to support herself and five small children, was forced to break up her home and scatter her children. She made her home with her uncle, Charles Stewart, Mercersburg, Ohio, and took with her, Eleanor Jane and the infant, Stephen, Jr. After his marriage, Stephen, Jr., lived in Illinois, first at Sprinkleburg and later at Granville. He died, July 6, 1899, Granville, Illinois.

AG I WILLIAM JENKINS (1762-1833), Butler County, Ohio

William Jenkins was born in Wales, March 1, 1762. At about the age of 14, he visited an uncle in Ireland and fell in love with his cousin, Susannah Walker (b. 1764). William's uncle was opposed to the marriage because of their tender ages, Susannah being only 13 years old. They eloped to America the following year, 1777, and married at the ages of 15 (William) and 14 (Susannah) and settled in Isle of Wight County, Virginia. William joined the Virginia militia when only 15 years old and served throughout the Revolutionary War, his exploits reading like those of a mature man. They remained in Isle of Wight County for several years,¹ afterwards settling in Pittsylvania County, where they remained until 1807, when they moved by oxteam to Ohio. William and his family settled in Cincinnati and bought 80 acres of land on the present site of Main Street, which he later sold. He then moved into Butler County, and settled on Dry Fork, 20 miles from Cincinnati. He died at Okeana at the age of 71, on May 21, 1833.

After his death, Susannah's family sent an attorney to see her in an attempt to re-establish family relations but she refused all overtures. She died at the age of 88, July 29, 1852.

PETER KEENER OF KNOX COUNTY, TENNESSEE¹

AG I PETER KEENER (?-1757), Lancaster County, Pennsylvania

Legend has it that Peter Keener came to America from Holland and lived on Little Chickadee River,² and that the family was originally from Germany, and of strong Protestant faith. No record has been found of Peter's arrival in America but we do find a record of letters of administration for his estate being issued, March 1, 1757, to Catherine Keener, presumably his widow, in Hanover township, Lancaster County, Province of Pennsylvania.³ We must assume, therefore, that Peter died early in 1757.

According also to family legend, his wife is supposed to have been Catherine Ulrich and descended from a distinguished German family of the same name. The persistent appearance of the name "Ulrich" among Peter's descendants gives credence and support to this legend.

Nothing of certainty is known of his children except one son, Ulrich, although he undoubtedly had several children. For names of possible other children or brothers or descendants in Pennsylvania, see list of unidentified persons shown at the end of this record.

Issue: KEENER incomplete

AG II Ulrich

AG II ULRICH KEENER (c1710-a1796), Shenandoah County, Virginia

Ulrich Keener, son of Peter and Catherine Keener, was born about 1710 in Holland, and came to America on the ship JAMES GOODWILL from Rotterdam, and landed at Philadelphia, September 27, 1727, in company with Adam and Hans Keiner (sic) who may have been his brothers.⁴ One wonders if his father had preceded him or more likely followed him later. It is possible that Ulrich came to this country as a lad in his 'teens to escape military service, as was the case with so many European emigrants.

He settled in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and on July 28, 1741, secured warranty for 50 acres of land.⁵ Sometime later, he removed with his family to Shenandoah County, Virginia, where we find him recorded as bondsman for the marriage of Jacob Fan and Cathrine Peck, August 8, 1788,⁶ and in 1783 with 8 in family, and again in 1784 with 9 in family.⁶ Lida Jane Hunt found Ulrich in Shenandoah County, Virginia, in 1796, with 8 whites in family. If this record is of our subject and not his son, it is reasonable to suppose that he died in Shenandoah County soon afterward.

His wife's name is not known.

He reared a large family since he was recorded there in 1783 with 5 in family, and in 1785 with 7 in family.⁶ Lida Jane Hunt found him there in 1796 with 5 whites in family. Whether he remained in Shenandoah County or moved elsewhere is not known to this writer since census records for that county after 1790 have not been examined.

The name of his wife is not known.

He accompanied his father when the family moved to Shenandoah County, Virginia, sometime prior to 1783. There is no way to tell whether the Shenandoah County records refer to him or his father.

He moved into Tennessee about 1800 or earlier, and settled in Washington County.

He appears in the 1830 census for Washington County, this being the earliest Tennessee census now extant.³⁰ Being then past 80 years of age, it is presumed he died soon afterward.

Sometime prior to 1783, his father removed to Shenandoah County, Virginia, and it is presumed that Peter accompanied him. Whether this move occurred before or after Peter reached manhood cannot be determined. After 1790, he settled in Tennessee, in the Seven Islands community of Knox County.¹² He was a farmer, and spent the remainder of his life in the peaceful area overlooking the French Broad River. He died, September 17, 1837, and is buried in Seven Islands cemetery.

He married about 1780, Susannah Low (b. 1755; d. Sept. 20, 1840; g. Seven Islands cemetery), daughter of Aquilla Low.⁷ He must have met and courted her either in Pennsylvania or Shenandoah County, Va.

Joseph Keener, son of Ulrich Keener, Jr., was born 1780-1790, in Shenandoah County, Virginia, and migrated with his father to Washington County, Tennessee, about 1800. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, we assume he was a farmer. He is found in the 1830 census³¹ with a large family. He does not appear in the 1840 census for Washington County and only his son, Elkanah, seems to have remained there. Joseph's later domicile has not been found.

AG IV ULRICH KEENER (c1781-?), Martel, Tennessee

Ulrich Keener, son of Peter Keener and Susannah Low, was born about 1781, probably in Shenandoah County, Virginia. Whether he accompanied his father to Knox County, Tennessee, or reached maturity before that move and went instead to Indiana as a young man, cannot be determined. There is a legend among the descendants of the family at Martel, Tennessee, that Ulrich was originally from Pennsylvania, and came to Tennessee from near Indianapolis, Indiana, and secured a grant for land located about 5 miles from Martel (then in Roane County). How much of this legend is fact and how much fiction this writer is unable to determine from the available records. Ulrich had an uncle named Ulrich and it is entirely possible that the records of the two men are confused. Further research is needed to clear this subject's history.

AG IV ABRAHAM KEENER (1796-1850), Knox County, Tennessee

Abraham Keener, son of Peter Keener and Susannah Low, was born in the Seven Islands community of Knox County, Tennessee, September 8, 1796. He devoted his life to farming, and owned a farm valued at $4500., in 1850.²¹ He also operated a grist mill and a sawmill. He died, August 15, 1850, and is buried in Seven Islands cemetery.

He married Nancy Pitner (b. Apr. 9, 1800, Va.; d. Aug. 12, 1851; g. Seven Islands c.). She may have been related to the Pitner family of Sevier County, Tennessee. Andrew H. Pitner (b. 1824, Tenn.) was recorded in the 1850 census as living with Abraham's family, and he was perhaps a younger brother or nephew of Nancy.

AG VI JOSEPH ABRAHAM KEENER (1856-1914), Trundles Cross Roads, Tenn.

Joseph Abraham Keener, son of Adam Harvey Keener and Mary Narcissus McCroskey, was born at Trundles Cross Roads, Tennessee, August 28, 1856. He became a farmer, first on his father-in-law's farm, and later at Boyds Creek, Tennessee. He also operated a grist mill and sawmill. He was a constant reader and thoroughly informed on current events; an excellent student and mathematician. A man of quick temper which he kept under rigid control, he was considered a tolerant and patient person. He was an understanding husband and father, and was a member of Chilhowie Baptist Church. He lived out his life in the valley where he was born, and died there, September 8, 1914.

He married, May 29, 1884, at the home of the bride's parents, Hannah Christine Clark of Cusicks (b. July 20, 1868; d. May 29, 1945), daughter of W. Boyd Clark (b. Aug. 4, 1828; d. Dec. 24, 1900) and Christine Davis (d. Nov. 30, 1869). The officiating minister was Rev. Caleb Rule.⁸ Hannah was a devout Christian, and spent much of her available time ministering to the sick in her community, making her rounds in a rig which became a familiar sight to her friends and neighbors.

AG VIII FRANK ELLIS KEENER, JR. (1920-), Knoxville, Tennessee

Frank Ellis Keener, Jr., son of Frank Ellis Keener, Sr., and Lucile Doyle, was born at Knoxville, Tennessee, May 8, 1920. His parents moved to Atlanta, Georgia, in 1930, and he graduated from Decatur (Ga.) High School and North Georgia College, Dahlonega.

His first attempt to enlist in the U. S. Army Air Corps during World War II was a failure due to a knee injury received in high school. He took a position with the Fulton National Bank, Atlanta, and later again applied for enlistment in the Air Corps and was accepted, October, 1941, as a flying cadet. He took his basic training at Maxwell Field for one month, then went to Robbins Field, Jackson, Mississippi. From there, he was sent to Greenville Air Force Base, Mississippi, then to Turner Field, Albany, Georgia, where he graduated from flying school as a second lieutenant. He remained there for a year as instructor in the Advanced Flying School, and was promoted to first lieutenant. Afterwards transferred to Smyrna Air Force Base, Tennessee, where he instructed in B-24 flying. After several successive moves, he was stationed at Clovis Air Force Base, New Mexico, and instructed in B-29 flying, and received his captaincy. From there, he was sent to Wendover Air Force Base, Utah, as test pilot with Atom Bomb Group where he remained for 9 months. He engaged in high altitude test flying in the development of aerial atom bomb technic. He was pilot and crew captain of the plane which loaded and carried the first atom bomb to the Pacific advance base from which it was later flown and dropped by another crew on Hiroshima, Japan. Thus, it may be said that he was the first person ever to fly an atomic bomb on a combat mission, and out of the United States, and over the ocean. He received the Air Medal for 43 test missions with atom bombs. He was released from active duty, December 15, 1945.

He took a position as operations clerk, Eastern Air Lines, Nashville, as his wife had had enough of hazard anxiety due to his wartime flying. After a year there, he joined the firm of Bostitch, Incorporated, manufacturers of stapling and stitching machines, as sales representative for East Tennessee.

He was recalled to active duty, March 1951, because of the Korean War, by the U. S. Air Force, and sent to Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, as instructor in B-29 flying. He was on duty for 17 months, and again released to inactive status, August 29, 1952. He rejected promotion to major because it entailed a tour of duty for 5 years, which he did not want.

He returned to his position with Bostitch, Incorporated, and now (1952) is living in Westwood, Knoxville, Tennessee.

He married, July 25, 1943, Nashville, Tennessee, Grace Vincent Gore (b. May 14, 1921), daughter of George Paschal Gore and Ruth Hadden.

AG VIII ROBERT ALEXANDER KEENER (1924-), Knoxville, Tennessee

Robert Alexander Keener, son of Frank Ellis Keener, Sr. and Lucile Doyle, was born at Knoxville, Tennessee, November 24, 1924. His parents moved to Atlanta, Georgia, in 1930, where he received his education. He graduated from Decatur (Ga.) High School and North Georgia College, Dahlonega.

He entered World War II in 1942, as an infantry private, and took his basic training at Camp Wheeler, Georgia. Afterwards, he took an Army Service Training Corps course at University of Pennsylvania, then returned to the infantry. He was shipped to England with the 95th Division, landing August 13, 1944. He landed in France, September 13, 1944, and was assigned to the Third Army. He entered the front lines, October 13, 1944, and on November 15, 1944, participated in the attack on Metz and into the Saar, ending at Wadgessen, Germany. His outfit held this sector during the Battle of the Bulge, and afterwards moved into a First Army sector and held a line on the Maas River, Holland. They were then attached to the Ninth Army, and drove to the Rhine River, where they stopped and cleaned up the Ruhr pocket, ending up in Dortmund. He was pulled out and sent to Bremen for occupation duty, from where he was returned to the United States on July 2, 1945. He was discharged, November 1945, as corporal, with 3 Battle Stars and a divisional presidential citation.

He afterwards associated himself with the Whitehead Electric Company, Atlanta; then, Kingsport Electric Company, Kingsport, Tennessee; and in 1952 purchased the Mid-south Supply Company, Knoxville.

He married, March 31, 1946, Conyers, Georgia, Dorothy Jane Carson (b. Jan. 9, 1927, Knoxville, Tenn.), daughter of John Ben Carson and Lucile McBath.

b. Mar. 15, 1753, Augusta County, Va.

AG II JOSEPH LUSK I (1753-1839), Bradley County, Tenn.

Joseph Lusk I, son of William and Elizabeth Lusk, was born in Augusta County, Virginia, March 15, 1753. At that time, Augusta County included a much larger territory than now and present information is that the old Lusk home was near the present line of Augusta and Rockbridge Counties, not far from the present postoffice of Vesuvius. Joseph left Virginia in early life, and settled at Sycamore Shoals, Watauga River, then a part of North Carolina.

He served throughout the Revolutionary War, being enlisted, June 2, 1776, at Sycamore Shoals. He served as orderly sergeant in Captain John Sevier's Company, Colonel William Christie's and Joseph Williams' Regiments, and was discharged, November 27, 1776. He enlisted a second time on March 2, 1777, in Washington County, Virginia, and served as a private in Captain James Shelby's Company, Colonel William Christie's regiment, and was discharged, April 13, 1777. He enlisted a third time on October 3, 1777, and served as a private in Captain Isaac Shelby's company, and was discharged, November 5, 1777. He enlisted a fourth time, June 4, 1778, served as a private in Captain John Snoddy's Company, and was discharged, July 8, 1778. He enlisted a fifth time, June 4, 1780, and served as a private in Captain Andrew Colville's Company, Colonel Arthur Campbell's regiment, and was discharged, July 2, 1780.² Although there appears to be no official record of it, family tradition is very conclusive that he took part in the campaign against Furguson, in October 1780, culminating in the Battle of King's Mountain. His grandson, Colonel Virgil S. Lusk, owned and hunted with the old Deckard rifle which Joseph carried and used in that battle.

After the close of the war, Joseph settled in Western North Carolina, near the present site of Asheville. He died at the home of his son, Joseph II, in Bradley County, Tennessee, August 15, 1839.

The name of his wife is unknown.

AG III JOSEPH LUSK II (1790-1873), Bradley County, Tenn.

Joseph Lusk II, son of Joseph Lusk I, was born in Buncombe County, North Carolina, May 27, 1790. He came into East Tennessee in early life, and enlisted during the War of 1812, at Pikeville, Bledsoe County, January 10, 1814, as a private in the company of Captain John Hawkins, Tennessee Militia, and was discharged, May 13, 1814. He later removed to Bradley County, Tennessee, and settled first at or near what is now known as Waterville. About 1835, he moved south and settled 1½ miles north of the Georgia state line, where he lived until his death. He died, February 3, 1873, and was buried on his farm, where his father was also buried.

He married, October 28, 1812, Pikeville, Bledsoe County, Tennessee, Rebekah Igou (b. Jan. 4, 1791; d. Nov. 1, 1858, Bradley County, Tenn.). The place of her birth has not been definitely established but it was probably in Sullivan County, Tennessee, or Washington County, Virginia. She is buried on the old Lusk farm in Bradley County, 12 miles south of Cleveland.

AG V JUDGE CHARLES WESLEY LUSK (1877-1945), Chattanooga, Tenn.

Judge Charles Wesley Lusk, son of Joseph Napoleon Bonaparte Lusk and Adaline Donohoo Davis, was born on his father's farm in Bradley County, Tennessee, July 15, 1877. He obtained his education in the public schools of Bradley County, and later taught in the Bradley County Schools for two terms. He moved to Chattanooga in 1900 and became a clerk with the Southern Railway until 1912. In 1910, while still employed by the railroad, he enrolled in the night school of the Chattanooga College of Law, and graduated in 1912, with the second highest record of his class. He left the Southern Railway and entered the law office of White B. Miller for a few months, then formed a partnership with Joe W. Thompson. In 1924, he was appointed United States Commissioner by Judge Xen Hicks. In August 1926, he was elected to the office of Criminal Judge for Hamilton County, and resigned as U. S. Commissioner and dissolved his law partnership.

He presided as criminal court judge for 16 years and retired, April 1, 1942. A distinguished and eminent jurist, his trials were conducted with fairness and justice to all participants. His broad knowledge of law and human rights and his unquestioned integrity earned for him the high respect of the legal profession and the trust of the people of Hamilton County.

A Republican, he was greatly in demand by his party for campaign speeches, and at one time was prominently mentioned for the office of federal district judge. He was an active member, Pilgrim Congregational Church, and made many religious addresses.³ A man of great sincerity and gentleness, his courtly manner and personal warmth created lasting friendships. He built an extensive library consisting of books and periodicals which he read and cross-indexed for subject matter. He became a great scholar, and developed an absorbing interest in history and current events.

He died quietly at his home, May 14, 1945,⁴ being the last Republican to hold elective office in Hamilton County, and undoubtedly the Republican Party's greatest contribution to the public life of Chattanooga.

MacCOLMAN FAMILY OF SCOTLAND

The MacColman family originated in Argyllshire in Western Scotland in the thirteenth century. The Buchanan Society of Glasgow says that according to tradition, Colman, the third son of Anselan who was the seventh Lord of Buchanan, went to Argyllshire in the West of Scotland, during the reign of King Alexander III (1241-1285). Colman's descendants became known as MacColman, and settled in the parishes of Muckairn and Benderlock. The connection of the MacColman family with the Buchanan Clan is, therefore, entirely traditional and not otherwise established, but its claim to that connection has been recognized for centuries and never challenged.

Toward the end of the eighteenth century, Alexander MacColman was minister of the Parishes of Lismore and Appin.

About 1666, Thomas MacColman, a Covenant preacher, came under the persecution of the Covenanters during the reign of Charles II of England, and fled in a fishing boat to County Antrim, Ireland, and settled in the parish of Cairnearth. He named his farm Closeburn after a parish in Western Scotland. Tradition says that he altered the spelling of his name to McCalmont for concealment. Several of his sons emigrated to America after 1720 and settled for the most part in Pennsylvania. This writer has an extensive collection of data on this family collected over a period of several years under the misapprehension that his maternal ancestors sprang from this line.

Sometime after 1750, David MacColman appeared in Anson County, North Carolina, during the period of a great migration of Scots into that state. The following pages are devoted to his known descendants.

In the 1880's, three sons of James MacCalman of Lochaline, near Oban, Scotland, emigrated to America. A sketch of this most recent addition to the American family is shown at the end of this record.

JOHN MacCOLMAN OF RICHMOND COUNTY, N. C.and descendants*AG I DAVID MacCOLMAN OF ANSON COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

David MacColman purchased land in Anson County from George Carter in 1774, the deed being proven in Anson County Court, Tuesday, July 12, 1774, by David Love. On the same date, a deed from Ralph Mason to John MacColman was proven by John Macalman.

No other record of David has been found but we may assume that he emigrated from Scotland to America sometime after 1750, and settled in North Carolina.

AG II JOHN MacCOLMAN (c1740-b1800), Richmond County, N. C.

John MacColman, son of David MacColman, was born about 1740, probably in Scotland. Our first record of him is found in 1770 in a petition by the inhabitants of Anson County, North Carolina, against Salisbury Court, presented to the Governor, Council and Assembly, on which his name appears as one of the petitioners. In 1774, he purchased land from Ralph Mason which was proven in Anson County Court, Tuesday, July 12, 1774. On July 13, 1774, John Macallam was ordered by Anson County Court as one of the "hands" to build a road from Little River to County Line near Williams old store. On January 11, 1775, a deed by Duncan Curry to Anens? Curry, was proven by John McAlman, in Anson County Court. In October 1779, he signed as John McCalman, a petition to divide the county. In 1779, Montgomery and Richmond Counties were formed from Anson County, and John found himself in Richmond County. He was summoned as juror, for the Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions, December 1784, and at the March 1785 Court, was fined for failure to serve; and again in 1786, was fined for failure to appear as juror at March court.²

In 1786, he was issued voucher No. 126 for 11 pounds, interest 3 pounds, 16 shillings, for Revolutionary War services.³

The 1790 census lists him with 3 males and 3 women, representing, apparently, himself, his wife, two sons and two daughters.⁴ In 1791, he appeared in Court at the proving of the will of Catherine Smith.⁵ The Taxable List of Taxable Property for Richmond County, 1790, lists him with 986 acres, situation 20, white souls one. The Sheriff's Tax Book for 1792, Richmond County, Inventory of John McFarland for District No. 1, shows him with 340 acres, no poll. The Sheriff's Tax Book for 1793, shows him again with 986 acres, Situation 20, White Souls one. The 1795 list shows only 340 acres. On February 22, 1796, he sold to Archibald Wilkinson, Jr., 640 acres of land "lying along the county line of Richmond and Bladen Counties, N. C., on east side of Shoe Heel Swamp, which had been patented by Maccalman, August 9, 1789. Witnesses: Anguith McGill and Anguith MacNeel. Proven April 1797, Sessions Court, by Aunguith McNeil. Ordered to be registered." See Appendix.

John disappears from all records in Richmond County after 1796, and does not appear in the 1800 census. Family legend says the two sons were orphaned and "bound out" as boys, which indicates that John died before 1800.

AG III JAMES SCOTLAND McCALMAN (c1780-c1866), Cherokee County, Ala.

James Scotland McCalman, son of John MacColman, was born in Richmond County, North Carolina, about 1780. Family tradition says James and his brother were orphaned as children and "bound out" [apprenticed] and received little education. Apparently, John was apprenticed to a millwright, as his grandson told this author he was a millwright by profession. When he left North Carolina is not known, but he must have seen service as an Indian scout and fighter and served with Colonel Landon Carter, since he named his eldest son after him. He was in Blount County, Tennessee, when he married, about 1809. Afterwards, he went to Ohio, presumably down the Tennessee River. Tradition says he lived in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, following his trade as a millwright and dam builder. His wife's father died in 1823, and James soon returned to Blount County, Tennessee. On April 8, 1825, he secured a Tennessee land grant for 100 acres of land located on the Holston [now Tennessee] River.⁶ On November 22, 1825, James and his wife, Betsy, deeded their interest in certain parcels of land belonging to the estate of his wife's father, to her brothers, William and John Scott, in exchange for a certain other interest in the estate.⁷ On December 26, 1826, James sold to William Henderson, 261 acres of land in Blount County.⁷

Later, James built a dam and mill on the Chattooga River at Trion, Georgia, which he later sold. He was living in St. Clair County, Alabama, when he sold to Robert Glass, December 21, 1833, 94 acres of land in Blount County, Tennessee.⁷ He afterwards lived in Cherokee County, Alabama, and in 1838, started the construction of a dam and mill at Gaylesville. He had only the foundations in when he fell and broke several ribs. His son, John, then only 18 years old, took charge, and completed both the dam and the mill. While living here, he reared a negro boy for his son, John, and at John's request, set the negro boy free. Before 1840, he was on the move again and went, according to legend, to Texas, where he died, in 1866 or 1867, at the age of 86 or 87. Many years research and a careful examination of 1850 census listings for all east Texas counties failed to find any record of James in Texas. Recent correspondence with descendants living in Arkansas, indicates that he may have settled in northwestern Louisiana, instead of Texas. He was an austere, taciturn person, of sterling integrity and rigid fairness in his dealings with others.

He married about 1809 in Blount County, Tennessee, Elizabeth (Betsy) Scott (b. circa 1790), daughter of James Scott (q.v.) and Jane Adams.

Malcolm McColman, son of John MacColman, was born in Richmond County, North Carolina, 1784-1790. According to tradition among his brother's descendants, the two boys were bound out to learn a trade but all records of the family disappeared from Richmond County after 1796, and our first record of Malcolm appears in the 1810 census for Cumberland County, showing him as already married and with three children under 10. He is not shown in the 1820 or 1830 census but appears in the 1840 census. The 1850 census shows three of his sons but not our subject, and we assume he must have died before 1850.⁹ His occupation is not known.

AG IV LONDON CARTER McCALMAN (1810-1884), Buchanan, Georgia

Landon Carter McCalman, son of James Scotland McCalman and Elizabeth Scott, was born in Blount County, Tennessee, June 24, 1810. He was named for General Landon Carter, early Tennessee patriot and Indian fighter. He was taken by his parents as a child to Ohio where his father lived until about 1825. Here, no doubt, he got a good educational foundation which gave him a thirst for the further education he sought later. His father returned to Blount County, Tennessee, after the death of Landon's maternal grandfather, James Scott. He grew to manhood there and united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at an early age. His father moved to Georgia and built a mill at Trion, Georgia. After he sold the mill and moved to St. Clair County, Alabama, Landon settled in Carroll County, Georgia, in 1831, and finding no Presbyterian church nearby, made a preference for the Methodist church and united with and lived a consistent member of that faith until his death. In 1835, he was operating a mill known as McCalman's Mill, as there is extant, a promissory note signed by one D. R. Myers, by which he promised to pay to Landon C. McCalman, $50 "which can be discharged by a good sound horse delivered at McCalman's Mills."

On October 13, 1846, he was ordained a minister in the Methodist church, by the Society of Concord, at Carrollton. In January 1845, he was appointed to take the census of Carroll County in Major Ashley's Battalion, by order of the Court.

On August 19, 1861, he was mustered into the 3rd Regiment of Georgia Volunteers, CSA, under Lt. Col. E. P. Watkins, at Brunswick. He was recorded as being 51 years of age, birthplace, Blount County, Tennessee, height 6 feet, 2 inches, and of light complexion, light colored eyes, fair hair, and by occupation a farmer. In November 1861, he entered the hospital suffering from recurrent asthma, which he reported he had been a victim of for 26 years. Another record shows him as being released from Convalescent Camp at La Grange on May 4, 1864, and ordered to report to his command without delay. Transportation was furnished to him from there to Dalton and then to Resaca, since his command, Company C, 26th Georgia Battalion, had been ordered to duty at that point by order of General Stevens.

On August 1, 1873, he was given license to teach in the public schools of Carroll County, Georgia. He afterwards moved to Buchanan, Georgia, where he served as mayor, being qualified by the board of electors on December 2, 1882. He died, May 29, 1884, and was buried in County Line cemetery, on the Carroll-Haralson County lines. He was a good citizen, a good church member, and respected by all who knew him, as a true and upright man.¹²

He married, September 13, 1832, Carroll County, Georgia, Eliza A. Sharpe (b. Nov. 15, 1816; d. Apr. 15, 1896; g. County Line c.), daughter of Hiram Sharpe (q.v.) and Sara Ann Owen.

AG IV HARRIET B. McCALMAN (1818-1868), Cherokee County, Ala.

Harriet B. McCalman, daughter of James Scotland McCalman and Elizabeth Scott, was born while her parents were living in Ohio, March 8, 1818. She was brought to Blount County, Tennessee, when her parents returned there about 1825, and later taken by them to Georgia, and afterwards to Alabama, first to St. Clair County, and finally, Cherokee County. She soon married, and when her roving father set out for Texas, she remained in Alabama. She died, February 13, 1868, and is buried in Mill Creek churchyard, Gaylesville, Cherokee County.

She married about 1837, Samuel Miller (b. Aug. 22, 1812; d. May 27, 1888), son of John and Rhoda Miller.

AG IV JOHN SCOTT McCALMAN (1820-1886), Cherokee County, Ala.

John Scott McCalman, son of James Scotland McCalman and Elizabeth Scott, was born in Ohio, January 9, 1820, and brought to Blount County, Tennessee, as a small child, about 1825. Later, he was taken to Georgia, and afterwards to St. Clair County, Alabama, about 1833, and soon after to Cherokee County, Alabama. In 1838, his father started construction of a dam and mill at Gaylesville but had only the foundations in when he fell and broke several ribs. John, then only 18 years old, took charge and completed both the dam and the mill. The following year, his father set out for Texas, taking all his family excepting those of his children who had married. John accompanied his father but returned to Cherokee County after a year as he did not like the country. Thus, the absence of both John and his father from the 1840 census for Cherokee County is explained.

John, like his brother, Landon, was trained to be a millwright, but despised the trade and kept it secret. He became a farmer and owned a large farm. He was also justice of the peace at Gaylesville for 30 or 40 years. He was never in sympathy with the secession of the southern states from the union, but as he kept silent and did not vote, it was not generally known. He died in May, 1886, and is buried in Forest Hill cemetery, Gaylesville.

He married in 1841, Elisa DeArmond, daughter of Richard Johnston DeArmond (q.v.). She was a merry, vivacious woman, with a keen wit and sense of humor.

AG IV JAMES SCOTT McCALMAN (1822-1898), Columbia County, Arkansas

James Scott McCalman, son of James Scotland McCalman and Elizabeth Scott, was born while his parents were living in Ohio, in 1822. He was brought as a child to Blount County, Tennessee, when his parents returned there about 1825, and from there was taken to Georgia; then to St. Clair County, Alabama, about 1833. A few years later, the family moved to Cherokee County, Alabama. In 1839, James' father set out for Texas with all his children except those who had married, and James went along, being then 17 years old. No record of any of the family has been found in Texas, but James eventually settled in Claiborne County, Louisiana, about 1847 or earlier, and farmed on what is now known as the old Bonner Place, located about 5 miles northwest of Homer. About 1858, he moved to Brister, Columbia County, Arkansas, and continued farming. After his wife's death, he made his home with his daughter, Josephine Malissa, and died there, January 27, 1898, and is buried at Christie's Chapel, Columbia County.

He married, about 1847, Claiborne County, Louisiana, Charlotte Elizabeth Fullerton (b. 1832, S. C.; d. May 14, 1882, Columbia County, Ark.), whose father was born in Ireland and whose mother was born in South Carolina.¹⁴

AG V JAMES MARION McCALMAN, SR. (1834-1905), Carrollton, Georgia

James Marion McCalman, Sr., son of Landon Carter McCalman and Eliza A. Sharpe, was born on his father's plantation, about 5 miles from Carrollton, Georgia, February 26, 1834. While James Marion was a small child, his father was a miller but became a minister when James Marion was 12 years old, and he was reared in the precepts of the ministry. Soon after his marriage, the Civil War broke out and his father went into service. On May 13, 1862, James Marion enlisted at Carrollton, as a private in Company H, 56th Regiment, Georgia Infantry, for 3 years. He was captured by the union forces at Vicksburg, Mississippi, July 4, 1863, and paroled there, July 8, 1863, as a sergeant. His name appears on a list of men furloughed and present at Enterprise, Mississippi, July 23, 1863.¹⁵ About 1870, he was ordained a minister in the Methodist church and served as pastor of several churches, among which were Harmony Grove, Carroll County;

Draketown, Pauldin County; Yellow Dirt, Heard County; Rock Springs, near Hutchersons Ferry. He was a Mason for more than 40 years. He was characterized by his warm-hearted and companionable nature which earned for him enduring friendships. His son, Felix, has this to say of his father: 'In politics, father was an ardent democrat. With his whole heart, he believed in the principles for which he fought through four years of civil strife with Lee, Johnston, Gordon and Bragg. Although he signed the oath of allegiance after the war, he lived and died a rebel at heart. He could never forget carpet bag rule in the south nor could he forgive the Republican party for its many attempts to force upon us social equality with the negro. He considered suffrage a duty as well as a privilege and never failed to cast his ballot at the poll. On election day when Cleveland was running for president and it looked as if the democrats might win, Father was so jubilant that he told his friends he would throw his hat over the courthouse if Cleveland was elected. After the returns were in and his party had won, his friends demanded that he be as good as his word, so in the presence of most of the county, he tied a stone to his hat and threw it over. To the end of his life he loved a joke, even though he was the butt of it.' He died at Carrollton, August 11, 1905, and is buried there.

He married, January 5, 1858, Nancy Louise Webb (b. June 13, 1840; d. Dec. 21, 1926; g. County Line c.), daughter of Coleman Webb and Matilda Johnson.¹⁰

AG V GEORGE MADISON McCALMAN (1848-1926), Carroll County, Ga.

George Madison McCalman, son of Landon Carter McCalman and Eliza A. Sharpe, was born in Carroll County, Georgia, September 7, 1848. He received his education from the county schools of Carroll County, and became a farmer and owned a farm of 350 acres. He had no faith in banks and kept all his cash of whatever amounts concealed at his home or on his or his wife's person, and as a consequence, was haunted by the fear of being robbed in the night.

Known to his friends and neighbors as "Uncle George," he was a familiar figure in his immaculate white shirts, long snowy beard and cane. He was a great tease with a merry twinkle in his eye. Being a true McCalman, he was undemonstrative with his affections but attached to those of his family who were able to break through his seeming austerity and offer him caresses. He had a particular knack with children and could cross into their world with ease. He lived out his life in the county where he was born, and died, March 8, 1926, a communicant of the Methodist church.

He married, December 21, 1871, Carroll County, Georgia, Susan E. Mote (b. Aug. 30, 1855, Carroll County, Ga.; d. Feb. 8, 1928, Carroll County, Ga.).

AG V LORENZO DOW McCALMAN (1845-1919), Cherokee County, Alabama

Lorenzo Dow McCalman, son of John Scott McCalman and Elisa DeArmond, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, February 19, 1845. He was named for his uncle, Lorenzo Dow Griffiths (q.v.). He spent his boyhood on his father's farm, and obtained his education from the district schools.

On August 7, 1861, being then only 16 years old, he enlisted in the Confederate Army at Centre, Alabama, as a private in Company H, 19th Regiment, Alabama Infantry, Joseph L. Cunningham, commanding, for a term of three years, giving his age as 19. He was mustered in at Huntsville. He was later transferred to Company A, Yancey's Battalion, Alabama Sharp Shooters, being shown present with that company on September 14, 1862. He was transferred to Company G, 19th Regiment, Alabama Infantry, by order of November 17, 1862, at Tullahoma, Tennessee. The roll of Company H, 19th Regiment, Alabama Infantry, for the period of January and February, 1864, latest on file, reports him enlisted, September 1, 1863, at Chattanooga, Tennessee, for 3 years, and shows him "Absent on detached Service, February 18, 1864, General Army Supply Train, order General Johnston."¹⁷ However, he related to his sons and this writer that at midnight of the expiration of his enlistment, August 14, 1864, instead of reenlisting, he returned home to see his mother. There he enlisted in John W. Gatewood's Scouts, in which organization he served until the end of the war.

After the surrender of General Lee at Appomatox, he hastened home to claim his sweetheart before she should marry any one else. He made his home in Cherokee County, near Gaylesville, where he engaged in farming. He also served as county surveyor for Cherokee County for 17 years. After his second marriage, he moved to Dutton, Jackson County, Alabama, where he made his home until his death. He died April 13, 1919, and is buried at Dutton, Alabama.

He was a stockily built, handsome young man with chestnut brown hair, a strong nose, fine complexion and beautiful brown eyes. In his mature years, he wore a full beard which eventually became snow white. A man of stern mien and gruff manner, he used these traits as camouflage for a deep and undemonstrable affection for his family. He was possessed of great pride and interest in his forebears, which traits were passed to this writer by inheritance and precept. A controversial figure in his family, he was often misjudged because of his complex nature and his devastating and sarcastic wit, which blinded others to his keen intellect.

He married first, April 21, 1865, Harriet Mahala Hurley (b. Nov. 4, 1844, Hurley, Ala.; d. Aug. 27, 1892, Gaylesville, Ala.; g. Unity chyd), daughter of Henry Hurley and Elizabeth Smith. AG V JAMES RICHARD McCALMAN (1848-1920), Celeste, Texas

James Richard McCalman, son of John Scott McCalman and Elisa DeArmond, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, November 26, 1848. He obtained his education from the nearby schools and worked on his father's farm until he was 24 years old, when he married and established his own home. He continued farming in Cherokee County until March 1899, when he moved with his family to Celeste, Hunt County, Texas, where he engaged in merchandising and farming until the death of his wife in 1914. Most of his children were then married and living apart, and he returned to Cherokee County, Alabama, and made his home with his son, Esli, at Jamestown. He died there, April 20, 1920, and is buried in Unity churchyard. A Baptist, he was a sincere Christian, and his word was his bond. He made friends easily and was devoted to children.

He married, August 8, 1872, Hurley, Alabama, Sarah Melvina Hurley (b. July 16, 1851, Hurley, Ala.; d. Oct. 23, 1914, Celeste, Texas; g. same), daughter of Henry Hurley and Elizabeth Smith. AG V WILLIAM FRANKLIN McCALMAN (1852-1916), White Haven, Tennessee

William Franklin McCalman, son of John Scott McCalman and Elisa DeArmond, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, September 19, 1852. He obtained his education at Gaylesville, and grew to manhood on his father's farm. About 1887, due in part to the influence of his wife's sister, Mrs. Golightly, who lived in Memphis, Tennessee, and also seeking a wider opportunity for the future, he moved to Stevenson, Tennessee, near Memphis, where he remained about two years. He then located at White Haven, a suburb of Memphis, and engaged in farming, and operated one of the finest and cleanest dairies in the vicinity of Memphis. About 1913, he sold his farm and dairy and moved to Memphis where he entered the grocery business. In 1916, he retired from business and went to live with his son, William McKendree, at Hazen, Arkansas. He died there, August 8, 1916, and is also buried there. He was very active in his church, being a Sunday school superintendent and song leader, and was a great Bible student.

He married, April 18, 1878, Gaylesville, Alabama, Pamela Hill (b. Jan. 1, 1853, Waterloo, Ala.; d. Nov. 28, 1936, Memphis, Tenn.; g. Stevenson Chapel, Tenn.), daughter of Joseph Hill and Charlotte Elizabeth Canant; Rev. I. I. Melton, officiating.

AG V TALITHA CUMI "SHUG" McCALMAN (c1853-1900), Collinsville, Texas

Talitha Cumi "Shug" McCalman, daughter of John Scott McCalman and Elisa DeArmond, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, about 1853, where she grew to womanhood and received her education. As a girl, she was quite handsome, had a natural ear for music and could play almost any musical instrument by ear. After her marriage, she and her husband lived principally in DeKalb County. After the death of her husband, she remained in Alabama until about 1894, when she got into some sort of dispute with neighbors who threatened lawsuit, and Talitha left Alabama to avoid further trouble. She followed her sister, Elizabeth Clementine, to Texas, and lived first at Sherman, then moved to Whitehaven, 4 miles west of Sherman, then to Ethel, 2 miles south of Collinsville. She became ill with tuberculosis and her mother went to her by train from Alabama, to nurse her and to care for her children. Her advanced age and the burden of nursing was too much for her mother and she contracted pneumonia and died at Collinsville, Texas. Talitha lived her remaining years in the home of her sister, Elizabeth Clementine, on the Gunters Ranch, Tioga, Texas, where she died in 1900, and was buried at Collinsville.

She married in 1881,¹⁸ James Bryant, a successful sawmill operator. He was operating a sawmill on Sand Mountain, Jackson County, Alabama, at the time of his death in 1889. He had two heart attacks while at work, and died a day or so later.

After Talitha's death, the children remained at Collinsville, and were reared by neighbors. Having no contact with their family, they misspelled their name when they grew up, as "Bryan".

AG VI NANCY LOUISE McCALMAN (1881-), Social Circle, Georgia

Nancy Louise McCalman, daughter of James Marion McCalman, Sr. and Nancy Louise Webb, was born in Carroll County, Georgia, November 18, 1881, the tenth and youngest child. Having the care of her ailing parents and an invalid brother, she did not have the opportunity to carry her education beyond the school facilities of her home town, but did study violin, voice and piano. After her marriage, she devoted her time and talents to home-making and being a devoted mother. Her hobbies are handiwork, music and outdoor sports.

She married, October 6, 1901, Carrollton, Georgia, Homer Lee Rowe (b. Nov. 21, 1878, Carrollton, Ga.; d. Feb. 7, 1953, Social Circle, Ga.), son of William Howell Rowe and Phedora Spence. He obtained his schooling in Carroll County, later taking a commercial law course at Columbus (Ga.) Business College. He taught country school for several years, and was bookkeeper for two firms at Carrollton for five years. In 1910, he moved to Social Circle, Georgia, and was cashier, Social Circle Bank, until 1923. He then became executive secretary, Medical Association of Georgia, and business manager, Journal of the Medical Association of Georgia. His offices were in Atlanta to which he commuted daily. His hobbies were farming, raising hereford cattle, hunting, and talking politics.

AG VI JEROME McDONALD McCALMAN (1867-1919), Sallisaw, Oklahoma

Jerome McDonald McCalman, son of Lorenzo Dow McCalman and Harriet Mahala Hurley, was born at Hurley, Cherokee County, Alabama, July 23, 1867. He was named for his father's cousin, Jerome DeArmond (q.v.), who lost his life during the Civil War. He secured his education from the schools of Gaylesville, and worked on his father's farm until his marriage. He operated briefly a summer hotel on Lookout Mountain near Summerville, Georgia. In 1898, he moved to Celeste, Texas, where he built a cotton gin and seed mill. In 1903, he moved into Indian Territory, and settled at Sallisaw, where his wife's twin brother was operating a store and had married a part Cherokee girl. Jerome worked as a carpenter and contractor, and operated sawmills in the forests around Sallisaw. He studied constantly to improve himself, reading every available book on architecture and construction and taking correspondence courses. In time, he became an excellent draftsman and architect, and made his own drawings and specifications and blueprints. Being a perfectionist, no detail was left out. He also surveyed a great deal of the country around Sallisaw and Muskogee. He moved to Muskogee in 1912, where he built an oil refinery. He moved to Haskell in 1914, and continued his profession, also operating a cotton gin until his death. He died at Haskell, December 16, 1919, from an old injury received while living at Celeste, Texas. He was a man of unflagging energy, a strong sense of responsibility, and a keen, penetrating intellect.

He married, December 19, 1894, Summerville Georgia, Virginia Lee Rich (b. July 8, 1868), daughter of William Melton Rich and Mary Berilla Wofford; M. A. Belmont, officiating. A tiny woman of unceasing activity, she makes her home with her daughter, Delisca, at Stilwell, Oklahoma (1953).

AG VI JOHN HENRY McCALMAN (1872-), Bryan County, Oklahoma

John Henry McCalman, son of Lorenzo Dow McCalman and Harriet Mahala Hurley, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, January 23, 1872, being named for his two grandfathers. He received what education was available from the district school at Gaylesville, meanwhile working on his father's farm. When he became subject to road duty at 18, he was appointed road overseer, and when he was 20, he worked as janitor of the school for his tuition, $3.60 per month. He grew into a very handsome young man, and when he became of age, went to nearby Summerville, Georgia, and fixed a sawmill steam engine at 50 cents per day to earn his railroad fare to Texas. As soon as he had accumulated the requisite amount, he left for Texas, arriving at Celeste, Hunt County, August 24, 1894. He picked 10 bales of cotton that fall at 40 cents per hundred pounds. In 1895-1896, he worked on a farm for $13 per month, and in 1897, attended school at Ladonia, Texas, for six months. In 1898, he attended school at Celeste, and in 1899, was employed at the asylum at Terrell, Texas. In 1900, he returned to Celeste, ran for office and was elected constable, afterwards being offered the post of deputy sheriff but instead, went to Indian Territory in 1903 and leased a tract of land near Caddo, Bryan County, and began farming. In 1906, he homesteaded in New Mexico on a 160-acre tract which he sold for $1000. He returned to his farm at Caddo where he has lived since. He purchased his original lease and has added to it by other purchases until he now has 510 acres. In 1936, he was appointed road supervisor for the Works Progress Administration project during the Franklin Roosevelt administration. He is now (1953) completing his 50th year at the same location.

He joined the Baptist faith at the age of 14 in Cherokee County, Alabama, and has remained a faithful Baptist throughout his life. He became a Mason in the Celeste Lodge 770, and was master of the Caddo Lodge No. 3 for 2 years, and Worthy Patron of the Eastern Star for 20 years. He is now a 32nd degree Mason and a Shriner. He is a good correspondent and enjoys community singing but his real love is his farm and things that grow out of the ground.

He married, January 1, 1902, Greenville, Texas, Elizabeth Caroline Carter, daughter of Presley Gilbert Carter²² and Margaret Ann Cameron. She was born, December 20, 1877, on a farm 3 miles west of Kingston, Hunt County, Texas. Her elementary education was obtained from a one-teacher country school, but when she was 13, she entered Calhoun College, Kingston, where she finished her elementary schooling and completed two or more years of college work. In the Spring of 1897, she secured a first grade teachers certificate covering 17 subjects, and began teaching country school, October 1897. She taught 6 years in Texas and 3 years at Caddo, Indian Territory. She is a Baptist, being converted in 1895, and is active in church and missionary work; a pioneer member, Caddo Music and Literary Club, Past Matron, Order of Eastern Star. A woman of literary taste, she has inspired her children with her culture and intellectual attainments.

Lorenzo Eugene McCalmont, son of Lorenzo Dow McCalman and Harriet Mahala Hurley, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, July 26, 1874. He received his education from Gaylesville schools, and worked on his father's farm until he reached manhood. In 1892, when he was 18 years old, he went to Knoxville, Tennessee, and lived with his sister, Vashti, and worked in her husband's grocery business. He became a well known and popular baseball player on the Knoxville teams. He afterwards worked in the railroad shops and foundries at Birmingham and Gadsden, Alabama. From there, he went to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where he worked for several years as a moulder in the iron foundries. He and his brother, William Carlyle Polk, were in Chattanooga together for awhile. In June 1900, he went to Meridian, Mississippi, and began working in the Southern Railway shops in August of that year. He became foreman of the brass foundry, where he remained for 39 years. He retired, July 31, 1939, and bought a farm on Route 4, a few miles out of town, which he farmed until his death. He died there, November 5, 1944. He was a Baptist, and was Clerk of his church for about 15 years. As a young man, his hobbies were baseball and bird hunting. A sensitive and warm-hearted person, he was an affectionate, indulgent father, and wanted his children always at his side.

He married, June 23, 1901, Meridian, Mississippi, Lillian Mahala Alexander (b. Feb. 26, 1879, Lauderdale County, Miss.), daughter of William Isham Alexander and Rebecca Covington. Since her husband's death, Lillian makes her home with her son, Frank Croy, at the home place.

Lauena Estella McCalman, daughter of Lorenzo Dow McCalman and Harriet Mahala Hurley, was born at Little River, Cherokee County, Alabama, December 15, 1877. When she was about four years old, her parents moved to Gaylesville, where she attended school. Her mother died when she was 15 years old and she remained at home and kept house for her father afterwards until he remarried in 1893. She was not happy living with her stepmother, and in January 1898, went to Celeste, Texas, where her brother, John, was then living. She made her own living, using the only training she possessed, and became first a housekeeper and later a governess, until she married. She lived in Celeste for several years after she married, moving to Oil City, Louisiana, in 1913, where she has since made her home. She is a woman of resource and competence and fears no man.

She married, May 14, 1906, Celeste, Texas, Oscar Milford (b. Feb. 11, 1869, Columbia, Ala.; d. Oct. 26, 1928, Oil City, La.), son of Thomas Milford and Amanda Loftos. He was an oil field mechanic and supervisor.

William Carlyle Polk McCAlman, son of Lorenzo Dow McCAlman and Harriet Mahala Hurley, was born at Gaylesville, Cherokee County, Alabama, April 13, 1880. He attended school at Gaylesville taught by S. Lafayette Russell (q.v.) until he was 14, when he moved with his father to Dutton, Jackson County, Alabama, atop Sand Mountain, where he attended rural school until he was 16, when he went to Menlo, Georgia, for 5 months. He then returned to Dutton and helped his father farm. In 1903, he moved to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where he worked for the Southern Malleable Iron Works for 2 years, afterwards returning to Dutton. He later went to Celeste, Hunt County, Texas, where he followed the carpenter trade for a year, then worked on a ranch in Shackelford County for 16 months. He then returned to Celeste and operated a cotton gin. In 1907, he went into Indian Territory and operated a sawmill until the end of the year, when he returned to Dutton, Alabama, and claimed his boyhood sweetheart as his bride, and brought her to Oklahoma. He lived at Bunch until September 1908, when he settled at Sallisaw near his brother, Jerome, where he has since made his home. He became a contractor and builder, and did some farming. He now (1953) makes his home with his daughter, Vallie. He is a member of the Baptist Church, a man of strong character and principles but with great tolerance and understanding toward others.

He married, December 29, 1907, on Sand Mountain, Jackson County, Alabama, Lillie Barnes (b. Aug. 14, 1883, Jackson County, Ala.; d. June 17, 1952, Sallisaw, Okla.; g. same), daughter of Charles Barnes and Lizzie Weaver.

Esli Lafayette McCalman, son of James Richard McCalman and Sarah Melvina Hurley, was born in Cherokee County, Alabama, July 28, 1876, where he attended school and grew to manhood. When he was 22 years old, his parents moved to Celeste, Texas, and Esli accompanied them. He remained in Texas about a year but since he had left his boyhood sweetheart back in Alabama and did not like the country, he returned to Cherokee County, Alabama, where he married and made his home. He became a merchant and farmer at Jamestown, and station agent for the T. A. & G. Railroad, south of Chattanooga. He was also postmaster at Jamestown for several years, and commissioner for Cherokee County for two terms. He lived out his life in that valley at the foot of Lookout Mountain, and accumulated considerable substance. He developed a heart ailment from which he suffered intermittent attacks over a period of three years, but died quietly at home after an illness of only three or four days, October 24, 1942, and was buried in Moseley cemetery. He was a patient, tolerant and lovable person.

AG VII MARY MAUDE McCALMAN (1902-), Columbus, Georgia

Mary Maude McCalman, daughter of Felix Elmore McCalman and Lena Florence Kennerly, was born at Carrollton, Georgia, February 8, 1902. She was reared at Norman Park, Georgia, and graduated there from Norman College. A woman of literary taste and erudition, she is also a pianist, organist and violinist, and a graduate in art, painting being her hobby. She now (1953) lives at Columbus, Georgia, and in addition to her other activities has been teaching at the Turner Private School for several years, an institution geared to the needs of the student rather than to a conventional academic program.

She married, September 10, 1919, Norman Park, Georgia, James Edward Fain, Sr. (b. Feb. 23, 1896, Ashburn, Ga.), son of Robert Payne Fain and Carrie Rennie Howell, and grandson of James Edward Fain and Nancy Walker.¹⁹ He became a licensed pharmacist at Baxley, Georgia, and afterwards studied law at University of Chicago, his studies being interrupted by service in World War I, as Regimental Sergeant Major, 17th U. S. Infantry. After the war, he accepted a rural pastoral charge of the Methodist Church, South, in the Valdosta district, of the South Georgia Conference. Upon completion of his theological studies, he was ordained in 1923, thus becoming the fourth direct minister in his family, his father, grandfather and great grandfather having preceded him as ministers in the Methodist faith. He has served as pastor at Claxton and Fitzgerald, Georgia; and of First Methodist Church, Albany; Wesley Monumental Church, Savannah; and presently (1953), Wynnton Methodist Church, Columbus. He served six years as superintendent of the Columbus district and represented his conference at the Uniting Conference of Methodism, Kansas City, 1939; General Conference, Kansas City, 1944, and Boston, 1948; Jurisdictional Conference, Atlanta, 1944, and Columbia, S. C., 1948, and Roanoke, Va., 1952. He attended the Ecumenical Conference of Methodism at Oxford, England, August 1951, as the representative from the South Georgia Conference.

AG VII JAMES OTHO McCALMAN (1895-), Stilwell, Okla.

James Otho McCalman, son of Jerome McDonald McCalman and Virginia Lee Rich, was born at Summerville, Georgia, September 29, 1895, and taken by his parents while a small child to Celeste, Texas, and to Sallisaw, Indian Territory, in 1903. He received his schooling at Muskogee and Haskell, and worked with his father until May 6, 1917, when he enlisted in the U. S. Army Air Corps, for four years. He received his training at Fort Logan, Colorado; Fort Douglas, Utah; Fort Dodge, Iowa; and Kelly Field, Texas. He was then stationed at Mitchell Field, Long Island, New York, and from there was sent to England, March 1918 and did duty in England, Scotland and France. He was returned to the United States and discharged, June 18, 1920. He returned to Oklahoma, and operated a bus line between Fort Smith, Arkansas, and Tulsa, Oklahoma. He sold out in 1929 and opened a mill and lumber yard at Stilwell, Oklahoma. He is presently (1952) a building contractor at Stilwell. A tall, compactly built man, he has a genial personality and many friends. Although mechanically gifted, he has a penetratingly analytical mind and is thoroughly informed on many subjects.

He married first, January 5, 1920, Beatrice Byers, a New York girl. Although well received and well liked when Otho brought her to Oklahoma after the war, she could not adjust to life in the southwest, and after a stay of about two years, returned to New York. Rumor has it that she obtained a divorce reluctantly after some delay.

He married second, November 26, 1926, Marjorie Belle Calloway (b. Apr. 9, 1901), daughter of Dr. Asa Bell Calloway and Nancy Ada Atkins; Rev. T. C. Atkins of Stigler, Oklahoma, her grandfather, officiating. She is a language teacher in Stilwell High School.

AG VII ALLIE DELISCA McCALMAN (1905-), Stilwell, Okla.

Allie Delisca McCAlman, daughter of Jerome McDonald McCAlman and Virginia Lee Rich, was born at Sallisaw, Oklahoma, March 24, 1905. She received her grade schooling at Muskogee and Haskell, and graduated from high school at Haskell, and Northeastern State Teachers College at Tahlequah.¹⁹ She taught in Stilwell High School for 7 years after her marriage; has a good singing voice, and teaches expression. She is a talented and experienced amateur entertainer whose skits are much in demand over Oklahoma. She now owns and operates the J. L. Cox Hotel at Stilwell which her husband's father built, and other enterprises. Delisca is a pretty, charming woman of grace and manners and with a warm friendly disposition.

She married, July 31, 1925, First Baptist Church, Tulsa, Bruce McKinley Cox (b. Jan. 29, 1903, Stilwell, Okla.; d. Dec. 30, 1950, Stilwell), son of Joseph Lincoln Cox, Sr. and Olive Bell Snellen. Prominent politically in Oklahoma and twice mayor of Stilwell, he was for a time a dry goods merchant and investor at Stilwell; later owned and operated the J. L. Cox Hotel, Stilwell, a modern comfortable hostelry built by his father. He became ill of a nervous mental disorder and took his own life. The funeral was widely attended, the Governor of Oklahoma and his wife being among the attendants. He left an estate valued at about $300,000.

Frances Grazelda McCalman, daughter of Jerome McDonald McCalman and Virginia Lee Rich, was born at Sallisaw, Oklahoma, October 5, 1910. She attended grade and high school at Haskell, and business college at Tulsa, and was in the business world until her marriage. She is quite artistic and has a strong gift for designing; makes her own clothing and does fine tailoring with a professional touch; likes interior decorating. She has a radiant smile and a glowing personality.

She married, October 16, 1932, Sapulpa, Oklahoma, Edward Eugene Lankford (b. Dec. 19, 1908, Seneca, Mo.), son of Edward Anderson Lankford (b. Oct. 10, 1882, Seneca, Mo.) and Marian Eva Kinloch (b. Jan. 10, 1883, Seneca, Mo.). He attended grammar school at Seneca until 1920, when he moved to Springfield where he completed high school. In 1925, at the age of 17, he moved to Tulsa, and worked at the Auto Hotel while attending night classes at the Oklahoma School of Accountancy. He went with the Mid-Continent Petroleum Company at Tulsa, until April 1944, when he became resident adjuster for the Transport Insurance Exchange, at Sacramento, California. He was transferred to Oakland, April 1948; Los Angeles, February 1950; and Modesto, September 1951. Tired of being moved about so much, he went with Hansen & Rowland, Inc., and moved to Tacoma, Washington, January 1952. His duties take him to Alaska, South America and Hawaii. A blue-eyed blond with brown hair, he is of medium height and has a good mind and a very pleasing manner.

AG VIII ROBERT LYNN McCALMAN (1922-), Wichita Falls, Texas

Robert Lynn McCalman, son of James Otho McCalman and Beatrice Byers, was born at Webbers Falls, Oklahoma, October 26, 1922. He attended grammar and high school at Stilwell, Oklahoma, graduating, May 1940, and attended Oklahoma Military Academy, September 1940-June 1942, where he took flight training.

He served in World War II from 1942 through 1945. He first enlisted in the Navy Air Corps, June 14, 1942, and received his basic training at Naval Training Station, Athens, Georgia, and was sent from there to Prairie Grove, Texas. He left the Navy, September 29, 1942, and enlisted in the Army Air Corps, January 20, 1943. He trained at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, Miami Beach, Florida, and at the Chicago radio school. On August 2, 1943, he was assigned to the Kingman, Arizona, gunnery school, as a sergeant, and in September was assigned to a crew at Salt Lake City. The crew received combat flight training at McDill Field, Tampa, Florida, where Robert was promoted to staff sergeant. The crew left Morrison Field, West Palm Beach, March 9, 1944, for overseas duty, refueling at Borinquen Field, Porto Rico; Atkinson Field, British Guiana; Belem and Natal, Brazil; then across the Atlantic to Dakar, West Africa; Marrakach, Morocco; Tunis, Algeria; to Foggia, Italy, arriving March 29, 1944, where they were based as part of the 15th Air Force. Robert flew 50 bombing missions as gunner, radioman and cameraman, over targets in France, northern Italy, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Austria, and made at least nine raids on the Ploesti oil fields, one of the most heavily defended targets in Europe. On one mission over an aircraft factory at Wiener Neustadt, Austria, after dropping their bombs, the crew flew on to Limberg, Russia, for refueling, before making the return to their base, and another mission into Poland, refueling near Kiev, Russia. On one raid over Ploesti, two engines were knocked out at 11 a.m., target hour, and they nursed the plane toward their base on two engines until a third engine caught on fire, when they headed out into the Adriatic Sea, and bailed out near Manfredonia Beach. They were picked up by Italian farmers who took them back to their base, which they reached about 8 p.m. Being short of both planes and crews at the base, they were in the air the following morning on a bombing mission against a munitions factory at Budapest. Robert completed his 50 missions with a raid on railroad yards at Zagreb, Yugoslavia, August 27, 1944. He sailed for the United States from Naples, September 13, 1944, on the U.S.S. JAMES PARKER. He was discharged, October 15, 1945, at Sheppard Field, Wichita Falls, Texas.

He then entered Oklahoma A. & M. College, Stillwater, for the 1946 session, and Tulsa University, 1947. He then went with the National Geophysical Company at Texarkana. April 1, 1948, he went with the Ohio Oil Company, as an oil scout, at Hobbs, New Mexico. He was transferred to Wichita Falls, Texas, October 24, 1950, and promoted to landman, March 1, 1953.¹⁹

He married, January 16, 1948, Hobbs, New Mexico, Dolores June Bensing (b. June 14, 1925, Billings, Okla.), daughter of Albert William Bensing (b. June 27, 1880, Ft. Dodge, Iowa; d. AG I JAMES SCOTT (1760-1823), Blount County, Tennessee

James Scott, pioneer settler and citizen of Blount County, Tennessee, was born in 1760, but there is controversy about the actual place of his birth. According to one source, he was born in Ireland, one of a large family, and emigrated as a young man to Virginia.⁹ He married in Virginia, and migrated very early to Blount County, being one of the first settlers in the county. He was one of the signers of the Petition of the Inhabitants of the Western Country which was presented to the North Carolina legislature in December 1787, praying for the establishment of a separate state for the people living west of the Unaka mountains.¹⁰ He was a soldier in the Indian Wars of 1790 or 1796, and commanded a regiment and was wounded in the battle fought on the Little Tennessee River.¹ Blount County was established by an Act of the Territorial Assembly, passed July 11, 1795, and Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions was organized on the second Monday of September 1795, at the home of Abraham Wear. The justices present were William Wallace, William Lowry, James Scott, Oliver Alexander, David Craig, and George Ewing.² James Scott was appointed a justice of the peace by Governor William Blount on August 3, 1795.¹⁵ James was commissioned a captain of the Tennessee Militia on October 10, 1796.³ In 1793, he recorded in Knox County, Tennessee, his stock brand, his mark being "a crop off the left ear and a swallow fork off the right."⁴

His first years in Blount County were spent in a blockhouse⁵ after which he built a log cabin on his farm⁶ which consisted of 640 acres.⁷ On at least one occasion after he had built his cabin, he and his wife were forced to return to the blockhouse because of an Indian raid, and James with the other men fired through the portholes while his wife and the other women moulded bullets at the hearth.⁸ John Sevier called James his "right-hand man" and said he never wanted to go on an Indian campaign without him riding by his side. He was a remarkable woodsman and accompanied Sevier constantly on his forays against the Indians.⁸ James served as direct representative from Blount County to the Second General Assembly of the newly formed State of Tennessee, at Knoxville in 1797; in the Third Assembly in 1799; the Fifth Assembly in 1803; the Sixth Assembly in 1805; and the seventh Assembly in 1807.

After the Indians were subdued, cotton became an important industry in the county and a large number of cotton gins were erected. Those in operation in 1802 were owned by Thomas Berry, James Scott, Samuel Houston, William Stanfield, William Lowry and Patrick Collins.²

James achieved prosperity and prominence in his chosen county and the Blount County Court Minutes are replete with his functions in an official capacity as late as 1815. He and his wife, Jane, are found in a list of the membership of the New Providence Presbyterian Church on May 10, 1818. Robert and Margaret Scott were also shown in the same list.¹⁷

He sold his home and moved to Knoxville in the next county sometime after 1815, as he and his wife were dismissed by letter from the New Providence Church membership, September 22, 1821, apparently moving their membership to the First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville.¹⁷ James first built a log house on North Broadway near present day Lawson Avenue, being directly across Broadway from the later location of his son's flour mill. This log house was later weatherboarded. A small brick house was later built across First Creek and on the west side of Broadway. He died, intestate, August 30, 1823, and is buried in First Presbyterian churchyard in downtown Knoxville. His grave is covered with a granite blanket which bears the following inscription, clearly legible at this late date (1946): "James Scott, died August 30, 1823, aged 63 years."

He married in Virginia, Jane Adams, who was born in 1760, and whose sister married Captain Samuel Henley.¹⁹ One account says James had played with Jane as a child in Ireland, and after reaching America, sent a message to her proposing marriage and offering to return to Ireland for her, but she replied that some of her relatives were coming to America and she would accompany them. This she did and married a man she had not seen since he was a mere lad.⁶ However, her obituary states that she was born in Virginia and settled in East Tennessee while it was still a part of North Carolina. She easily adapted to pioneer ways and on more than one occasion stood by her husband's side while repelling raids by the Indians. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church for more than 50 years.⁵ She died at Knoxville, at the home of her son-in-law, John M. Davis, and is buried beside her husband in First Presbyterian churchyard. Her headstone carries the following inscription, also legible: "In Memory of Jane Scott, consort of James Scott, Sen., who died August 10, 1837, aged 77 years. Blessed are the dead Which die in the Lord."

AG II JAMES SCOTT, JR. (1797-1838), Knoxville, Tennessee

James Scott, Jr., son of James Scott, Sr. and Jane Adams, was born in Blount County, Tennessee, March 12, 1797. He moved to Knoxville as a young man and established the Scott Flour Mills which were in operation for more than a hundred years. The mill was built between north Broadway and First Creek, near Coker Avenue. After his marriage, he lived first in a small brick home built by his father, meanwhile having his slaves make bricks for a new home. He prospered and in 1833, built a large handsome brick home across the road from the small brick house which was then torn down. This new home which he named "Cedar Grove" became noted as one of Tennessee's handsomest dwellings because of its architecture, construction, and interior furnishings which included one room finished with imported French wallpaper. The Scott farm covered a large area comprising "Scott Hill" and portions of present day Oakwood. He was known as "colonel" because of his service in the Tennessee militia. He earned also the title of peacemaker because of his role of conciliator between his friends when disputes arose. He died during the cholera epidemic of 1838, while ministering to his friends and neighbors without regard for his own health, September 14, 1838. He is buried beside his mother in First Presbyterian churchyard, in downtown Knoxville.

He married, January 27, 1825, Knoxville,²⁰ Eliza Jane Naomi Bane Alexander Ramsay (b. Nov. 28, 1801; d. Jan. 12, 1858; g. First Presbyterian chyd, Knoxville), daughter of Colonel Francis Alexander Ramsay and Peggy Alexander, and a sister of Dr. J. G. M. Ramsay, celebrated Tennessee historian.

AG III FRANCIS ALEXANDER RAMSAY SCOTT (1827-1909), Knoxville, Tenn.

Francis Alexander Ramsay Scott, son of James Scott, Jr. and Eliza Jane Naomi Bane Alexander Ramsay, was born in his father's first brick home at Knoxville, October 12, 1827. He grew to manhood in Knoxville, and graduated from the East Tennessee University (now University of Tennessee) in 1846. His interest in his alma mater never faltered and he afterwards served as one of its trustees for 40 years. He became associated with John S. VanGilder in the ownership of the Knoxville Leather Company, located on the present site of the L. & N. R. R. station. He also owned the Scott Milling Company and was president of the Central Savings Bank, located in the building now occupied by the Park National Bank. Although prominent in business and civic affairs, he was a man of literary gifts and a profound student of history and current affairs; but for his preoccupation with business he could have become one of the state's foremost writers. A lifelong member of Third (now Fifth Avenue) Presbyterian Church, in his mature years he divided his time and attention between it and the University of Tennessee, both of which were very close to his heart. He built a handsome home on Scott Hill on the exact present site of St. Marys Hospital which he named "Oak Hill". He died, Nov. 13, 1909, and is buried in Old Gray cemetery, Knoxville.¹⁸

He married, Sept. 24, 1857, at "Fruit Hill," Knoxville, Margaretta Frances Deaderick (b. Apr. 22, 1833, Jonesboro, Tenn.), daughter of David Anderson Deaderick and Elizabeth Jane Crozier; Rev. Robert B. McMullen officiating.

AG III JAMES FOSTER SCOTT, SR. (1836-1922), Knoxville, Tenn.

James Foster Scott, Sr., son of James Scott, Jr. and Eliza Jane Naomi Bane Alexander Ramsay, was born at Knoxville, Tennessee, July 8, 1836. He served with the Confederate Army during the Civil War and at its termination found himself in Alabama near his future wife's family who had been taken to Camden, Alabama, by General Anderson for safety after the occupation of Knoxville by federal troops. There he married, afterwards living for awhile at Lafayette, Alabama, where his first child was born. He returned to Knoxville before the birth of his second child in 1871. He took over the operation of the Scott Mills for a time but developed asthma and was forced to sever all connection with the business. He then established the Scott Brick Company on Little River, located in Blount County not far from the Knox County line. The old kilns are still standing.

He married, June 6, 1866, Camden, Alabama, Adelia Anderson (b. Feb. 19, 1840, Knox County, Tenn.; d. Nov. 11, 1925, Knoxville; g. New Gray c.), daughter of General Alexander Anderson and Eliza Rosa Deaderick.

James Wesley DeArmond, son of Allen Dearmond and Mary Caldwell, was born in Mecklenburg County, N. C., in 1812, and brought to Monroe County, Tennessee, about 1825 by his parents, where he grew to manhood. In 1836, he went by wagon train to Logan County, Kentucky, following the Simmonds family, whose daughter he was courting. While enroute, he ran into a rich Indian landowner who operated an inn and livery stable who was so anxious for his daughter to marry a white man that he offered James Wesley his weight in 'eagle half dollars' if he would do so. When he reached Logan County, Kentucky, he was offered 500 acres of fine red limestone land located 20 miles south of Russellville, for one pair of his wagon horses. He declined the offer and moved on north 38 miles to the timber area, and settled on Wolf Lick Creek, in the extreme northern portion of the county, near Dunmore. He became a successful farmer and great horse trader, and was well liked and respected. He died at Dunmore, Logan County, February 20, 1890.

He married in 1836, Logan County, Ky., Mary Simmonds. His brother, Samuel S., married her sister, Cornelia.

APPENDIX

THOMAS ARMAN—Revolutionary War Pension No. W-8332.

Ky. Pulaski Co., 3 June 1822.

Thomas Arman, aged between 69 and 70 years, a resident of Pulaski Co., declares he was a regular soldier in the Continental Establishment. That he enlisted in the 12th regt. of the Virginia troops, 12 Aug. 1777 and remained in service about 3 years.

He stated that he had 5 children, Nancy upwards of 30 years living with him, Mary about 28 yrs. of age married, Henry lives to himself, Thomas about 22 and Elizabeth. His wife is upwards of 60 years and unable to support herself.

Application for a transfer of pension from Kentucky to St. Francis Co. Missouri. May 9, 1827. Ky. Pulaski Co. 15 Apr. 1839.

Charity Arman, resident of Pulaski Co., age upwards of 79 years, declares that she is the widow of Thomas Arman who died in St. Francis Co. Mo. — — Aug. 1831. Some time after his death she returned to Kentucky to live with her daughter and son-in-law. She was married to Thomas Arman in Rutherford Co. North Carolina in 1787 or 88. She was born 13 Dec. 1759.

Thomas Arman had a Family Record in a Bible which he gave to their daughter Elizabeth Crump, wife of George Crump, who had the Bible in her possession when the applicant left Missouri.

Charles Ashley, her son-in-law, when her husband was about to move to Missouri, copied into his own Bible the date of the birth of his wife, Mary Ashley. Charles Ashley's Bible:

Charles Ashley	born 23, Jan. 1789
Mary Ashley	13 Sept. 1793
Callaway Ashley	12 Apr. 1811
Moses Ashley	17 July 1815
Thomas Ashley	2 May 1818
Cinsy Ashley	June 182
Andy Ashley	Apr. 1823
Susannah Ashley	Jan. 1828
Elizabeth Ashley	Apr. 1829

Charity Ashley [?Arman] died 19 Feb. 1845, leaving Nancy Dagget, wife of William Dagget, Mary Ashley, wife of Charles Ashley, and Henry Arman.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL—OBITUARY

From newspaper, Vermont, Illinois, dated July 1, 1873.

The measure of the life of William Campbell—spanning almost a century—ended with June. William Campbell was born in Scotland in the year 1774, and was, consequently, in his ninety-ninth year at the time of his decease, which occurred at 6 o'clock last evening. From Scotland he removed to Ireland where he remained until 1811, when he emigrated to Danville, Pa. Twenty-five years ago he came to Fulton County and settled near Canton where he resided until three years since. He is the father of two children, one of whom, Joseph, died in the army ten years ago, and the other, Elizabeth, now lives near Cuba, in this county. Twenty years ago, on the death of his wife, Mr. Campbell became an inmate of the house of his son Joseph, and lived with that family until the time of his death. He was, by occupation, a stone mason, and industriously pursued his avocation until age and infirmity compelled him to desist. For seven years, of the last of his life, he was lost to sight and hearing, and was supported by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Sylva Campbell. This lady, aged fifty-four years, the mother of nine children, all of whom she has raised respectably, and the widow of Joseph Campbell above referred to, for her tender care of, and daughterly kindness to, this good old man, cannot be sufficiently praised by me. Kind, indulgent and watchful, she is a model of goodness. Mr. Campbell, was for seventy-eight years, and until the close of his life, a member of the Presbyterian church, an upright and consistent Christian, and for seventy-two years was a member of the Masonic Order. During his three years residence in Vermont, deprived as he was, of his sense of seeing, he was but little known to our citizens, and, I am sorry to say, was entirely unknown to me during his lifetime.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. W. Faris, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, and the remains of the aged man were quietly interred in the cemetery this afternoon.

ALLEN DeARMOND of Monroe County, Tennessee—ESTATE

Last Will and Testament. Undated but filed between a preceding document dated 1841 and a subsequent one dated 1844. Probable date is 1843, Monroe County, Tennessee, Wills:

I, Allen Dearmon, being in my right mind and reason, being 57 years of age the 16th day of December next:

First, I bequeath my soul to God who gave it and my body to the dust from whence it came. I wish my body to be buried in some churchyard; as for my property that God has been pleased to bestow on me, I wish all my just debts to be paid. My will is that my wife, Polly Dearmon, enjoy the benefit of all my lands, my negro man Bill, my stock of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep and wagon and all my farming utensils, also my household and kitchen furniture, during her lifetime or widowhood.

If there be more property than she may stand in need of then my will is that the same be sold and out of the proceeds of that sale, my will is that my son, James Dearmon, have one dollar; the balance to be equally divided amongst the balance of my children, including Thompson A. Dearmon, and Allen J. Twomey, J. E., Katharine, Elizabeth, Samuel, Allen Jackson, Sarah, William Richard. My will further is at the death or marriage of my wife, Polly Dearmon, that the aforesaid lands and property remaining be equally divided between Katharine, Elizabeth, Allen J., William R., Sarah and Thompson A. Dearmon, and Allen J. Twomey. My will is that my wife, Polly Dearmon, have all the money and notes that I have on hands at my death for her own use; if there be more than she may need, she may equally divide the same among the eight children aforementioned. My will is that my wife, Polly Dearmon, Allen J. Dearmon, and Peter Twomey be the executors of this my last Will and Testament.

That he resided in Bergen County, New Jersey, until about 57 years ago, since which he has resided in Groton—that Peter VanBuskirk of Ontario County, is the only man living he knows of who can testify to his service—Abel A. Beach and Richmond Temley (?) sign as knowing him, etc., former of Groton, and later of ?—

Affidavit—June 19, 1846, by Peter Van Buskirk of Phelps, Ontario County, New York: He and George Dearman born and brought up together in same town, Harrington, Bergen County, New Jersey—refers to service—much the same as stated by George Dearman—both were sons of farmers—he (Peter VanBuskirk) left New Jersey about 1816.

Affidavit—July 17, 1851, Tompkins County, New York—by Mary Ann Nottingham, aged 54 and Hannah Dearman, aged 38, both of Groton, swear they are the children and heirs at law of George Dearman—that he died Feb. 4, 1850—that he never received a pension—that he then was 85 and upwards—that he was their father—that he left no widow but left 7 children surviving—as follows:

Mary Ann Notingham, aged 54, of Groton
Hannah Dearman, aged 38, of Groton
Sally Maria Flandrav [Flandron?] of New York City
David Dearman of Westchester, New York
George Dearman of Corning, New York
Henry Dearman of Corning, New York
Jane Sutlif of Dryden, Tompkins County

All over 21. They make the affidavit in behalf of themselves and brothers and sisters. Judge Alfred Wells, County Judge of Tompkins County swears as to the facts shown. Abraham Van Buskirk of Phelps appointed attorney to prosecute claim. In 1853, Silvanus Larned and Thomas Morrison, both of Groton swear to George Dearman's character, etc. In 1854, John D. Ackerman, of Hohokus, Bergen County, New Jersey, aged 90 and upwards, swears to knowing George Dearman, and service in war. Mary Ann Notingham, widow, and Hannah Dearman, spinster, petitioned Congress—referred to Committee on Revolutionary Pensions. December 19, 1857.

Affidavit—Nov. 9, 1854, Bergen County, New Jersey, by Stephen Lutkins, aged 86 and upwards—swears to knowing George Dearman, etc. Claim rejected.

GEORGE DeARMENT, Letter to his family in Pennsylvania.

Camp at Vera Cruz, Sept. 18, 1847.

Dear Brothers Not having heard from you for sometime nor having written, I feel some anxiety to know what you are all doing—for my part I am doing something that will at least surprise you—three or four months ago I wished to see Mexico to see and experience the pleasures and pains of a volunteer, companies being organized at that time in the queen city—I with some of my friends joined one of them commanded by Capt. Pugh a young lawyer of some eminence in Cincinnati and withal a fine young fellow which may be said of all our company both officers and men we fancy that we "can't be beat" by anything that has ever been turned out here. To "skip" over a couple of months we land at Brasos Santiago which is nothing but sand but used as a depot for Uncle Sam's stores, no people live here except those who come for the purpose of making money which can be made very easily as mechanics get from 70 to 80 dollars per month, that is, house carpenters, ship carpenters, blacksmiths, and any trade that is carried on here., we stayed here only long enough to unship our provisions and then marched to the mouth of the Rio Grande 9 miles distant remained about a day and took steamboat up the river as far as Matamoras which to us seemed a very ordinary place the houses being built mostly of reeds and a sort of half burnt brick and very low this we understand is the style of Mexican building generally the houses seldom attaining to more than one story in the small towns; the climate agrees with us all very well we have not lost a single man since we left Ohio, our stay here has been one month when we went downstream again for the Brasos there being a bar of sand across the mouth of the Rio Grande which prevents shipping from coming in we crossed that Gulf once more, bound for Vera Cruz to join Genl Scott our trip across sea was rather rough but thanks to good fortune we arrived here safe and sound expecting to be on our march tomorrow and in a fight on the second day's march so that not knowing the vicissitudes of war I may be amongst the slain but of course hope for the best; should I be killed which you can ascertain by writing to Capt. Pugh Queen city guards 4th Regt. Ohio Vol. Hoping to get a letter from you on receipt of this, I remain

Your affectionate brother

JOHN DEARMOND—Last Will and Testament. Knox County, Tennessee, Probate Court, Estate Book 1, p. 296; dated May 21, 1809.

Knox County Court—July Sessions, 1809.

The last will and testament of John Dearmond was produced to Court for probate whereupon Samuel Flenakin and J. Calloway made oath that they saw the John Dearmond sign seal and that they heard him pronounce and declare the same to be his last Will and Testament and that at the time of publishing the same he was of sound and perfect mind and memory to the best of their knowledge and belief, and that they saw Andrew Morris sign his name as a concurring witness, thereto: which will is admitted to record and is in the following words, to wit:

In the name of God amen, this twenty-first day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nine. I, John Dearmond of Knox County and State of Tennessee, being in a weak declining state of body, blessed be God, of sound memory and mind and calling unto mind the mortality of the body and that it is appointed for all men once to die, I do make this my last Will and Testament in the manner and form following, viz: First, I recommend my soul to Almighty God that gave it, and my body to the earth to be buried in a decent Christian manner and my burial at the discretion of my executors and as touching such worldly estate wherewith God hath been pleased to bless me with in this life, I give, bequeath and dispose of in the following manner, to wit:

First I allow all my just debts, funeral charges to be paid, then to my beloved wife, Esther Dearmond, I give and bequeath my mansion house with all my household furniture, also my negro woman Nance, my young sorrel mare, and two cows and calves, one hundred dollars in cash, and a decent maintenance of the land whereon I now live, to be hers and for her natural use, during her natural life, and at her death to be equally divided between my sons, then to my beloved daughter Mary Hewet, I give and bequeath one dollar and fifty cents, then to my beloved daughter Elizabeth Thomson I give and bequeath one dollar and fifty cents. Whereas there is forty pounds coming to me from the estate of John Jones, deceased, which sum I give and bequeath one half of it to the use of the said estate and the other half to the use of the said Elizabeth Thompson. Then to my beloved son, David Flanikin Dearmond, I give and bequeath two hundred and fifty acres of land in Coxes survey at the Muscle Shoals, conveyed from Zachariah Cox to me, No. 11, also the half of a hundred and fifty warrant land in the blue spring valley, then to my beloved son John Dearmond, I give and bequeath two hundred and fifty acres of land in Coxes survey at the Muscle Shoals; conveyed from Zachariah Cox to me, No. 12, also the half of a hundred and fifty warrant land in the blue spring valley—then to my beloved son William Dearmond, I give and bequeath a part of the tract of land where I now live, beginning at the mouth of the creek, running up the channel of said creek above the spring to a locust, back of Richard J. Dearmond's house, then to a sugar tree then a straight course to the back line, then round with the said line including the upper end of said survey, also my old sorrel mare and still, also a part of the same tract of land beginning at a marked white oak, on the bank of the river, at the lower end of my lower bottom field, then a straight line to a beech on the roadside near the ford of the branch, then forty poles up the meander of the branch to a stake, then a straight line to the upper corner of the heirs of John Jones, deceased, where it intersects with my line, then round including the lower end of said survey, also my estate to pay one installment on said land from the present date and no more, then to my beloved son, Richard Johnston Dearmond, I give and bequeath also a part of said land, beginning at a white oak on the river bank, below the end of my lower bottom field, then a straight line to a marked beech on the roadside near the ford of the branch, then up the meander of the branch forty poles to a stake, then a straight line to the upper corner to the heirs of John Jones, deceased, where it intersects with my line, then with a conditional line betwixt him and Thomas Dearmond, a straight line to a chestnut, my corner about thirty poles below the said Thomas's house, then with my line to the conditional line between the said Richard and William Dearmond, then with said conditional line to the mouth of the creek, including the middle of said survey, also my estate to pay one instalment from the present date and no more; then to my beloved son Thomas Dearmond, I give and bequeath a part of the said tract of land beginning at the corner of William and Richard J. Dearmond and the heirs of John Jones, running with Richard J. Dearmond, a straight line to a chestnut, my corner about thirty poles below his house then round with my line to the beginning, for his use during his natural life, and at his decease, to be equally divided between William and Richard J. Dearmond, also a certain cream colored mare and her increase; the balance of my estate either real or personal, I give and bequeath to my beloved son, James Dearmond, William Dearmond and Richard Johnston Dearmond to be equally divided amongst them, and I do hereby ordain, appoint and constitute my beloved son, James Dearmond, William Dearmond and Richard J. Dearmond, to be my sole executors of this, my last will and testament. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal the day and year above written.

JOHN DEARMOND SENIOR, of Knox County, Tenn. Will dated April 18, 1833. Knox County, Tenn. Probate Court Records.

Knoxville—In the name of God, Amen—

I, John Dearmond, Sr. of Knox County, weak in body but of sound and disposing mind and memory, do make, constitute, and ordain this my last Will and Testament.

Item 1st—It is my will that my funeral expenses be first paid out of my property.

Item 2nd—It is my will that all of my just debts be paid.

Item 3rd—I give and bequeath to my son, William Dearmond, Sixty acres of land lying below the creek running up and down the river for compliment, including the old mill seat, not to interfere with the sixty acres of Sally Orr—where she lives. Said William has the right to the bank opposite the mill seat for mill purposes only—a part of the plantation where I now live.

4th item—I give and bequeath to Sally Orr, my daughter, Sixty acres of land where she lives, adjoining William's sixty acres and a dividing line is to be run between Sally Orr and William Dearmond's Land.

5th Item—I give and bequeath to my son, John Dearmond, sixty acres of land beginning at the mouth of the creek below William's mill and running up the river so as to include my dwelling house, and then out up the creek for compliment so that his land lies adjoining Sally Orrs and Wm. Dearmonds on the creek.

6th Item—I give and bequeath to my beloved wife, Ellen, Sixty acres of land, beginning on the river at the corner of John Dearmond Jr's land and running with his line to the back line from the river and then toward Knoxville, and back to the river and down the river to the beginning—forever, to dispose of as She pleases at her death, among the children of her body—the back line mentioned in this bequest is the back line along or towards Knoxville Road from Sally Orrs.

7th Item—I give and bequeath to my two daughters, Ellen Dearmond and Matilda Perry, one hundred and twenty acres, beginning at the corner of my wife's and Ellen's Land on the river and running with her upper line to the back line above where Perry lives on the ridge and thence toward Knoxville so far as a line to the river will include Perry's house and improvements and thence down the river back to the beginning. To be divided equally between them according to value.

8th Item—I give and bequeath to Easter Cunningham, my daughter, fifty acres beginning on the upper corner on the River of Ellen's and Matilda's land and running with their line to the back line of the tract and thence toward Knoxville so far as that a line to the river and down the river to the beginning will include fifty acres.

Item 9—I give and bequeath to my daughter Synthia Davis, a widow, seventy acres of land beginning on the river at the upper corner of Easter Cunningham's portion of land and running with Easter's line to the back line of the whole tract and then to the river and down the river to the beginning.

Item 10—I give and bequeath to Duke Howell, my son-in-law who married my daughter, Betsy Dearmond, one dollar, and to said Howell and Betsy's daughter, Elizabeth, five dollars.

Item 10—I give to Samuel Cunningham's children, Malinda, John and Wm, five dollars each.

Item 11—It is my will that my $\frac{1}{2}$ acre lot in . . . and all my personal property of every kind whatsoever be sold by my executors except a baldfaced bay mare that I give to my daughter, Matilda, and a young dun mare that I give to my daughter, Ellen, and the proceeds, after paying my just debts, to be divided equally amongst my children.

It is my will and I hereby appoint Samuel Flanagin and Michael Davis, Esq. and Allen Perry, my executors, of this my last will and testament.

Witness my hand and seal this 18th April 1833.

DR. JOSEPH CHAPMAN DEYARMON—FAMILY PAPERS.

From a transcription by Miss Jessie E. Pocock, Medina, Ohio, March 22, 1933.

A receipt from the Wayne County Treasurer, issued to Dr. Joseph Deyarmon for 6 dollars, eighteen cents and 7 mills for taxes for the year 1842, being dated Dec. 30, 1842, and covering 98 acres, one carriage, three horses, and six head of cattle.

A drawing of the tract of land purchased by Dr. Joseph C. Deyarmon from his father, Joseph Deyarmon; also the original agreement of the transaction bearing both their signatures and also those of Susanna and Mary S. Deyarmon, covering on land located in Halifax township, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, dated November 3, 1814, the sale price being $1500, and consisting of 125 acres. Dr. Joseph Chapman Deyarmon agreed to pay $750 in "May next" and $100 yearly on the first day of April until the entire sum of $1500 had been paid. The two families were to live together as they had in the past for six years from date, or longer if either parent survived. According to the survey, the plot apparently left to Joseph Deyarmon after this sale contained 22 acres, 3 rods and 26 perches.

The subscribers, physicians of the borough of Harrisburg, certify, that, we have been acquainted with Dr. Dearmond for several years during which period he sustains an unexceptional character for morality and integrity. And as a practitioner of medicine, he prosecuted his profession with a fidelity and success, and as such we consider him entitled to public confidence.

KING DeARMOND OF BUTLER COUNTY, OHIO. Last Will and Testament. November 8, 1844

In the name of God Amen: I, King Dearmond of the County of Butler in the State of Ohio; being of sound and disposing mind, memory and understanding, considering the certainty of death and the uncertainty of the time thereof and being desirous to settle my worldly affairs that I may be better prepared to quit this world whenever it shall please God to call me hence, do therefore make and publish this, my last will and testament in manner and form following, that is to Say—

FIRST and principally I commit my Soul into the hands of the Almighty God and my body to the earth to be decently buried and after my debts and funeral charges are paid, I devise and bequeath as follows:—

ITEM I give and bequeath to my granddaughter Hannah Jane Dearmond, daughter of my son Thomas Dearmond, deceased, the sum of four hundred dollars in full of the legacy of fifty dollars received from the Administrators of my Father, for her Father now deceased, and also in full of share and proportion of my estate; that is, I intend this sum of four hundred dollars to include the said legacy of fifty dollars and all interest that may have accrued thereon: to revert in case she dies without issue —

ITEM I give and devise to my Son Samuel Dearmond the sum of one thousand and fifty dollars out of my personal estate —

ITEM To my daughter Margaret Otto I give and devise the sum of nine hundred dollars out of my personal estate.

ITEM To my daughter Mary Stephens I give and devise the sum of nine hundred dollars out of my personal estate.

ITEM To my son King Dearmond . . . I give and bequeath the south half of the north-west quarter of section No. 15 of Township No. 3 of range 1 East of the Meridian line drawn from the mouth of the great Miami river, to have, to hold, to lease and his heirs forever —

ITEM To my daughter Elizabeth Dearmond, I give and devise the Sum of nine hundred dollars out of my personal Estate —

ITEM To my daughter Esther Dearmond I give and devise the sum of nine hundred dollars out of my personal Estate —

ITEM To my Son Alexander Dearmond I give and bequeath the north half of the north-west quarter of Section No. 15 of Township No. 3 of range No. 1, east of the meridian line drawn from the mouth of the great Miami river, to have and to hold, to lease and his heirs forever —

Provided that if said funds should not be sufficient to pay my children, that is those of money legacies . . . be equally divided among them according to the . . . and provided also that if my said residuary funds should prove more than sufficient to pay the said legacies, then I will that all the surplus be equally divided amongst all of my children—Viz: Samuel, Margaret, Mary, King, Elizabeth, Esther and Alexander, share and share alike.

ITEM It is my will that my executors hereinafter named sell eighty acres of land which I hold in Dark County, Ohio.—being the west half of the northeast quarter of section No. 30—Township No. 15 or range No. 2 east, at the expiration of one year next ensuing my decease, upon the following terms, one third in hand, one third in one year and one third in two years, with interest on the deferred payments to be secured by mortgage or good freehold security, unless sold in my lifetime.

LASTLY — I do hereby constitute and appoint my son Samuel Dearmond and John C. Jones executors of this my last will and testament hereby authorizing them to sell the aforesaid eighty acres of land and other moveable property and upon such sale, good and sufficient deed for the conveyance of said land to make, execute and deliver.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I, King DeArmond have to this my last will and Testament, consisting of one sheet of paper, set my hand and seal the thirty-first day of August in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty.

ROBERT K. DEARMOND OF NORTHUMBERLAND COUNTY, PENNA. Last Will and Testament.

Northumberland County, Penna. Register of Wills; probated July 29, 1826.

In the name of God, Amen. I, Robert K. DeArmond, of Turbut Township, Northumberland County and State of Pennsylvania, being sick in body, but at present, through the mercies of the divine Redeemer, in the due exercise of my reason and judgment; yet uncertain how soon I may be called to try the realities of the eternal world and being desirous that after my decease the property, which it has pleased God to loan unto me, may be disposed of to his glory and the good of the persons hereinafter named; do make and declare the following, to be my last will and Testament, viz:

First, when I die let my body be laid by the body of my dear departed wife and let decent plain head and foot stones be erected to mark the place where we lie.

Secondly. Let my personal property be sold immediately, and the proceeds be applied to the payment of my funeral expenses and my other debts.

Thirdly. Let my real estate be sold within three years after my decease, but as soon as the prudence and discretion of my Executors (herein after to be named) shall direct and the proceeds be disposed of as follows, viz:

Fourthly: Let there be given To my worthy nephew Thomas Dearmond, son of my late brother Samuel one hundred Dollars. To his sister Margaret the like sum of one hundred dollars. To my nephew Robert, son of my brother Alexander, four hundred dollars. To my nephew Robert, son of my brother King, four hundred dollars; or if my said brother has no son named Robert, then to his son Thomas, one hundred dollars.

To my faithful and worthy young friend, Andrew Straub at present living with me, five hundred dollars.

To the Congregation worshipping in Penuel Church, of which I am a member, two hundred dollars; the residue of which, after paying any arrears of pew-rent that may be due at my decease, to constitute a fund in the hands of my Executors, the interest of which is to aid in paying the salary of the minister of said Church; And in case said congregation should dissolve, the said fund to go to the before mentioned legatees in the proportion of the sum specified.

All these bequests to remain in the hands of my Executors, until the legatees severally come of age and then to be paid over to them or their legal representatives, with the interest that shall have accrued thereon; except Andrew Straubs which shall go immediately into the hands of his Guardian.

Fifthly. For the execution of this my Will I do hereby appoint my very worthy and trusty friend John Watson, Dan Calwell and William H. Sanderson.

Sixthly. If my property should produce more or less than the amount of the above named sums let the excess or deficiency be divided, proportionately to them.

IN TESTIMONY of all which I have hereunto set my hand & Seal this twenty sixth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty six.

THOMAS FLENNIKEN D'ARMOND of Clinton, La. Newspaper article.

From Southern Watchman, Clinton, La., April 11, 1890.

MEMORIAL TO CAPTAIN THOMAS F. D'ARMOND, one of the heroes of 8th Ward.

The subject of this short memoir is Captain Thomas F. D'Armond, a son of the late Captain Samuel D'Armond who resided many years previous to the War of 1812 on the borders of the Comite River, East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana, near Mississippi line of demarcation. Said Captain Samuel D'Armond was a planter by occupation. He raised up to majority four sons, filled with patriotism like every other Tennessean. When General Jackson called for military aid in 1812, said Captain D'Armond gathered his four sons, including himself, and enlisted under Captain L. C. Griffeths' Horse Company, commanded by Colonel Hinds. In the company with O. Harrells and C. Chaney's, all of this Parish, and many others who soon joined Jackson's army at New Orleans, doing active military services until the close of the campaign in 1815, when the war closed.

Our hero (Captain Thomas F. D'Armond) then returned home. He went to his little home, a poor man with a small family, wife and one child. He was, however, the owner of a rich tract of land four miles east of Clinton, Louisiana. . . Without a dollar, here in his primary manhood, stamped on his verdant heart were the symbols of truth, virtue, honesty, fair-dealing, frugality and industry. He possessed no other guide but a practical application to his own affairs. He soon began to amply reap the rewards of honest and industrious earnings as the first savings of an honorable farmer. In a few years, being the favorite of fortune and success, [he] was placed in the front ranks of the distinguished planters of the Parish for opulence and influence in his ward that gave a magnetism to the progress of civilization and material growth whose valuable influences are felt to this day.

In addition to the aforesaid mentioned graces that make up this good and brave man and true citizen, he was a kind husband, father and master; his generous doors were thrown open to aid the wanting. In after life he became a devoted Christian, a member of the Baptist denomination and associated and belonged to the Hephzibah church, 8th Ward. His wife was the mother of four children, two sons and two daughters. He reared them to the age of majority and witnessed their marriages in his own parish. He maintained all the vigor of his fruitful and well-balanced mind until the day of his death that occurred in his 70th year. He died at his old homestead in 1865, which was drained of its wealth by the rude hand of a cruel war. His two sons are still living, monuments that honorably perpetuate the memory of their devoted father. Our old time friend and fellow citizen, the prince of merchants for more than half a century, J. G. D'Armond of Clinton, still remains the polished shaft to represent the hero of 1812.

John M. Roberts

THOMAS HENRY D'ARMOND of Johnson City, Tennessee. An address made by him before a meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Johnson City, Tennessee, date not recorded:

At the request of the UNITED DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY, I have compiled a graphic history of my War Record, from April 30, 1861, to July 4, 1865. I have omitted many incidents I did not deem essential, and have endeavored to make the statement as brief as possible.

On the 30th day of April, 1861, the Hunter Rifles, a volunteer company—the first company to enlist in the Confederate States cause—was organized, 175 strong, when young men from 16 up to 30 years old, assembled at the Clinton depot, and departed for New Orleans, Louisiana. The scenes that took place at that depot that morning beggar description. Hundreds of mothers, wives, sisters and friends were there to say farewell, with an affectionate kiss, and “God be with you till we meet again”.

When the company arrived at New Orleans, we marched through the city, thousands on the streets and sidewalks cheering us with their smiles. We camped several days in a cotton press. From this cotton press, we marched to the Metone[?] Race Course. We then learned that the company had to be divided into two companies, to be received into a regiment after the division. The Companies were named Company A and Company B, Hunter Rifles, after the name of our captain, S. E. Hunter. I enrolled in Company B, Hunter Rifles, being composed of the youngest men; and the companies elected their respective officers.

After remaining at this camp for several weeks, learning how to do good duty, we were sent to Camp Moore, ninety miles from New Orleans, on the New Orleans and Jackson Railroad, and there sworn into the regular Confederate army for one year, and put into the Fourth Regiment of Louisiana Infantry. After the organization, the regiment remained at this camp for sometime; then was sent to guard the Mississippi borders, embracing many small towns, including Ship Island. We remained at these designated places for several months, and then were sent to northern Louisiana, where it was reported that the Federal troops were contemplating capturing two important points—Brasher City and Borwick Bay. After our stay here for several months, orders were received for the regiment to move at a moment's notice to the front. After the necessary preparations, the regiment was very soon on the cars, destination unknown till we arrived at Jackson, Tennessee, and our colonel reported to General Beauregard, who was organizing an army at Corinth, Mississippi.

While camped at Jackson, Tennessee, many letters were received from devoted parents, sisters and friends. What memories these letters call up, and how far they go toward moving the arm of the soldier boys; inspiring, and adding hope and cheers to the feelings of despondency.

The members of the regiment now began to realize that they would soon stand by the side of those who wore the gray to defend the colors adopted by the Confederate government.

On March 13, 1861, orders were issued for immediate move from Jackson, Tennessee: all supplies and baggage were packed and stored for safe keeping. This was the second time the regiment was compelled to reduce their baggage.

While at the depot waiting for cars to be hauled to our destination, many ladies and friends were at the depot to say goodbye. One in particular claimed my attention; her stooping figure, tottering gait and silver hair impelled me to her side. Smiling sweetly, her little basket full of something to eat was tendered to me, with a “God bless you”. Willingly she had given her only son to the Cause of Liberty. He had fallen at Fort Donelson. The train was now ready to move, and I left her to secure a seat in the car.

Soon the regiment moved forward to Little Bethel. It had been raining in torrents during the day. The boys left the cars and bivouaced for the night, selecting places and raking up wet leaves upon the wet ground to spread their blankets for a night's rest. I located a large tree; my head covered with my blanket, to protect my body from the freezing March winds.

After remaining five days, the regiment moved to Corinth, Mississippi, being a point of great importance, and troops arriving every day from all points.

Sunday, March 30th, General Beauregard made his tour of inspection, saying very soon we would have the opportunity of driving the enemy from his den. His appearance was the picture of generosity, wisdom and heroism. April 1st, the regiment marched to Monterey, fourteen miles from Corinth, followed by the balance of the brigade and the army. April 3rd, the Confederate army was in proper position. April 4th, rations were issued and cooked; guns cleaned up, ready for business. At four o'clock, p.m., the Fourth Louisiana marched towards Shiloh. On the right of the regiment, the Washington artillery arrived and halted, and great were the shouts of those gallant men when they recognized the Fourth Louisiana regiment. At eight o'clock, p.m., the march was resumed. Rain began to fall in torrents: the night was very dark; the roads almost impassable for man or beast; the boys slipping and falling. Yet they plodded on without a murmur. At midnight the regiment halted; made fires to dry their wet clothes. Early morning, April 5th, the march continued. At eleven a.m. we heard artillery firing in our front. The Fourth regiment was halted and formed; knapsacks deposited in an old field. General Gibson's brigade, the Fourth being a part, was moved in advance of the division, the same rule being observed by all the troops.

BATTLE OF SHILOH

Before daylight on Sunday morning, the 6th of April, the troops were ordered into line. The whole army was moving forward in line of battle. On our right we heard musketry. This we ascertained to be the tactician Hardee. A few moments after the firing increased, both on the right and left. So far as the eye could see, were the Southern troops, dressed in various uniforms. Their bright bayonets and muskets gleamed beautifully in the sunlight. How grand was the opening of the conflict! But how sad to both armies was its close. The Fourth Louisiana was held in reserve, which produced great dissatisfaction, fearing the Fourth would fail to participate in the conflict. But only a few moments, and the regiment was ordered to support the Washington artillery, which had taken position upon an eminence, and was shelling the Federal line. The enemy soon began to respond to the Crescent City boys, with such precision as to astonish us, believing artillery duels were only guesswork. Their shots made some excitement among the boys—cutting off tree tops over our heads. Shell, shot and grape came hissing and howling through the woods, wounding several of the boys. Very soon the artillery moved to another position of the field. The Fourth Louisiana moved on in quick time, and, by orders, charged the enemy and pursued them some distance, and found the Federal camp deserted. Loose horses, mules, deserted wagons, ambulances, commissary, quartermaster and other stores were found in abundance. The boys, after this charge on the Yankee line, began searching for booty, and discovered the Federal troops had left their tents, leaving hot biscuits and smoking coffee and fried ham on their tables. Here again the boys were annoyed by shells from Federal batteries, and often compelled us to hug the ground. "Stand up, boys; damn it, let 'em shoot," observed our unflinching Colonel Allen, of the Fourth Louisiana. The boys resolved to keep an eye on "Old Wabash," as he was familiarly termed.

Very soon another shell came hissing through the air and exploded near him. The colonel apparently did not notice it, but I felt that every hair on my head assumed a standing attitude.

A few moments later the Fourth moved forward, halted, and was fired into from the rear by a Tennessee regiment, who had first come up. By this unhappy circumstance, several of the members of the regiment were killed and wounded. Again orders were received, and we moved to support the Washington artillery. Several of our horses were killed, and others had their harness shot completely off—and many left without riders; and my company suffered likewise, together with many others from other companies of the Fourth regiment.

After a few moments, we again moved, facing a dense forest of saplings and fallen trees, almost impassable; but the boys were ready and in trim for action. The order to fix bayonets sounded along the line. The order was given to advance, and the boys moved cheerfully forward, and, passing several hundred yards, the foe was found; and the first reception of his presence was from a liquid flame of death poured upon our front and flank. Taken thus by surprise, the regiment thrown against a concealed foe over three times our number, the regiment wavered for a moment; but, regaining their fortitude, pressed forward and returned the fire of the enemy, who were scarcely fifty yards from us. So terrific had been the fire poured upon the members of the regiment, that our ranks were terribly thinned in a few seconds. The dead, dying and wounded were lying profusely on the ground, over which we had passed.

I am slow to believe that a more deadly fire was ever opened upon a body of men during the sad bloody revolution which was closed.

The regiment was withdrawn, again formed and made a flank move; charged and drove the Federal troops from their entrenched and hidden places. It was now late in the evening; the sun was descending beneath the trees of the west. Our army had won the field at all points, the enemy retreating in great disorder, seeking protection under cover of their gunboats in the Tennessee river. The victory was ours; yet no rejoicing. The tidings had reached the troops that our great General Albert Sidney Johnston had fallen, leading his soldier boys charging the enemy.

What soldier could rejoice over this victory, when such a patriotic hero had sacrificed his life in defense of his duty—the Lost Cause? To say nothing of that struggle; some soldier boy had lost either a brother, relative, friend or companion, sufficient to produce a sad depression of the heart.

As the last rays of the declining sun were about to disappear, almost exhausted with the fatigue of the day, together with two days of marching and from want of sleep, I stepped from my position in line, and strolled over the field of recent carnage. To picture its horrors is impossible. I continued my stroll over the bloody field of Shiloh, and gazed as I did upon the maimed, bleeding and mangled bodies of dead and dying fellow creatures, who lay stretched inanimate on the ground; and upon the brink of every rivulet, where in the agonies of death, they had crawled to bathe their limbs or moisten their parched lips; in addition to listening to the moans of death and shrieks of those whose glazed eyes were turned imploringly to Heaven. Never will the picture of these dead and suffering heroes (for heroes they were) pass from my mind's eye. During the day, when the fighting was terrible, the woods were full of rabbits, running in every direction; and to add to the amusement, a hound dog joined our regiment and gave chase to these frightened animals. They seemed to have lost all judgment, and made their way through and by the boys' feet, with the hound dog close on their heels seeking safety in the rear.

April 7th, the second day's engagement:—The rain suddenly ceased. No sooner had it become sufficiently light than the conflict was renewed; the enemy having been reinforced during the night, by General Buell, with 30,000 fresh troops; and he hurled his heavy columns against our slender line with great effect. Had the Confederate troops a few more hours of daylight on the 6th, we would have completed the rout, and secured several more thousands of prisoners, and the best army the United States then had would have been captured, and General Grant would not have been known to history from a military viewpoint, provided he did not seek shelter on one of his transports, and say goodbye to his disorganized army.

The heavy rains on the evening of April 4th retarded the march of the Confederate Army, and it was no fault of Generals Johnston and Beauregard. Our little army contended manfully for every inch of ground from an early hour in the morning, of the 7th, until three o'clock in the evening. The fatigue of a six days' march, and two days' engagement over the worst roads imaginable, rendered the Confederate boys unable to continue fighting. Falling back slowly, our flanks and rear protected by that gallant General Breckenridge and his Kentucky heroes, the Confederate army continued to retreat until it arrived at Corinth, Mississippi, when General Beauregard issued his patriotic address to the boys.

After arriving at Corinth, Mississippi, the roll was called of the different companies; and a deep sadness reigned in every bosom at the large number who failed to answer to their names. The captain of my company was killed; the first and second lieutenants wounded, and died on the morning of May 3rd.

The Fourth regiment was ordered to deliver their guns and all equipment over to the ordnance sergeant. Rations were issued, and orders given to depart at an early hour on the following morning, May 6th, to Vicksburg, Mississippi, and remain sometime doing guard duty.

On May 15th the regiment moved to a station, Edwards Depot, on the Jackson & Vicksburg Railroad, twelve miles from Vicksburg, for the purpose of reorganization. During the battle of Shiloh, many of the commissioned and non-commissioned officers were either killed or wounded or captured. Elections were held in all companies, and the necessary officers elected. The writer was elected first lieutenant, Company B, Hunter Rifles.

After the organization of the regiments, they returned to Vicksburg for duty. I deem it useless to say anything about the regiment's stay at Vicksburg, as the boys did nothing but picket duty, up and down the river. Both fleets of the enemy were anchored, above and below the city, and continued to throw shells into the city during the day and night. It was indeed a grand sight to behold and follow with the eye, the fiery specks which resembled as many stars, as they arose from the mortar boats, and ascending to a certain height, descended to the earth and exploded; yet, strange to say, only a few buildings were damaged. But to witness the hurry and alarm of the women, young and old, and listen to the heartrending shrieks of the children, was sufficient to move the heart of any man. Thus driven from their homes, in which their fathers, husbands or sons had left them in security but a few months previous, then to be thrown upon the cold charity of the world, without the strong arm of man to provide for and protect them, they deserved heartfelt sympathy and pity.

At an early hour on the morning of July 26th, orders were issued; three days rations were cooked; the regiment was crowded into box cars, leaving all the baggage, tents, cooking utensils, etc., behind. The train hurried to Jackson, Mississippi, from there to Camp Moore, Louisiana. After reviewing the troops, the march was resumed, headed for Baton Rouge, Louisiana, the capital of the state. Commanded by Major General John C. Breckenridge, our little force of 2500 was cheerful. This little army was composed of Kentucky and Louisiana troops, who were anxious to chastise the insolent foe, and drive them, if possible, into the Gulf of Mexico. During the march from Camp Moore to our destination, the heat was fearful. The extreme hot days of August and the dust were having a telling effect on the boys; and many had to fall out of the ranks and seek shelter under the shade of trees.

The army arrived near Baton Rouge, August 5th; formed a line of battle; moved forward, and the entire battle line made a charge, driving the enemy to the banks of the river. This engagement was hot and severe. The casualties in the Fourth were few, but Col. Allen of the Fourth fell early in the action, severely wounded in both legs by a charge of grapeshot. During this battle the general commanding the Federal troops was killed. During the night the enemy evacuated the town, by taking transports for New Orleans, Louisiana.

For many weeks the regiment marched to many points from Baton Rouge, engaged in placing heavy batteries upon the river banks. The gunboats of the enemy moved up and down the river, their port holes open, and the muzzles of their guns protruding. The enemy's fleet opened a terrific bombardment upon Baton Rouge and our batteries, which continued all night. The Fourth regiment was in the trenches, anticipating an attack by land forces, but none appeared.

CAMPAIGN IN MISSISSIPPI

April 30th, the regiment was ordered to move at once to Jackson, Mississippi, to reinforce General J. E. Johnston; the Federal troops marching from Vicksburg to attack the Confederate troops at Jackson. The regiment marched over one hundred miles before arriving at Jackson. Many of the Confederate soldiers, destitute of shoes, tramped barefooted, and continued to march and re-march until June 30th. July 3rd, the Confederate army marched from Jackson, and, if possible, to reach the rear of General Grant's army and relieve the army in Vicksburg. Late in the evening of July 3rd, the army arrived and camped at what was named Bird Song Pond in the woods. Very soon, I never heard so many bells at one time in my life—all sizes and sounds—sheep and cowbells and horse bells. At first we supposed the people of that neighborhood were coming to give us a grand serenade, and we were all peeping through the woods, fully expecting to see the people coming; but to our surprise the caravan was composed of goats, sheep, cattle and horses, coming to their accustomed place to quench their thirst; and each one would wade into this celebrated pond, surrounded by high hills, and to further add to this motley crew, ducks and geese were prominent, and would take a swim and an extended bath. From the edges of this pond, two and a half to three feet, a green scum extended, which I suppose was produced by the frequent visits as above referred to.

Now the problem was presented to the boys, how to get water drinkable. This matter was very soon solved by going into the woods and cutting a long pole, confine our canteens to the end of said pole, with the cork out, and reach the pole as far as possible, and sink as near the bottom as possible, until the canteen was full; bring it to the surface and haul it to the bank. The water was clear and cool, but to the eye the general appearance of this water was horrible. Knowing this water our only opportunity, we had to secure water to drink, and for other purposes. The army remained here only a short time. Couriers arrived during the night of July 4th, stating Vicksburg had fallen, and the news spread through the army. Orders were issued to return to Jackson, Mississippi, with instructions to the sappers and miners to drain all ponds, fill up cisterns, etc. General Sherman, following closely on the heels of our retreat, had many skirmishes with our rearguard.

On July 9th, General Joseph E. Johnston's small army arrived at Jackson, and took its position in the trenches; not sufficient to stand a severe assault, and might easily have been scaled or battered down.

July 10th the Fourth regiment was ordered out as skirmishers to drive the enemy's sharp shooters from a position opposite our front. Company B, Hunters Rifles, of which I was in command, deployed and marched forward and held the enemy in check. Brisk firing ensued, and we captured three or four Federals. During the night we could hear the moving of artillery, and the braying of mules. On the morning of July 11th, the firing was resumed, and continued till late in the evening. The Fourth regiment advanced and drove the enemy before them, burning the houses behind, in which they had sheltered themselves. Grape and shells from the enemy's batteries poured upon us. In the engagement, a few of the boys were wounded. We discovered the enemy had been reinforced, and we permitted them to come within a few yards of our position. We opened a liquid flame of death upon them, and forced them to a hasty retreat; in this engagement, two hundred and fifty prisoners, three battle flags and a large amount of arms fell into our possession, and 100 were left on the field.

On the morning of the 14th, a flag of truce was sent by General Sherman to General Johnston; and from two o'clock p.m. until 4:40, hostilities were discontinued by agreement, and the dead buried. During the existence of the truce, some of the boys passed over the ground where the Federals had fallen in their charge upon our works. The civilian who has never passed over a battlefield where the head had been exposed to the scorching sun for many hours, cannot picture its horrors. The mother would utterly fail in the recognition of her son, to whom she had given birth and over whom she had watched so long and devotedly. Swelled to double their natural proportions, and changed to the hue of the African, recognition would be impossible. Will defer mention of the mode of burial of the dead bodies.

At 4:30 a single piece of artillery was fired by the enemy, as a signal for the renewal of hostilities. Those only who have heard the constant report of artillery and the sharp crack of a thousand rifles can appreciate a few hours of cessation. To the soldier, ragged, sunburned, rough and in a demoralized condition, a few moments' rest reminds him of something more than earthly.

On the 14th another attack was made and we repulsed the enemy with heavy loss.

On the 16th the ammunition train crossed the Pearl River. The army moved the same night. This retreat from Jackson to Meridian, Mississippi, consisted of retreating and fighting, marching day and night, in the middle of the summer, frequently drenched with continued rain, and without tents to shelter them at night; many of the Confederate soldiers barefooted, and rations very limited. This retreat was similar to the one from Big Black River, where the enemy had almost surrounded General Johnston's little army; but he displayed great generalship, saved his army and won the confidence of the Confederate boys.

The surrender of Vicksburg and Port Hudson, and this retreat from Jackson produced great dissatisfaction, especially among those remaining at home and hiding out in the bushes. Their criticisms were severe and were calculated to blast our cause, in which event the Angels of Heaven might have conscientiously engaged.

On the 30th of August, the Fourth regiment was transferred to Mobile, Alabama; and after remaining there for sometime, marched from point to point, including Fort Morgan, which was erected in 1833. From here the brigade was sent in great haste to join General Bragg's army, then contesting every inch of ground with General Grant, on Missionary Ridge. The brigade arrived at Dalton, Georgia; finding the Confederates falling back, the trains loaded with the wounded soldiers from the fields of great battle, the brigade remained a short time, and returned to Mobile, Alabama.

SECOND CAMPAIGN IN MISSISSIPPI

The stay in Mobile was only a few days. Order was given to join General Loring's Confederate troops, at Meridian, Mississippi, who was retreating, hardpressed by the Federal troops, commanded by General Sherman. The regiment joined the Confederate troops, and had many severe battles, driving the enemy back with considerable loss, and checked their further advance forty-eight hours. The Confederate soldiers marched over fifty-six miles, and subsisted on half a pound of bacon and a pound of bread. Yet no grumbling or straggling. Very soon the regiment returned to Mobile, Alabama.

The patriotic ladies of that city presented a beautiful silk flag to the regiment, and inscribed upon it were the names of those fields the regiment had trodden. It was a sad moment, to give up the old one, under which so many of our noble brave boys had yielded up their young lives defending the lost cause, and calling to mind the many hard contested victories which were ours. The boys honored and prized the old tattered flag.

The regiment was ordered to a point on the Alabama coast, Bon Secour. We passed a ship engaged in running the blockade, from whose peak the flag of Great Britain waved to the breeze; this emblem rendered illustrious upon the land and sea by those master spirits, Wellington and Nelson, and called to mind the exalted position once occupied by the United States in the eyes of the world.

On the 23rd of May, 1864, orders were received, and we were ordered to join the army of General J. E. Johnston, who was confronting the enemy to save Atlanta, Georgia. The different regiments assembled, forming the brigade, under General Quarles, and very soon was on trains, destination, the army of General Johnston. Leaving the cars at Marietta, Georgia; and then the tramp for New Hope Church, distant some eighteen miles was begun. During this march, hungry and fatigued, not a moment's rest was taken. The knowledge that General Johnston was in need of reinforcements was sufficient cause and incentive for these gallant soldiers from Louisiana and Tennessee. As we approached nearer, the report of artillery was heard, which told of the presence of the enemy. About daylight on the morning of the 27th, the brigade arrived near the entrenchments at New Hope Church. The brigade was placed in the rear as reserves. A few moments before five o'clock, p.m., General Hood ordered the brigade double quick to support General Cleburne's division, the enemy making an effort to turn our right flank. To accomplish this, the brigade had to pass over three miles of ground. Reaching the gap made by the enemy, the Fourth Louisiana, commanded by Colonel Hunter, formerly our captain, advanced and drove the enemy from near our trenches and past their own trenches, and filled up the gap. It was dark; and during the charge several of our regiment were wounded.

The following morning, a large number of the enemy was found dead on the ground. To advance upon an enemy whose force and position is unknown, in the darkness of night, with only the bright flash of the rifle, and to designate their locality, is not very pleasant, and sufficient to cause the stoutest heart to quail.

During this charge I lost my watch, but wrote a notice of same and posted it on the door of New Hope Church, giving my name, rank, regiment and brigade, and description of the watch. I never heard anything of my watch until the army had retreated and arrived at Atlanta, during the month of August, when the colonel of a Tennessee regiment, a personal friend of Colonel Hunter, of the Fourth, sent word, and I was requested to go to the colonel of a Tennessee regiment which I did; and, after the usual preliminaries, the colonel was satisfied that the watch was my property, and handed me the package, neatly done up, and with the notice attached. I state this to show that many of the soldiers had not forgotten their early training by a devoted mother.

After this engagement, the brigade tramped to support weak places in the line of the army. The feelings of the boys at this period, as they stood face to face and in close proximity to the enemy and expecting to be led to them, caused them to yearn for the clash of steel and the smoke of battle; a desire to chastise an invading foe led them to forget the chances of battle. The soldiers of the army of Tennessee had become familiar with blood and carnage. Many of their dearest relatives and friends had fallen at their side, and their homes had been despoiled; dear ones insulted, and many of their compatriots were confined in Northern prisons. In the hour of combat they were firm and adamant. Half clothed, half-fed and unpaid, they did not grumble; although they left their footprints, marked in blood upon the ground, they did not fail to march and face cannon, bayonets, breastworks and superior numbers: these did not deter them in an assault. Great Heavens! what fiend, save the inglorious Pollard, would-be historian, could rise to brand with infamy such heroes as the soldiers of the late Confederate army.

When our army arrived at Kennesaw Mountain, we had a battery of artillery on top of this mountain, shelling the enemy marching on the different roads approaching our army. The writer received that morning from his girl in Louisiana, two beautiful blue linen shirts; and putting them carefully under my arm, I decided I would climb this mountain and take a view of this grand sight. The shells from our battery were very destructive to the Federal troops. Very soon the Federal artillery came near, and the second shot put our battery out of commission. The Federal artillery was shelling our troops, treetops and limbs were falling plentifully. When I returned to the regiment, I discovered that my shirts were missing. My grief was great. I at once retraced my steps and again ascended the mountain, taking my chances with falling treetops, limbs, etc., to recover my valuable loss; but disappointment was the result.

Orders were received, transferring the Fourth regiment to General Gibson's Louisiana brigade. This transfer was opposed by the boys of the Fourth regiment, for the reason that the Louisiana boys had been associated with the Tennessee boys, marching and fighting side by side, which had created a devotion and an attachment for each other.

AT ATLANTA, GEORGIA

When both armies arrived at Atlanta, Georgia, commanded respectively by General Johnston and General Sherman, hostilities in a measure became quiet. Occasionally some excitement on picket or skirmish lines. The troops of both armies became rather sociable; and after details were posted, relieving those on duty at eight p.m., the guards of the Federal troops would hallo, saying, "Johnnie, meet us halfway and bring some tobacco; we have the hard tack and bacon!" The invitation was readily accepted. The Confederate soldiers had the tobacco and the Federal soldiers had the rations. This mutual agreement extended on the dividing lines for sometime, and both who wore the blue and the gray enjoyed their few moments of pleasant conversation. When parting, each one would say, "Shoot high the next day." Another reason, the soldiers of both armies believed, was to give the officers the opportunity to take an inventory of the shattered ranks of the different companies and regiments, etc., and the recognition of the same.

During this period of inactivity, Mr. Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate government, placed himself in correspondence with General Johnston, anxious to learn his future plans; but General Johnston's reply was not satisfactory. Yet Mr. Davis had implicit confidence in General Johnston, and recognized him as having few equals and no superior as a general commanding a Confederate army. The great trouble was the pressure brought to bear on Mr. Davis by the senators and representatives in Congress from Georgia, together with many of the most prominent citizens, all calling on Mr. Davis at his office every day, to ascertain from General Johnston his future intentions. The result was, General Johnston was relieved of the command of the army, and General J. B. Hood was appointed as General Johnston's successor. I assure you the removal of General Johnston produced great dissatisfaction with both the officers and the Confederate troops. We all loved General Johnston, and when he was relieved of the command it created sad feelings and discouragement in the Confederate army, which was never removed during the last days of the lost cause.

After the Civil War, I fortunately had an extended conversation with Mr. Davis, on a steamboat, going to New Orleans, and he gave me the information above stated.

July 27, 1864, the Fourth Louisiana was detailed to relieve those on the skirmish line. The writer and another officer were in command of the line. The enemy charged, supported by heavy forces; the regiment checked their charge, killing and wounding many, but we were forced to retire. The second lieutenant of my company was captured, but escaped by knocking down the Federal officer with a pine knot. The next morning was a bloody epoch. At daylight part of the army marched, and very soon faced the enemy in their fortified works. During this move we were exposed to the sharpshooters, concealed, and many of our troops yielded up their lives in defense of home and country. Our lines adjusted, we made the charge, but failed to drive them from their breastworks. The killed, wounded and captured were heavy. The writer was in command of his company, 37 for duty in the ranks; after this battle, the roll was called, and 17 were missing. Imagine the great grief of those who escaped death or wounds, when they gathered around their camp fires, referring to their dead companions, companies without an officer and without a command.

July 29th: I will omit particulars of the move of part of the army from Atlanta, Ga., to a small town named Jonesboro, Georgia. The line of the troops was arranged; the orders to charge the fortifications of the enemy, strongly supported by 304 lines of battle in their rear. The loss to the Confederate soldiers was terrible; slaughter pens not equalling the casualties of this battle. Fifty percent would not cover the loss of the Fourth Louisiana regiment. Ten men in my company, and every man killed, wounded or captured; only one escaping, and he was wounded; a fellow named Joe Noble.

The Confederate troops fell back, the men scattered and without officers, and coming to the writer they were anxious to know what to do. I gave the order to join my noble company. After the close of the war I met some who were in that battle, and they would repeat that order I had given at Jonesboro, Georgia, after the shattered ranks of the Confederate troops and the remnants were gathered together and marched back to Atlanta.

TENNESSEE CAMPAIGN

After the disastrous and bloody repulse of the Confederate troops of July 28th, and August 31st, at Jonesboro, Ga., General Hood organized the shattered Confederate troops and headed for Nashville, Tennessee. I will omit the struggles and fatigue of this wild goose march, only one. The Fourth regiment was detailed to capture a regiment of Federal troops nearby. We surprised the enemy; they made a hasty retreat; in numbers they were three times as many as the Fourth. They left large quantities of commissary stores. Tired and jaded as we were, we appropriated every ounce, not leaving anything behind. The natural conclusion is, every man was his own commissary.

The march continued through mud and rain, until the army arrived at Columbia, Tennessee. This town was occupied by Federal troops. Doubtless you remember the Federal troops escaped and made a hurried retreat to Franklin, Tennessee. I will not relate the slaughter of the Confederate generals and troops at this place. The Federal troops fell back to Nashville, Tenn., followed by the Confederate army, and remained there several days, building temporary breastworks, and giving Federal General Thomas ample time to organize a large army in Nashville.

December 15th, the Federal troops advanced and a severe battle continued till late in the evening. The Confederate troops fell back some three miles, and during the night threw up some breastworks. The enemy advanced near our line and began a furious attack with artillery for several hours, without effect. Finally, a negro brigade commanded by white officers, assaulted the Fourth and other regiments, and we repulsed them with great slaughter. To the eye of the white officers, the negroes were piled up five feet deep. Late in the evening the enemy succeeded in turning the extreme left of the Confederate army, which created a stampede on the entire line. Many of the Fourth regiment were wounded and captured. The writer was captured while on picket duty by cavalry, December 17, 1864, and hauled from Nashville to Johnson Island, Ohio, in box car—recently used by cattle and hogs—very filthy, and was compelled to stand up 48 hours. Arrived at Sandusky City; left the cars and walked across Lake Erie on ice, three miles, to Johnson Island; the weather 28 degrees below zero. There we were relieved of clothing, boots, shoes, money, watches, pocket knives, finger rings, and everything of any value. Our clothing was replaced and we marched to prison pen. It was now late in the evening.

A confederate friend (a prisoner) met me and said he would supply me with cooking articles. The next morning he handed me a small oyster can, saying this was the thing used to prepare our food. I was assigned to block No. 11; room 12 by 30 feet; the number of inmates in this room, thirty or more. My bed was on the floor, with one small blanket as a protection, to keep from freezing during the night. In the middle of this room, was a small old-fashioned wood stove, No. 22. Every morning, from 12 to 15 oyster cans, filled with water, and the allotted daily rations: the balance waiting till first served. I soon discovered the use and value of my oyster can. Our rations for 24 hours consisted of four ounces of pickled pork or side salted bacon, and four ounces of bread. Our method of cooking was to put the pork in the oyster can filled with water, and boil till done, then devour the meat from the bone or bones; and boil till soft sufficient to grind with the teeth. We had more pork rations than bacon. The Federal government adopted these rules and regulations to punish the helpless Confederate prisoners, for the reason that we fought for our rights and stood by our colors, and defended our homes and those near and dear to us.

I remained in this prison for six months. It is impossible to realize the suffering of continued hunger. When Generals Lee and Johnston surrendered, all the prisoners were released and returned to their desolated homes in the South.

My War Record was April 30, 1861, to July 4, 1865. The Georgia Campaign, from Atlanta to Nashville, Tenn., the Confederate Army arrived at Nashville, Tenn., during December, 1864. General J. B. Hood was in command; and doubtless a correct description of the destruction of that army has been published, and I did not include this in my war record.

With my best wishes that the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be pleasant and productive of much good, I am with great respect, DeARMENT, WILSON; letter to his family, undated.

“. . . and cannot do hard work, he was very sick last April, we thought we were going to lose him; the children all had the measles last Spring, and they all took the flux after the measles; the flux set the hardest on Norman; he was very low; at the same time there was a little girl of a neighbor living in the same house with us who died with the same disease. She was not sick so long as Norman but was so much younger and not so able to stand sickness. Norman has never seemed to have much strength since, and I fear he will never be a stout man, but Rolla is hale, hearty, and handsome, and learns well at school. Dolfie is small and delicate but seems well & hearty; he is full of life and mischief. Ernest is healthy and very large for his age; he does not speak plain, and I sometimes think he never will, though he is as smart as any of them and has an excellent memory. I believe I have told you all that will be of interest this time; my own health is quite good; much better than in Penna. When you answer this (which I hope you will do as soon as you get it) tell me all about yourselves; how you are getting along and how many babies you have and all about all the folks in general.

Yours affectionately, from

DAVID FLENNIKEN Revolutionary War Pension No. S10154

Declaration—November 10, 1821, Mecklenburg, North Carolina.

“This day David Flenniken came before me, William Davidson, one of the Justices of the Peace for said County and made oath on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that he is the same person that he represents himself to be, that he has lived in the said County since the year 1764; That he entered the militia service of this state and was out several times previous to the year 1780. That on the fifth day of August 1780, he was under the command of Captain Samuel Flennikin and served as a Lieutenant, that the said company was attached to Major Davies command, that on the said 5th day of August, 1780, an engagement took place between the enemy composed of British and Tories and the American Army at the Hanging Rock in South Carolina; That during that Battle he the said David Flennekin was wounded, that he has been examined according to act of Congress by physicians and their certificate stated the disability at three-fourths; which certificate was forwarded to the Pension office at Fayetteville, N. C. That he was placed on the pension list of North Carolina by act of the Legislature; That he received his pension from the state regularly for some years; That he has been informed he was transferred from the State list; That he so received his pension regularly for many years; That he never had a pension certificate. That he forwarded his papers to the pension office at Fayetteville as usual, and was informed that by state regulation it required a pension certificate from the war office.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 10th day of November 1821.

Knoxville Daily Whig, Wednesday, Dec. 15, 1869.

The funeral obsequies over the remains of A. G. Jackson, Esq., deceased, will take place tomorrow, commencing at the residence of the deceased, at 11 o'clock. Public services will be held at the First Presbyterian Church at half-past one o'clock. The cortege will leave the church for the Cemetery at two o'clock precisely. The funeral services at the church will be conducted by the Rev. G. Taylor. The Presbyterian Church was kindly tendered for the occasion on account of its large capacity. The remains will then be taken charge of by the Masonic brotherhood, and will be buried with Masonic honors. The public are respectfully invited to pay a last tribute to the deceased.

Ibid., Editorial.

We make the painful announcement this morning that Col. Abner G. Jackson, one of our oldest, best and most favorably known citizens, died yesterday afternoon at his residence near Knoxville. Col. Jackson had long been suffering from an injury received in this city, by being thrown from a buggy, and for sometime past no hopes have been entertained of his recovery.

Abner Gates Jackson died at his residence, near this city, on yesterday at twenty minutes past [before] three o'clock. Just three months ago, and one day, he was going to his home, in his buggy, and his horse became frightened, he was thrown violently upon the ground, breaking his back, and otherwise seriously injuring him. From that moment no hopes were entertained of his recovery. His whole system was paralyzed, and his sufferings were intense. He bore them patiently and was comparatively cheerful. A few hours before his death he was asked by a dear friend and relative if he felt resigned to his fate. He replied promptly in the affirmative. Shortly thereafter he passed smoothly and quietly away.

Thus one of nature's noblemen has gone into eternity. Abner Gates Jackson was born a gentleman. He had all the instincts and impulses of a chivalrous manhood. He scorned a mean act. His proud nature stood aghast at everything dishonorable. He was open, frank and positive. He had no disguises. He was not true and false at the same time. His friendships were ardent and devoted, and his dislikes intense and pointed. In his business relations he was always candid and truthful. When, many years ago, he was engaged in the dry goods trade, it was proverbial of him that he would never misrepresent the quality of his goods. In the social circle he was genial, affable and kind. His warm heart made him friends everywhere. His conceptions of the purity and of the exalted worth of woman were truly commendable. He honored her and was ever ready to protect her. He was a strict member of the Methodist E. Church, South, and died, as we believe, a thorough Christian.

WILLIAM JOHNSON of Jasper County, Ga. Last Will and Testament. Jasper County, Ga. Will Book.

In the name of God, Amen—I, William Johnson being weak in body, but of sound mind and calling to mind it is once appointed for all men to die, I do hereby make this my last will and testament.

1st. My will is that all my just debts be paid at my decease.

2nd. I give and bequeath to my beloved wife, Polly O. Johnson, a negro man named Simon, a negro woman named Deja, and a negro woman named Milly, two hundred acres of land including the plantation and house where I now live, and an equal share of household and kitchen furniture viz—one seventh part, four cows and calves and good horse, bridle and saddle to have during her life or widowhood.

3rd. I give to my beloved daughter (Matilda) Johnson twelve hundred dollars and an equal part of the balance of my estate when my youngest child shall become of age.

4th. I give my beloved sons, Benjamin, Brice C., David, and Thomas Johnson, twelve hundred dollars each.

5th. I give to my beloved daughter Sarah Johnson twelve hundred dollars. I give to my sons, Benjamin, Brice C., David and Thomas Johnson one hundred dollars each of the balance of my estate for education.

I give my daughter Sarah Johnson one hundred dollars of balance of my estate for schooling.

I give my sister Annis Tyler her maintenance as long as she may see proper to make my present residence her home.

I give the balance of my estate to be equally divided between my children when the youngest may come of earnful age.

I nominate and appoint my beloved wife Polly O. Johnson executrix to this my last will and testament. I also appoint Nicholas Johnson, William Johnson and John Payne executors and William Traylor—this 2nd day of October 1819. Sealed & signed and delivered in person.

REV. RICHARD SANKEY (c1710-c1789), Prince Edward County, Va.

Bibliography: Presbyterian Historical Society, Belfast, North Ireland. Dr. J. D. Eggleston, Reverend Richard Sankey, an unpublished mss.

Richard Sankey, of Scottish-Irish ancestry, was born in Ireland about 1710, son of Jacob Sankey and Abigail Jacob; and a grandson of Richard Sankey and Mary Taylor of County Limerick. He attended and graduated from Glasgow University. He emigrated to America about 1735 as a missionary minister, and was taken as trial minister by the Donegal Presbytery of Pennsylvania; licensed, October 13, 1736; and ordained and installed as minister at Monada Creek Presbyterian Church, August 15, 1738, where he remained until June 6, 1759.

The Quaker government of Pennsylvania refusing to supply sufficient defense of the western frontiers of the province against the marauding Indians, he left Pennsylvania in 1759 with a large part of his congregation, and settled in Prince Edward County, Virginia, where he became pastor of the Buffaloe Church. He carried with him to Virginia all the church and marriage records of the old Monada Creek Church and they are presumed to have been lost by fire. Reverend Sankey played a prominent role in the Hanover Presbytery of Virginia and in his Synod, and was one of the founders of Hampden-Sydney College in 1775. He remained a member of the Board of Trustees of the college until his death which occurred in Prince Edward County, Virginia, 1789-1790.

He married in Pennsylvania, Sarah Thomson (b. 1718-1720), daughter of Reverend John Thomson.

Samuel Dearmond settled at Port Gibson, Claiborne County, Mississippi on Bayou Pierre together with his cousin, Joseph Flenniken. Joseph died there and his widow remarried Gideon Foster. Samuel Dearmond apparently left there for Louisiana about 1809. His oldest daughter, Jane married at Port Gibson to John J. Wright on December 13, 1806 (marriage bond). They were sued in Claiborne County, Mississippi court in 1809 and had apparently left about that time. The Wrights are known to have lived in Amite County, Mississippi and Jane apparently died there in 1819 the same year as that of her father's death. John Wright died about 1825 leaving two children: Mary Ann Wright, born in 1810 and William G. Wright, born 1812. (See page 44, this is the same William G. Wright who married Mary Ann Dearmond on Sept. 12, 1857, a cousin). After the death of Samuel Dearmond in 1819, his widow, Elizabeth, married Isaac Jackson in Amite County, Mississippi on March 28, 1820. About a year later, again a widow, she married Jesse Talbot on June 28, 1821. In January 1811 John Dearmond and Elizabeth sold land in Feliciana Parish, Louisiana.

Elizabeth Talbot died in Clinton, Louisiana at the residence of Thomas F. Dearmond on October 26, 1826.

Mary Ann Wright married Lewis Hobbs Carpenter about 1828 and had nine children known. She died in 1870. Their names were:

Henry T. Carpenter and Mary Elizabeth Gilmore had eleven children, the fourth and oldest to survive was Celie Carpenter, born June 16, 1879; died November 1, 1962. She married George A. Craig on February 7, 1901. She was his second wife. Their fourth child was Wilma Craig, born November 16, 1906; died March 5, 1979. Wilma married June 2, 1923 Thomas Herbert Montgomery, born December 17, 1904 who is at the age of 81 soon to complete forty-four years of service on the School Board of East Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana. Their children are:

4. Kenneth Craig born November 10, 1937 married May 30, 1958 Elizabeth Mary Coursey.

On page 125, David F. Dearmond (1775-1834). His second daughter, Frances, was born March 4, 1805; died August 20, 1875. She is buried in Christ Cemetery, Bastrop, Morehouse County, Louisiana. She married Benjamin B. Lee and have been traced to Holmes County, Mississippi in 1847 but as yet, has not followed them farther. He does know that Frances and Benjamin Lee had two sons, Samuel H. Lee who married Indiana Hughes in Claiborne County, Mississippi and Francis Lee who married Mary E. Both of these were living in Bolivar County, Mississippi in 1857.

In the records of Madison County, Mississippi, William Dearmond married Elisabeth Allen on July 9, 1840. He believes this to be the brother of Frances Dearmond Lee as William and Elisabeth Dearmond lived in and conducted legal transactions in Holmes County, Mississippi with Benjamin B. Lee and Samuel Lee, Jr., his brother who lived in East Feliciana Parish, Louisiana. Nothing more is known about William Dearmond.

On page 428. Joseph F. Flenniken born Mecklenburg County, North Carolina; died in 1806-1807 in Claiborne County, Mississippi. His widow, Margaret, remarried Gideon Foster, January 10, 1808. There was a probate opened and Gideon Foster was appointed curator of the two sons of Joseph Flenniken: namely James Wallace Flenniken, born December 24, 1801; died November 6, 1851 in Carroll County, Mississippi and Samuel James Flenniken born August 31, 1804. Source, James McElwee Bible.

James Wallace Flenniken married November 30, 1825 in Amite County, Mississippi Martha Hatchell. James was born 1811 in Louisiana; died May 5, 1851 in Carroll County, Mississippi. Martha Hatchell was a daughter of William Hatchell and Mary Lee, his wife. Mary was a daughter of Samuel and Lucada Lee from South Carolina and a sister to the aforesaid Benjamin B. and Samuel Lee, Junior. James W. Flenniken and Martha Hatchell had a daughter, Mary Lavinia Flenniken, born February 22, 1833; died December 2, 1913 in East Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana. She married on January 10, 1855 to Thomas Hugh Montgomery as his second wife. His first wife was Margaret Lee, daughter to Levi Lee another brother to Benjamin, Samuel and Mary Lee. Thomas Hugh Montgomery and Mary Lavinia had a son, Robert Pinkney Montgomery born April 17, 1866; died December 14, 1944 who married on November 9, 1887 Sara Lavenia Starks (born February 24, 1871, died August 1, 1958.) They lived in East Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana and had a son, Thomas Herbert Montgomery, previously named.

Both James Wallace Flenniken and Samuel James Flenniken have numerous descendants in Louisiana.

h. After farming seven years west of Winfield, Iowa, Grover bought a farm in southwest Missouri, twenty-two miles north of Springfield. That venture failed to live up to their expectations. World War I was on and it looked as if the army was going to call Grover, so bills were printed for a public sale. Before the sale could be held, the armistice was signed; however, the sale was held. They moved to Springfield and rented the farm. Grover then enrolled in the local Business College and following that went to work in the Loose Wiles branch Office Cookey and Cracker Co. in Springfield. The next business venture was with the Prudential Insurance Co. The family then moved back up north and after selling insurance awhile longer, Grover quit the insurance business to become manager of the elevator in Olds, Iowa. After about twenty years of managing the elevator, he then went into business for himself hatching and raising turkeys. Following a heart attack in 1948, Grover and Edna began spending summers in Northern Minnesota. As a result, his health improved and remained rather stable until his death.

Supplement to DeARMOND FAMILIES OF AMERICA AND Related Families
 WILLIAM DEARMOND (1795-), Fayette County, Illinois

William Dearmond first appears in public records in the 1830 census for Fayette County, Indiana. ¹ He is listed in the 1850 census for Fayette County, with only two of his family with him. ² Next door lived his son, William, and in the same county were his son, Marshall, and the widow of his son, John.

We are indebted to Dr. Ossie Mae Dill for the family history that the family first lived in Fleming County, Kentucky, removing to Fayette County, Indiana, after 1816. She also declares his wife was Mary Orr and probably the daughter of William Orr. ³ The 1850 census of Fayette County reveals that he was born in Pennsylvania, and we can speculate that he may have followed the Allegheny and Ohio Rivers down first to Kentucky, and later to Indiana.

William's presence in Kentucky draws our attention to the DeArman family [Line M] and William Dermon (p. 390) whose age and children's age make possible the presence of a son born in 1795 who would correspond to our subject. With no more conclusive proof presently available, we are unable to arrive at a definite decision regarding our subject's parentage. Unfortunately for our problem, 'William' was a very popular name in all the early branches of our family.

William DeArmond, Jr., son of William Dearmond and Mary Orr, was born in 1822, and probably in Fayette County, Indiana.

We have no knowledge of him save what appears in the 1850 census. A search of the 1860 census for Fayette county reveals that not one of the family was then living in the county, indicating that all had moved farther west. NORVAL B. DeARMOND (1851-1922), Manhattan, Kansas

Norval B. DeArmond, son of William DeArmond, Jr. was born on April 4, 1851 in Fayette County, Indiana. The family left Fayette County before 1860 and we have no knowledge of our subject's movements until after his marriage.

He took Masonic degrees in the Lincoln (Kansas) Lodge 1154, during 1880, 1881 and 1882 and served as Senior Deacon in 1883; was Secretary from 1885 to 1905.

He transferred to Lafayette Lodge No. 16, Manhattan, Kansas February 3, 1905. The 1885 Lincoln Center, Lincoln County, Kansas census, lists him as a carpenter. ¹

His grandson says he was a mail carrier at one time in the western part of the state. After 1905, he was employed in the heat and power department of the Kansas State College. In his declining years, he was for a short while after 1920, a night watchman for a downtown store in Manhattan. He died April 25, 1922.

A GLIMPSE OF THE PAST

by Snyder Roberts

THE DeARMONDS ON LITTLE EMERY THEIR PLACES IN ROANE HISTORY

Before discussing DeArmond genealogy, it may be in order to point out that the DeArmond family has at least three claims to fame in early Roane County history:

1. According to available documents, John DeArmond, John Hackett, and Joseph O'haver were the first white men to set foot on the present site of Kingston in 1785.

2. According to Capt. W.E. McElwee, James DeArmond was the hero in the Battle of Crab Orchard with the Indians in 1792.

3. One of the most outstanding landmarks in Roane County is beautiful DeArmond's Gap in Waldens Ridge which was named for John and James DeArmond.

JOHN — FIRST ON KINGSTON SITE

In the March 1803 session of the Roane County Court, Attorney Robert Whyte (later State Supreme Court Justice) represented John Hackett in a suit in which "John Hackett humbly showeth that he claimeth two tracts of land, one being in the point of the Tennessee and Clinch Rivers of 240 acres. The other adjoining the above tract upon Clinch River, including the Town of Kingston, containing 300 acres." In order to prove the boundaries of the above tracts, Robert Whyte introduced an affidavit of John DeArmond as follows:

"John DeArmond after being sworn deposeth and sayeth that on the year of 1785, about the first of September, that he was present and saw John Hackett mark an ash tree above the mouth of a spring branch on the bank of Clinch River which was a corner tree of the two tracts of land claimed by the said John Hackett. This deponant further sayeth that he was a chain carrier for the two tracts of land, and with Joseph O'haver who was also a chain carrier."

John Hackett's claim was probably disallowed, or compromised, but the important point is, John DeArmond was on the Kingston site in 1785. (Shelby's troops by-passed Kingston site in 1779.)

BATTLE AT CRAB ORCHARD

Lt. John McClellan took 37 men from Fort South West Point to Crab Orchard on August 13, 1792 where they were ambushed in their camp at the foot of Spencer's Hill by about 100 Indians. Four soldiers were killed, and Lt. McClellan's horse was killed. In the retreat up the hill, the lagging, heavy McClellan became exhausted and was saved only by the heroism of James DeArmond. DeArmond dodged a tomahawk thrown by an Indian, sprang on his horse, and helped in the rear-guard action. When DeArmond came upon the helpless McClellan, he offered his horse which McClellan at first refused to accept, but DeArmond jumped from his horse, and according to Capt. McElwee said, "There is not a damned Indian in the country that can catch me!"

McClellan, saved from almost certain death, mounted his horse, rallied his men, and organized a successful retreat.

DeARMOND'S GAP

The Indians recognized the strategic importance of DeArmond's Gap. The Indian trace on the west side of the Tennessee River leading northeastward from the Chattanooga area passed through DeArmond's Gap, up Little Emery River, into the Cumberlands, and northward to Kentucky. The Indians built a town between the southern entrance to the Gap and Emery River one mile to the south. This was the Indian town burned by Col. Shelby's troops in 1779. Gov. William Blount and John Sevier were familiar with DeArmond's Gap and the alternate route of Emery Road that passed through it. Early settlers used the Gap for passage, as did most of the German-Swiss settlers on their way from Kingston to Wartburg in the 1846-48 period. DeArmond's Gap was the route utilized by a narrow-gauge railway from present Oakdale to the Emery Iron Works at Old Oakdale (now Elverton).

More recently the H. & N.E. Railway used the Gap for its line from Harriman to Petros. The Southern Railway presently passes in front of the Gap, and once had a station there called "DeArmond's Crossing." Today, the four-lane highway from Harriman has a clover-leaf interchange in front of the Gap with highway no. 27 passing through the Gap northward to Wartburg, and highway no. 61 passing eastward along the foot of Walden Ridge to Oliver Springs.

It was on this site in front of DeArmond's Gap, overlooked by the colorful majestic mountains that Territorial Governor William Blount had hoped to build the Tennessee Territorial Capital (instead of Knoxville) on his 5000-acre grant, but the Indians would not cooperate with a favorable treaty.

JOHN DeARMOND GRANT

John DeArmond obtained a North Carolina warrant no. 516 dated April 28, 1780 on which he was issued grant no. 635 dated April 2, 1787 for 200 acres in Greene County (now Roane) on the north fork of Emeries River (now Little Emory) bounded on the south by William Blount's 5000-acre survey for which DeArmond was to pay 50 shillings for each 100 acres. The tract was surveyed by John Hackett in 1787, and recorded by Hackett November 8, 1791; however, the deed was not registered in Roane County until 1816 (Book E, p. 36). In the meantime, John DeArmond sold the 200-acre tract to his son James in 1809 (Book D, p. 220).

John and James were signers of the 1801 petition to form Roane County. James probably settled on the tract after his service with the militia at Fort South West Point. James DeArmond and his son John entered additional land to the north which was underlain with coal. In 1880, John DeArmond was paying taxes in Roane on valuable tracts of 556 acres and 111 acres. It was at his home the German-Swiss settlers stopped while on their way to Wartburg.

JAMES DeARMOND

James DeArmond was born July 3, 1771 in Mechenburg County, North Carolina; the son of John and Esther Flenniken DeArmond. James died March 1, 1831 and is buried in the DeArmond family cemetery near the old homeplace. James married (1802 in Roane) Susan Shadden (1786 Va.-1869 in Roane). James and Susan had the following children:

1. Esther (1803-) married (1827) Robert S. Brashears, son of Bazzel Brashears. Robert and Esther were among the founders of Bradley County, Tennessee, and the city of Cleveland. He died in 1854, and she returned to Roane with her two children.
2. and 3. Margaret and Mary (twin) were born September 15, 1804. Margaret died unmarried in January 1884, and Mary died unmarried in June 1884.
4. Elizabeth (1806-) married (1836 in Roane) her second cousin, Thomas F. DeArmond of Louisiana.
5. John-see below.
6. Wiley (1810-1878).
7. Grizza (1812-) married (1835 Samuel Jackson DeArmond (1816-1897), a second cousin from Louisiana. S.J. DeArmond owned and operated a large successful business in Kingston for many years. He is buried in Bethel Cemetery at Kingston.

8. Matilda (1814-) married (1842) James G. DeArmond, a second cousin from Louisiana.

9. Isabel (1816-).

10. Drucilla (1818-1851) married Paul C. Frost (1823-) who was the son of the famous East Tennessee pioneer Baptist Preacher, the Rev. Joshua Frost. Drucilla is buried in the Peoples Cemetery near Claxton School in Anderson County.

11. Calhoun (1820-) unmarried.

12. Mahala (1822-) married (1866) William B. Nichols.

13. Eliza Jane (1824-) married (1854) Owen W. Flucker of La.

14. James (1826-) died in infancy.

15. Susan Ann (1829-) married (1849) James G. DeArmond, widower of her sister Matilda.

16. Andrew Jackson (1830-).

JOHN DeARMOND

John DeArmond (1808-1896), the son of James, married (1860) Caledonia Bowers who was the daughter of a Methodist Minister. She is entitled to a special line in history because her name tops the list for the longest full name in all records for Roane County. In the Roane 1850 census, her name is shown as "Veronica A.C.N.F.Z.M.C." Marilyn McCluen's woman's curiosity spurred her on to learn the full name, and this is what she learned "Veronica Adelonica Caledonia Nitrocraos Flozaedar Mandozia Corinthus." The father may have been a Greek and Spanish scholar. John and Caledonia lived their lives at the old DeArmond homeplace, and are buried in the family cemetery. Their children were:

1. Annie Laurie married B.A. Tedder, - four children, 2. Susan H. married Charles B. Robinson, - four children, 3. John married Laura Watson, - three children, 4. Lewis married Elizabeth Bailey, 5. Fred married Verne Oliver, - four children, 6. James, 7. Richard married Eugenia Graves, - two children, 8. Lula married John Chandler, - two children, 9. Margaret.
